The question, however, arises, whether the disciples' editorial work has not changed the perspective of the book in one important respect. As the text stands, Ezekiel's whole ministry is among the exiles in Babylon between 593 and 571, the first and last dates indicated, 1:2 and 29:17. In these circumstances, it is surprising that the oracles of the first section seem to be addressed to people living in Jerusalem, and that Ezekiel at times gives the impression that he is actually present in the capital, cf. especially 11:13. Hence the recent hypothesis of a twofold ministry: Ezekiel remaining in Palestine and preaching there until the fall of Jerusalem in 587 and only joining the Babylonian exiles after this event. The vision of the scroll in 2:1-3:9 would indicate the prophet's divine vocation in Palestine, and that of the chariot, 1:4-28 and 3:10-15, would indicate his arrival among the exiles. The transfer of this vision of the chariot to the beginning of the book from its third section has thus, it is maintained, altered the whole focus. This hypothesis helps to solve some difficulties but creates others. It demands substantial rearrangements of text; it has to be postulated that even during his 'Palestinian' ministry Ezekiel usually lived outside Jerusalem, since he is 'transported' thither in 8:3; finally, it would be odd for neither Ezekiel nor Jeremiah to refer to each other's activity if they were preaching together in the capital. Moreover, the objections against the older view are not unanswerable; reproaches addressed to the people of Jerusalem were useful lessons for the exiles; and as far as Ezekiel's apparent presence in Jerusalem is concerned, he was transported thither, 'in visions' as the text expressly says,

8:3, and thence 'in vision' brought back, 11:24. The not unattractive hypothesis of a twofold ministry remains, therefore, uncertain.

In either case, the same imposing figure emerges from the book. Ezekiel was a priest, 1:3. The Temple was his ruling interest; whether the Temple of the present defiled by impure rites, ch. 8, and deserted by the glory of Yahweh, ch. 10, or the Temple of the future, the plan of which he describes in meticulous detail, ch. 40-42, and to which he sees God returning, ch. 43. For those days to come, he defines the function of the Temple ministers, the details of public worship, the sacred calendar, ch. 44-46. He holds the Law in veneration, and the accusation of 'profaning the sabbaths' is the constant refrain of his indictment of Israel, ch. 20. He detests legal impurity, 4:14; 44:7, and is scrupulous in distinguishing the sacred from the profane, 45:1-6; 48:9f. As a priest he was responsible for deciding cases of law and morals, hence the casuistic tendency of his teaching, ch. 18. His outlook and vocabulary are akin to the Law of Holiness in Lv 17-26; this he knew and meditated, but he goes beyond it and paves the way for the final codification of the Pentateuch. His work belongs to the 'priestly' tradition just as that of Jeremiah belongs to the 'deuteronomic'.

But this priest is also a prophet of action. More than any other he resorts to symbolic gestures. He mimes the siege of Jerusalem, 4:1-5:4, the departure of the exiles, 12:1-7, the king of Babylon at the parting of the ways, 21:23f, the union of Judah and Israel, 37:15f. Even in his own personal trials sent him by God he is a 'sign' to Israel, 24:24, as Hosea and Isaiah and Jeremiah had been. The elaborateness of his symbolic actions is in marked contrast to the simplicity of those of his predecessors.

Ezekiel is primarily a visionary. His book contains only four formal visions but these occupy a substantial part of it: ch. 1-3; 8-11; 37; 40-48. They admit us to a fantastic world: the four living creatures of Yahweh's chariot, the monstrous performance of worship in the Temple with its swarms of beasts and of idols, the dry bones that come to life, the blueprint of a future temple from which an imaginary river flows through a geographic Utopia. This lively imagination he also applied to his allegories: Oholah and Oholibah, ch. 23; the Shipwreck of Tyre, ch. 27; Pharaoh the Crocodile, ch. 29 and 32; the Giant Tree, ch. 31; the Descent into Hell, ch. 32.

In contrast to this gift of pictorial imagination, and possibly as the price paid for it (as though the eye had robbed the tongue of power), Ezekiel's style is monotonous and without colour, frigid, feeble, astonishingly poor when compared with the classics of prophecy: the strong simplicity of Isaiah and the compelling warmth of Jeremiah. The art of Ezekiel excels by its evocation of size and depth, projecting an atmosphere of awe before the mysteries of God.

Ezekiel therefore, though having much in common with his predecessors, breaks new ground. This is also true of his doctrine. He makes no appeal to the past history of his people. Recalls to the promises made to the patriarchs and to the Sinaitic covenant occur occasionally, but even if God has so far preserved a nation that was defiled from birth, 16:3f, this is not to fulfil the promises but to vindicate the honour of his name, ch. 20. Similarly, the substitution of an everlasting covenant for the old one, 16:60; 37:26f, is not described as a reward for the people's 'return' to God but rather as an act of pure benevolence, what theologians call prevenient grace; it is after this, not before, that repentance comes, 16:62-63. The Messiah of Ezekiel, of whom little is said, is no longer a glorious king; true, he is to be a new David, but as 'shepherd' of his people, 34:23; 37:24, a 'ruler' rather than a king, 34:24; for such a king would be out of place in Ezekiel's vision of a future where God is king, 45:7f. The prophet also breaks with tradition when he asserts the principle of individual and not collective retribution, ch. 18; cf. 33. This theological solution to the problem of sin will prove to be a temporary one, and will yield eventually to the pressure of facts and gradually lead to the idea of retribution in another world. Ezekiel breaks too, as Jeremiah does, with the tradition that God is inseparable from his Temple—this despite Ezekiel's own priesthood and affection for the sanctuary. Priest and prophet, often divided in Israel, are united in him; ritual remains, but derives its value from the dispositions of the participants. Ezekiel's entire teaching centres on inner conversion: men must achieve a new heart and a new spirit, 18:31, or rather God will himself bestow 'another', a 'new' heart, and infuse a 'new' spirit, 11:19; 36:26. Here, as with the free divine gift that precedes repentance, we are very near to the theology of grace later developed by St John and St Paul.

The elements of Israelite religion are thus all raised to a high spiritual level; this is Ezekiel's great contribution. He is called 'the father of Judaism', often only with reference to his separation of sacred from profane, to his concern for legal purity and for ritual detail, which anticipates Pharisaism. This is quite unjust. Like Jeremiah, yet in his own way, Ezekiel initiates a tradition of unworldly spirituality persisting through Judaism and emerging in the New Testament. Jesus is the Good Shepherd foretold by Ezekiel, and the founder of the worship 'in spirit' that Ezekiel had preached.

Ezekiel, in another mood, stands at the source of the apocalyptic tradition. His elaborate visions prepare us for those of Daniel, and it is not surprising that his influence is so often perceptible in the Book of Revelation.

Daniel

In subject-matter the Book of Daniel falls into two parts. Ch. 1-6 are narratives: Daniel and his three companions in the service of Nebuchadnezzar, 1; Nebuchadnezzar's dream of the composite statue, 2; adoration of the golden effigy, and Daniel's three friends in the furnace, 3; Nebuchadnezzar's madness, 4; Belshazzar's banquet, 5; Daniel in the lions' den, 6. From all these trials, in which the reputation and even the life of Daniel or of his companions is at stake, they emerge victorious and the pagans give glory to the God who has saved them. The action takes place in Babylon in the reigns of Nebuchadnezzar, of his 'son' Belshazzar, and of 'Darius the Mede', Belshazzar's successor. Ch. 7-12 are visions granted to Daniel: the Four Beasts, 7; the Goat and the Ram, 8; the Seventy Weeks, 9; the great vision of the Time of Wrath and of the End, 10-12. They are assigned to the reigns of Belshazzar, Darius the Mede and Cyrus king of Persia, and located in Babylonia.

From the existence of these two sections some have deduced two distinct documents of different periods combined by an editor. But there are other indications which are against such a distinction. The narratives are indeed in the third person, while the visions are described by Daniel himself; but the first vision, ch. 7, has its introduction and conclusion in the third person. The beginning of the book is in Hebrew but in 2:4 there is a sudden change to Aramaic which continues to the end of ch. 7 and so into the vision section;

the remaining chapters are in Hebrew. Many explanations of this duality of language have been offered, none satisfactory. There is no correspondence, therefore, between the division established by subject-matter (narratives, visions) and the division on the ground of style (first and third person) or of language (Hebrew, Aramaic). On the other hand ch. 7 has its commentary in ch. 8, but is parallel to ch. 2; its Aramaic is indeed the same as in 2-4, but certain of its stylistic characteristics recur in 8-12, though these chapters are in Hebrew. This ch. 7, therefore, links the book's two sections and proves that it is in fact an integral composition. Also, Belshazzar and Darius the Mede both appear in each section of the book, so the historical problem is present as much in one section as in the other. Lastly, the literary devices and habits of thought are consistent throughout the book, which is the strongest argument for its unity.

The date of composition is decided by clear evidence given in ch. 11. The wars between the Seleucids and Ptolemies and a portion of the reign of Antiochus Epiphanes are described with a wealth of detail quite unnecessary for the author's purpose. This account bears no resemblance to any of the Old Testament prophecies and, despite its prophetic style, refers to events already past. But from 11:40 onwards the tone changes and the 'Time of the End' is foretold in a way that is reminiscent of the other prophets. The book must therefore have been written during the persecution under Antiochus Epiphanes and before his death, even before the success of the Maccabaeen revolt; that is to say between 167 and 164.

There is nothing in the rest of the book to contradict this dating. The narratives of the first section are set in the Chaldaean period, but there are indications that the author is writing a short time after the events. Belshazzar was the son of Nabonid and not, as the book says, of Nebuchadnezzar; nor was he ever king. Darius the Mede is unknown to historians, nor is there room for him between the last Chaldaean king and Cyrus the Persian who had already conquered the Medes. The neo-Babylonian background is described in words of Persian origin; the instruments in Nebuchadnezzar's orchestra are given names transliterated from the Greek. The dates given in the book agree neither among themselves nor with history as we know it, and they seem to have been placed at the chapter heads without much care for chronology. It seems therefore that ancient traditions, the extent of which is hard to determine, have provided the material for a much later work.

The late composition of the book explains its position in the Hebrew Bible. It was admitted after the canon of the Prophets had already been fixed, and placed between Esther and Ezra among the varied group of 'other writings' forming the last section of the Hebrew canon. The Greek and Latin Bibles put it among the Prophets and add certain deuterocanonical sections, namely, the Psalm of Azariah and the Canticle of the Three Youths, 3:24-90; the story of Susanna illustrating the shrewdness of the young Daniel, ch. 13; and the stories of Bel and the sacred serpent, which are satires on idolatry, ch. 14.

The aim of this book was to sustain faith and hope among the Jews persecuted by Antiochus Epiphanes. Daniel and his companions had been similarly tempted: to desert the Law, ch. 1, and to commit idolatry, ch. 3 and 6. From these trials they emerged victorious, and the persecutors were forced to acknowledge the power of the true God. The contemporary persecutor is painted in darker colours, but when the wrath of God is satisfied, 8:19; 11:36, the time of the end will come, 8:17; 11:40, when the persecutor will be destroyed, 8:25; 11:45. This will mean the end of sorrows and of sin and the coming of the kingdom of the saints, ruled over by a 'Son of Man' whose reign will endure for ever, ch. 7.

This expectation of the end, this hope of the kingdom, runs through the whole book, 2:44; 3:33 (100); 4:31; 7:14. God will bring it to fulfilment after a lapse of time fixed by him, but long enough to embrace the whole of human history. The various stages of the world's history become stages in the operation of God's eternal purpose, so that these world-stages, past, present, future, themselves become prophetic of a further future since all are contemplated through the eyes of God 'who controls times and seasons', 2:21. By this double vision, at once in time and transcending time, the author reveals the prophetic significance of history. The secret of God, 2:18, etc.; 4:6, is revealed by mysterious intermediaries who are the messengers and agents of the Most High. The doctrine of angels is asserted in the Book of Daniel, as in Ezekiel and particularly in Tobit. The revelation concerns the hidden plan of God for his people and for the nations. It concerns both peoples and individuals. An important passage on the resurrection proclaims the rising of the dead either to eternal life or to eternal punishment, 12:2. The expected kingdom will include all nations, 7:14, and will have no end; it will be a kingdom of saints, 7:18, the kingdom of God, 3:33 (100); 4:31, the kingdom of the Son of Man to whom all power is given, 7:14.

This is the last expression of messianic prophecy in the Old Testament. The coming of the kingdom will be the central theme of the Synoptic Gospels, and Jesus, king of the kingdom, will call himself 'Son of Man', thus clearly asserting that he has come to fulfil the prophecies of the Book of Daniel.

This 'sealed book', 12:4, with its revelation of a divine secret, its angelic commentators, its message for generations to come, its deliberately enigmatic style, is the first mature apocalypse, a literary form found already developing in Ezekiel and later to flower in Jewish literature. The New Testament counterpart to the Book of Daniel is the Book of Revelation, but in this the seals of the closed book are broken, Rv 5-6, its words are secret no longer since 'the time is at hand', Rv 22:10, and the coming of the Lord is expected, Rv 22:20; 1 Co 16:22.

The Twelve Minor Prophets

The last book in the Hebrew canon of the Prophets is simply called 'The Twelve', being a collection of twelve short books attributed to different prophets. Its title in the Greek Bible is 'Dodekapropheton'. The Church knows it as 'The Minor Prophets', not because the collection is of less importance than the 'major' prophets but because the books are shorter. These books already formed a collection when Ecclesiasticus was being written, Si 49:10. The Hebrew Bible, followed by the Vulgate, arranges these short books in the historical order assigned to them by tradition. The order is somewhat different in the Greek Bible which, moreover, places them before the major prophets.

In this edition the books will be found in the traditional order observed by the Vulgate (and the Hebrew), but in this Introduction they will be treated in what is most probably their true historical order.

Amos

Amos was a shepherd of Tekoa on the edge of the desert of Judah, 1:1; belonging to no prophetic confraternity, he was divinely called from his flock and sent to prophesy to Israel, 7:14. After a brief ministry mainly, perhaps exclusively, concerned with the schismatic shrine at Bethel, 7:10f, he was expelled from Israel and returned to his former occupation.

He preached under Jeroboam II, 783-743, by material standards a glorious reign during which the Northern Kingdom expanded and grew wealthy, but during which the rich exploited the poor, and fine liturgical show disguised the lack of sound religion. A true son of the desert, rough, direct, proud, rich in the images natural to the desert dwellers, Amos in the name of God condemned corrupt city life, social injustice, the deceitful consolations of insincere ceremonial, 5:21-22. Yahweh, sovereign lord of all the world, punisher of nations, ch. 1-2, would severely punish Israel, who, being chosen by God, should practise a morality stricter than that of others, 3:2. The 'day of Yahweh' (the phrase occurs here for the first time in the Bible) will be one of darkness and not light, 5:18f; to wreak his dreadful vengeance, 6:8f, God summons a nation, 6:14, Assyria, which, though not named, is always in the prophet's mind. Yet Amos kindles a spark of hope; he looks forward to the salvation of those who stay faithful, the 'remnant' of Joseph, 5:15 (the first use of this expression by a prophet). This profound doctrine of God, all-powerful and universal lord, defender of justice, is formulated without the slightest hesitation; the prophet never once gives the impression of innovating: his preaching is merely a reminder, a sharp one, of the demands of pure Yahwism.

The book has reached us in some disorder; the prose narrative, 7:10-17, in particular, separating two visions, would be better placed at the end of the oracles. Certain short passages leave us in doubt about their authorship. The doxologies, 4:13; 5:8-9; 9:5-6, may have been added for liturgical recitation. The brief oracle on Judah, 2:4-5, is possibly from a different author. Further doubts have been raised by 9:8b-10 and especially by 9:11-15. There are no solid grounds for suspecting the former, but it is possible that 9:11-15 are an addition. No argument should be based on the promises of salvation which the latter passage contains, since from early times such promises had always been features of the prophets' preaching, cf. Amos in 5:15 and his contemporary Hosea. But the references to the collapsing (or already ruined) hut of David, to vengeance on Edom, and to a reinstatement or return of Israel, seem to indicate a later period, either after the Assyrian victories of 734-732, or after the fall of Jerusalem.

Hosea

Hosea, a native of the Northern Kingdom, was a contemporary of Amos, since his ministry began under Jeroboam II, though it continued through the reigns of his successors; Hosea may even have lived to see the fall of Samaria in 721. It was a sombre period for Israel with the victorious advance of Assyria, 734-732, internal rebellions (four kings assassinated in fifteen years), religious and moral corruption.

Of Hosea's life during those turbulent times we know nothing beyond his own domestic troubles, ch. 1-3, but these were to condition his ministry as a prophet. The interpretation of these opening chapters is much disputed, but the following seems most probable: Hosea has married a wife whom he loves but who deserts him; his love remains however, and, having put her to the test, he takes her back. The prophet's sad experience becomes a symbol of Yahweh's dealings with his people. Ch. 2 draws the moral and at the same time provides the key to the whole book. Israel, the bride of God, has become a faithless harlot, has aroused the anger and jealousy of her divine husband. God's love remains; he will punish her, but only to bring her back and restore her to the joys of their first love.

For the first time, God's relationship with Israel is described in terms of marriage, a figure most boldly chosen and passionately expressed by a prophet at once affectionate and fiery. The underlying theme of all his preaching is divine love misunderstood by the people on whom it is lavished. Once the few golden days in the wilderness were over, Israel played false to her loving God. Hosea indicts the ruling classes most sternly. The kings, chosen in defiance of God's will, have toyed with human policies, degrading God's chosen people to the level of the other nations. The priests, ignorant and avaricious, are leading the people to their ruin. Like Amos, Hosea attacks injustice and violence, but he is more insistent on the evils of apostasy. The worship of Yahweh at Bethel is idolatrous worship; Yahweh is coupled with Baal and Astarte in the licentious rites of the high places. Now Yahweh is a jealous God, demanding an undivided heart: 'What I want is love, not sacrifice; knowledge of God, not holocausts', 6:6. Punishment is therefore sure to come; yet God punishes only to save. Israel stripped and shamed will come to remember the days of her faithfulness; Yahweh will welcome his repentant people back; happiness and peace will return.

For some time scholars tried to remove from Hosea all prophecies of happiness and all that concerned Judah. More sober conclusions are being urged today. Hosea's message would be completely distorted were he to be represented as a prophet only of disaster, while his allusions to Judah, if not required by the context, are quite understandable if Hosea continued to preach after the fall of Samaria. This, however, does not exclude the possibility of brief additions, e.g. 1:7; 2:1-3; 14:10.

The Book of Hosea has had a profound influence on the Old Testament; there are echoes of Hosea in the exhortations of later prophets to a religion of the heart, with God's love as its motive force. It is not surprising that the New Testament quotes Hosea or, not infrequently, imitates him. The wedding imagery of God's love for his people is taken up by Jeremiah, Ezekiel, the second part of Isaiah and the Song of Songs. The New Testament and the early Christian community apply it to the union between Christ and his Church. Christian mysticism has extended the application to the individual soul.

Micah

The prophet Micah (not to be confused with Micaiah ben Imlah who lived in the reign of Ahab, 1 K 22) was a Judaeon, a native of Moresheth to the west of Hebron. He exercised his ministry under kings Jotham, Ahaz and Hezekiah, that is to say, before and after the fall of Samaria in 721. He was therefore a contemporary of Hosea and for a longer period of Isaiah. Being of peasant extraction he has much in common with Amos: suspicion of city life, concrete and at times coarse expression, a taste for swift strokes of imagery and for play on words.

The book falls into four parts, threat alternating with promise: 1:2-3:12, arraignment of Israel; 4:1-5:14, promises to Zion; 6:1-7:7, Israel arraigned for the second time; 7:8-20, hopes. The contrast between the promises to Zion and the threats that precede and follow is altogether too violent, and this symmetrical arrangement must be due to editorial work. It is hard to determine the extent of this editorial adjustment, performed by those who cherished the prophet's memory. Scholars are agreed that 7:8-20 clearly belongs to the period of return from exile. To this period also are best assigned the oracle of 2:12-13, out of place among the threats, and the prophecies of 4:6-7; 5:6-7. But 4:1-5 is found almost identically in Is 2:2-5 and in neither context does it seem original. These possible additions, however, do not justify the excision of all promises for the future from the authentic message of Micah. They are a recurrent theme of all prophetic preaching, and the promises of Micah are in harmony with the hopes expressed by his contemporary, Isaiah.

Of the life of Micah and the circumstances of his call we know nothing. He was, however, keenly aware that God had called him to the office of prophet, and this makes him fearless in prophesying disaster, as the false prophets are not, 2:6-11; 3:5-8. He is the bearer of God's message, which is at first a message of condemnation. Yahweh tries his people, 1:2; 6:1f, and finds them guilty; their religion and above all their morals are corrupt. Micah scourges the moneyed capitalist, the inexorable usurer, the swindling tradesman, families divided by rivalry, avaricious priests and prophets, tyrants, venal judges. These are the very antithesis of the divine ideal: 'to deal justly, to love tenderly, to walk humbly with God', 6:8, an admirable formula summing up the spiritual demands of the prophets, and most particularly Hosea. God has decreed punishment: he will come to judge and to punish his people in a world upheaval, 1:3-4; Samaria will be destroyed, 1:6-7, and the towns of the lowlands where Micah lives, 1:8-15; even Jerusalem, will be a heap of ruins, 3:12.

But the prophet is not without hope, 7:7. This is affirmed in ch. 4-5 where the messianic doctrine of the remnant is developed, 4:7; 5:2, a doctrine touched on by Amos; these chapters foretell the birth in Bethlehem of a peaceful king who will pasture the flock of Yahweh, 5:1-5.

The influence of Micah was persistent; the contemporaries of Jeremiah knew and quoted one of his oracles against Jerusalem, Jr 26:18. The New Testament particularly seizes on Micah's text concerning the birth of the Messiah in Bethlehem Ephrathah, Mt 2:6; Jn 7:42.

Zephaniah

According to the title of this short book, the prophet Zephaniah worked in the reign of Josiah, 640-609. His attacks on alien manners, 1:8, and on the worship of false gods, 1:4-5, his rebuke of court officials, 1:8, his silence about the king, all point to a period before the religious reform, during the minority of Josiah, between 640 and 630, thus immediately before the beginning of the ministry of Jeremiah. Judah, robbed of part of its territory by Sennacherib, has experienced Assyrian rule, and the wicked reigns of Manasseh and Amon have favoured religious disorders. The increasing weakness of Assyria now raises hopes of national recovery accompanied by religious reform.

The book falls into four short sections: the day of Yahweh, 1:2-2:3; oracles against the nations 2:4-15; against Jerusalem, 3:1-8; promises, 3:9-20. Unjustifiable attempts have been made to exclude certain oracles against the nations and all the promises of the fourth section. Suffice it to admit that the prophecies of pagan conversion, 2:11 and 3:9-10, alien to the context, seem to be inspired by the Book of Consolation, Is 40-55, and that the concluding verses, 3:18b-20, are best understood against the background of the Exile.

The message of Zephaniah is, in brief, a prophecy of the day of Yahweh (see Amos), of a catastrophe affecting not only Judah but also the nations. Judah is condemned for religious and moral corruption springing from pride and rebelliousness, 3:1,11. Zephaniah has a deep appreciation of sin (an anticipation of Jeremiah); it is an offence against the person of the living God. The punishing of the nations should serve as a warning, 3:7, to reduce God's people to obedience and humility, 2:3; salvation is promised to only a humble and submissive 'remnant', 3:12-13. This is as far as the messianism of Zephaniah goes, but it is enough to reveal the spiritual nature of the promises he makes.

The short book of Zephaniah has had a restricted influence and is only once used in the New Testament, Mt 13:41. But the description of the day of Yahweh, 1:14-18, inspired the description by Joel, and, in the Middle Ages, the opening words of the Dies Irae.

Nahum

The Book of Nahum opens with a psalm on the wrath of Yahweh against the wicked and with short prophetic passages contrasting the punishment of Assyria with the salvation of Judah, 1:2-2:3. But its main theme, stated in the heading of the book, is the destruction of Nineveh, which Nahum foretells and describes with a power that reveals him as one of the great poets of Israel, 2:4-3:19. There is no reason to deny his authorship to the opening psalm and oracles, which form an excellent prologue to this terrifying picture. The prophecy is dated shortly before the capture of Nineveh in 612.

The book pulsates with the hatred of Israel against the people of Assyria, the traditional enemy, and also with the hopes that the fall of Assyria arouses. But through this violent nationalism, where there is no anticipation of the gospel whatever, or even of the worldwide outlook of the second part of Isaiah, run the ideals of justice and faith; the fall of Nineveh is a judgement of God, who punishes those who oppose his holy purpose, 1:11; 2:1, the oppressors of Israel, 1:12-13, and of all the nations, 3:1-7.

The Book of Nahum must have raised the human hopes of Israel in 612, but the joy was short-lived: the fall of Jerusalem followed close on the fall of Nineveh. After this, the scope of the message grows wider and deeper; Is 52:7 borrows the image of Na 2:1 to apply it to a universal and more spiritual salvation.

Habakkuk

The short Book of Habakkuk is very carefully constructed. It opens with a dialogue between the prophet and his God; twice the prophet complains, twice the divine oracle answers, 1:2-2:4. The second oracle calls down five curses on the wicked oppressor, 2:5-20. Next, in a psalm, the prophet celebrates the final triumph of God, ch. 3. The authorship of this last chapter has been disputed, but without it the composition would lose its symmetry. The musical instructions that precede, punctuate and follow the psalm merely prove that it was used liturgically. That the whole book was so used is doubtful; the liturgical quality of its style was probably more imitative than functional.

The historical context of the prophecy and the identification of the oppressor are both doubtful. The Assyrians, the Chaldaeans, and even Jehoiakim, king of Judah, have been suggested. It seems most likely that the book refers throughout to the Chaldaeans, named in 1:6. God has made use of them to punish his people but they in their turn will be punished for their excessive cruelty, since Yahweh is on the march to save his people; the prophet awaits this intervention with an anxiety that finally gives way to joy. If this interpretation is correct, the book should be dated between the battle of Carchemish in 605 (which made Nebuchadnezzar master of the Middle East) and the first siege of Jerusalem in 597. Thus Habakkuk would be very little later than Nahum and, like him, a contemporary of Jeremiah.

Habakkuk sounds a note new to the teaching of the prophets; he has the temerity to demand an account from God of his ordering of the world. Judah indeed has sinned, but why should a God of holiness, 1:12, with eyes too pure to look at evil, 1:13, choose the savage Chaldaeans to wreak his vengeance? Why must the bad be punished by the worse? Why should he appear to strengthen the arm of injustice? This is the problem of evil posed at international level and Habakkuk's dismay is felt by many people today. To them as to him comes the divine answer: by paradoxical ways almighty God prepares the final triumph of justice; trusting in God, the virtuous man's life will be secure, cf. 2:4, a precious maxim of Habakkuk's which St Paul will later incorporate into his teaching on faith, Rm 1:17; Ga 3:11; Heb 10:38.

Haggai

The last, the post-exilic, period of prophecy opens with Haggai. The change is striking. Before the Exile the watchword of the prophets was Punishment. During the Exile it became Consolation. Now it is Restoration. Haggai appears at a critical moment in the development of Judaism; the birth of the new Palestinian community. His short exhortations are precisely dated, August and September of 520. The first Jews to return from Babylonia to rebuild the Temple were quickly discouraged. The prophets Haggai and Zechariah stirred them to new efforts and urged Zerubbabel the governor and the High Priest Joshua to resume work on the Temple; this was done in September, 520, 1:15; cf. Ezr 5:1.

The four brief discourses composing this book are entirely concerned with this. Since the Temple is still in ruins Yahweh has destroyed the harvests; its rebuilding will usher in an age of prosperity. However unimposing, this new Temple will dim the glory of the old; and power is promised to Zerubbabel, the chosen of God. This Temple, therefore, and this descendant of David become the focus of a messianic hope that will be more clearly expressed in Zechariah.

Zechariah

The Book of Zechariah consists of two distinct parts: ch. 1-8; 9-14. The introduction is dated October-November, 520, two months after the first prophecy of Haggai. The body of the first part of the book contains eight of the prophet's visions beginning in February, 519, 1:7-6:8; these are followed by the symbolic crowning of Zerubbabel, 6:9-14. (The scribes later substituted the name of the High Priest Joshua at a time when political power lay with the priesthood.) Ch. 7 is a brief survey of the history of Israel, while ch. 8 looks forward to the messianic age; both originate from the question of the Fast, proposed in November, 518.

There is no doubt about the authorship of this amply dated and homogeneous section. Like Haggai, Zechariah was preoccupied with the rebuilding of the Temple but, more than Haggai, with the national restoration and the irreproachable moral conduct it required. This restoration is expected to inaugurate a messianic era in which the priesthood, represented by Joshua, will be held in increasing honour, 3:1-7, but the sovereign power will be wielded by the 'Branch', 3:8, a messianic title which 6:12 applies to Zerubbabel. The two Anointed Ones, 4:14, will rule in perfect harmony, 6:13. In this way Zechariah revives the royal messianism of earlier days but combines it with the priestly interests of Ezekiel, whose influence is discernible in many other ways such as the prominent part played by visions, the apocalyptic approach, the concern for purity. These, and the intervention of angels, anticipate the Book of Daniel.

The second part, ch. 9-14, which, moreover, has a new heading, 9:1, is entirely different. Its sections are without date or name. We hear no more of Zechariah, of Joshua, of Zerubbabel or of the building of the Temple. The style is less original and use is frequently made of earlier books, particularly of Dt, Ezk, and Jb. The historical background changes too; Assyria and Egypt appear as names symbolic of all oppressors, but so also do the sons of Javan, that is to say the Greeks, 9:13. This part of the book cannot have taken final form before the conquest of Alexander; it dates from the last decades of the 4th century. It is a disorderly collection of possibly ancient passages with paragraphs on the 'shepherds' of the people, notably 10:2-3; 11:4-14; 13:7-9, and an apocalypse on the Jerusalem of the latter days, ch. 12 and 14.

This part of the book is of particular interest for messianic teaching which, however, is not presented systematically: the recovery of the House of David, ch. 12 passim, the expectation of a humble and gentle Messiah, 9:9-10, but also an obscure prophecy about someone who is 'pierced', 12:10; and an armed theocracy, 10:3-11:3, which nevertheless is a liturgical community as in Ezekiel. These elements are reconciled in the person of Christ and the New Testament often quotes these chapters of Zechariah or at least alludes to them, Mt 21:4-5; 27:9 (combined with Jeremiah); 26:31 = Mk 14:27; Jn 19:37.

Malachi

This book is probably anonymous, since 'Malachi' means 'my messenger' and seems to have been taken from 3:1. It is composed of six passages similar in construction: Yahweh, or his prophet, makes a statement; this is disputed by priests or people, then developed in a discourse in which threat and promise of salvation appear side by side. There are two main themes: the failures of priests, 1:6-2:9, and of people, 3:6-12, in their religious duties; the scandal of mixed marriage and divorce, 2:10-16. The prophet foretells the day of Yahweh which will purify the priesthood, consume the wicked, and secure the triumph of the virtuous, 3:1-5, 13-21. Vv. 22-23 of ch. 3 are an addition.

The contents of this book make it possible to date it; it is later than the renewal of worship in the new Temple, 516, and before the prohibition of mixed marriage under Nehemiah, 445, probably fairly near this second date. The enthusiasm aroused by Haggai and Zechariah has subsided, and the community is content to drift. In tones that recall Deuteronomy and also Ezekiel, the prophet cries that God is not to be deceived but demands sincere religion and purity. The prophet expects the advent of the angel of the covenant heralded by a mysterious messenger, 3:1, in whom Mt 11:10, (cf. Lk 7:27 and Mk 1:2) sees John the Baptist, the precursor. In this messianic era the moral order will be restored, 3:5, as also true religion, 3:4, culminating in a perfect sacrifice offered to God by all the nations, 1:11.

Obadiah

This shortest (21 verses) of the prophetic books is full of problems; interpreters dispute its unity, its literary form, its date (some putting it as early as the 9th century B.C., others as late as the Greek period). To add to the difficulty, nearly half the book, vv. 2-10, has a doublet in Jr 49:7-22; that Jeremiah was originally responsible for this passage is, however, disputed, and the two texts as we have them now seem to be independent. It is generally agreed that the prophecy of Obadiah functions on two levels, the one immediate (the punishment of Edom), the other remote (the triumph of Israel on the day of Yahweh). The book has affinities with the maledictions against Edom, current after 587, in Ps 137:7; Lm 4:21-22; Ezk 25:12f; 35:1f; MI 1:2; and Jr 49:7f: the Edomites had taken advantage of the destruction of Jerusalem to invade southern Judah. In 312, Edom was conquered by the Nabataeans. The prophecy of Obadiah is to be placed between these two dates, some time in the 5th century.

This passionate appeal for national vengeance is in sharp contrast to the internationalism of the second part of Isaiah, for instance. But it is also a tribute to the terrible justice and power of Yahweh, and must not be isolated from the whole prophetic movement, of which it represents no more than a fleeting moment and the most old-fashioned approach.

Joel

The Book of Joel falls naturally into two parts. In the first, an invasion of locusts lays Judah waste; this calls for a religious ceremony of lamentation and prayer; to this Yahweh replies by promising the cessation of the plague and the return of prosperity, 1:2-2:27. The second part describes in apocalyptic style the judgement on the nations and the final triumph of Yahweh and of Israel, ch. 3-4. The unity of the two parts is demonstrated by reference to the day of Yahweh, the actual theme of ch. 3-4 but mentioned already in 1:15; 2:1-2, 10-11. As the book stands, the plague of locusts is the sign that heralds the great judgement of God. It may be that this connection between the parts existed in the original text, but it is also possible that ch. 3-4 were added by another inspired author. The two parts are in any case of much the same date, since they suppose the same conditions, those of the post-exilic community, namely, no king, prominence given to public worship, borrowings from earlier prophets, especially Ezekiel and Obadiah who is quoted in 3:5. The book must have been written about 400 B.C.

Joel's contribution is to prophesy the outpouring of the Spirit on all God's people in the messianic age, 3:1-5. This will be fulfilled with the coming of the Spirit on the apostles of Christ, and St Peter quotes the entire passage, Ac 2:16-21; Joel is the prophet of Pentecost. He is also the prophet of penance, and his exhortations to fasting and prayer, either borrowed from the Temple ceremonial or modelled on it, later found a natural place in the Lenten liturgy of the Church.

Jonah

Unlike the other prophetic books, this short work is entirely narrative. It tells the story of a disobedient prophet who first struggles to evade his divine mission and then complains to God that his mission has, against his expectations, been successful. The hero of this droll adventure is a prophet mentioned in 2 K 14:25, who lived in the reign of Jeroboam II. The book, however, does not claim to be his work and certainly cannot be by him. The 'great city' of Nineveh, destroyed in 612, is no more than a distant memory; thought and phrase are borrowed from Jeremiah and Ezekiel; the language of the book is late. All points to a date after the Exile, somewhere in the 4th century. The psalm, 2:3-10, which is of a different literary form, and which has no connection either with the plight of Jonah or with the doctrine of the book, is very probably an interpolation.

This late date is warning enough against any interpretation of the book as history. This is excluded by other arguments as well. There is no trace in Assyrian or biblical documents of a conversion of the king of Nineveh with all his people to the God of Israel. And, though God is indeed master of nature, the successive prodigies here narrated read like a succession of practical jokes played by God on his prophet: the sudden storm, the choice of Jonah by lot, the great fish, the plant growing in a night and withering in an hour; while the whole story is told with undisguised irony quite alien to the writing of history.

The book is intended to amuse and instruct; it is a didactic work, and its doctrine marks one of the peaks of the Old Testament. It rejects a too rigid interpretation of prophecy, asserting that even the most uncompromising of threats is an expression of the merciful will of God, who pardons at the first sign of repentance. Rejecting, too, the narrow racialism into which the post-exilic community was tempted to withdraw, it proclaims an astonishingly broadminded catholicity. All the characters of this story are likeable, the pagan sailors, the king, the populace, even the animals of Nineveh, all except the only Israelite on the stage—and he a prophet! But God is merciful to all, even to rebellious Jonah. The lesson of humility and sincere repentance comes to the Chosen People from their bitterest foes.

We are on the threshold of the gospel. In Mt 12:41 and Lk 11:29-32 Jesus will cite the conversion of the Ninevites as an example of repentance, and Mt 12:40 sees Jonah inside the great fish as a prefiguring of Christ in the tomb. This use of the story of Jonah should not be invoked as a proof of its history. Jesus employs the Old Testament story as Christian preachers use the New Testament parables; the intention is the same: to teach by means of well-known illustrations, without implying any opinion as to the historical reality of the facts.

1 a. This title must have been added as an introduction to the collection of oracles in ch. 1-12. Several of these, however, refer to Samaria and Assyria.

b. This stanza is either an independent passage summarising the habitual theme of Isaiah's earliest preaching, or forms the beginning of the following poem.

c. This poem which, like 6:12, describes a country laid waste and Jerusalem besieged, must be dated to one of the two sieges undergone by the city in the days of Isaiah, either in 701, or more probably 735.

d. In their literal sense these verses speak of a Judah punished for its sins. The liturgy of the Church applies them to the suffering Messiah.

e. 'of Sodom' corr.; 'of aliens' Hebr.

f. Jerusalem.

g. An oracle presumably uttered in the Temple at the beginning of Isaiah's ministry, and before 735, since its conclusion envisages the possibility of escape from punishment for the populace. Like Am 5:21+, Isaiah castigates ritual divorced from morality.

h. Hebr. adds 'and of lambs'.

i. 'festival and solemnity' Greek; 'iniquity and solemnity' Hebr.

j. Of sacrificial victims, but also of innocent men.

k. 'help the oppressed' versions.

l. The sword of the invader.

m. The beginning of this poem is in the qinah (lament) rhythm which has uneven lines (3+2 stresses or 4+3).

n. Cf. v. 26. Isaiah is thinking of the faithful Jerusalem in the days of David and Solomon.

o. 'Zion' Greek.

p. 'in the furnace' corr.

q. For Isaiah, as for Amos, 'integrity' (sidqathah, 'righteousness') is, in its more immediate sense, judicial equity; but it has also the deeper sense of a 'justness' characterising a dispensation in which Yahweh the king grants his subjects some share in his own sanctity, cf. 5:16+.

r. Fresh names conferred on the Jerusalem of the future. A thing's name reveals what it is, cf. Ex 3:14+, or what it is destined to be. The ancient narratives of Israel often related names (of persons or places) to supernatural events: Abraham, Gn 17:5; Isaac, Gn 21:6; Israel, Gn 32:29; Bethel, Gn 28:17, etc. The prophets imitate and develop this device. The names they give to a city (as here, and in Ezk 48:35) or to a person, Ho 1:4,6,9; 2:1-3,25; Is 7:14 (cf. 8:10); 8:1-4; 7:3 (cf. 10:21); 9:5; see also Is 60:14+, are prophetic names: once given, they remain (as a blessing or as a curse), and reveal the person's destiny or rather commit him to it; they constitute a sign, Is 8:18; Zc 3:8, more efficacious even than a symbolic gesture, cf. Introduction to the Prophets and Is 20:4+.

s. One of the rare oracles in which Isaiah attacks pagan practice; possibly he has Samaria in mind.

t. 'you' corr.; 'we' Hebr.

2 a. The beginning of this oracle is found also in Mi but is reminiscent of Is 9:6 and 11:6-9. It expresses the same devotion for Jerusalem, the favoured home of the Word, cf. 2 S 5:9+, but at the same time its perspective goes far beyond the frontiers of Palestine. If Isaiah is the author, the passage belongs to the messianic oracles of ch. 9 and 11.

b. This new title must have been inserted to introduce a small collection of oracles, probably the group of ch. 2-5.

c. The reference, it seems, is not simply to the Mosaic Law and to some oracular instrument like the ancient ephod, 1 S 2:28+, but to an individual, a prophet preaching the doctrine of Yahweh.

d. Yahweh.

e. This oracle, announcing a striking intervention by God, must be dated near the beginning of Isaiah's ministry, between 740 and 736. It seems to refer particularly to Samaria, at that time prosperous.

f. 'of soothsayers' corr. Divination was practised in Palestine, as throughout the East, cf. Ex 22:17; Lv 19:31; 20:27; Dt 18:10-11 and 1 S 28:3,9; Is 8:19.

g. 'by the hand' corr. A gesture of friendship, or else a magic rite: the text is obscure.

h. 'do not forgive them': possibly a gloss.

e. Spoken either at the first or second siege of Jerusalem, in 735 or 701.

4 a. The army has therefore been wiped out or captured. To escape the disgrace of spinsterhood or barrenness the women volunteer to join the harem of the survivors.

b. A poem belonging to the group of messianic oracles in ch. 9 and 11.

c. The 'branch' and the 'fruit of the earth' mean either the Messiah or else the 'remnant' of Israel (see following note), compared to a tree springing up again in Palestinian soil.

d. Faithless Israel will be punished, but because God loves his people a small 'remnant' will escape the invader's sword. This idea, already familiar to Amos, 3:12; 5:15; 9:8-10, is taken up by Isaiah, 4:2-3, 6:13; 7:3 and 10:19-21; 28:5-6; 37:4 (=2 K 19:4); 37:31-32, cf. Mi 4:7; 5:2; Zp 2:7-9; 3:12; Jr 3:14; 5:18; Ezk 5:3. This purified and henceforth faithful remnant left in Jerusalem will once again become a powerful nation. After the disaster of 587 a new conception appears: the remnant will be found among the exiles, Ezk 12:16; Ba 2:13; in exile they will turn to God, Ezk 6:8-10; cf. Dt 30:1-2, and God will then gather them together with a view to the messianic restoration, Jr 23:3; 31:7; 50:20; Ezk 20:37; Is 11:11,16; Mi 2:12-13. Back from exile this remnant, again unfaithful, will be further reduced in number and purified, Zc 1:3; 8:11; Hg 1:12; Ob 17=Jl 3:5; Zc 13:8-9; 14:2. In the event, Christ proves to be the true 'Branch' of the new and sanctified Israel, Is 11:1,10; cf. 4:2; Jr 23:3-6. Unlike Israel, the pagan nations will have no 'remnant', Is 14:22,30; 15:9; 16:14; Am 1:8; Ezk 21:37; Ob 18.

e. This continuation of the poem seems to have been added at the time of the exile and to allude, v. 4, to the fall of Jerusalem in 587.

f. 'daughter' corr.; 'daughters' Hebr.

g. 'come and rest' Greek; 'create' Hebr.

h. 'of Yahweh' added, with one Greek MS.

5 a. A poem composed by Isaiah at the beginning of his ministry, the occasion probably being the festivities of grape harvest. The idea of Israel as a vine, chosen and afterwards rejected, has been already touched upon by Hosea, 10:1, and will be taken up by Jeremiah, 2:21; 5:10; 6:9; 12:10, and by Ezekiel, 15:1-8; 17:3-10; 19:10-14. Cf. Ps 80:8-18; Is 27:2-5. Jesus later gives it a new emphasis in the parable of the wicked husbandmen, Mt 21:33-44p (cf. also the withered fig tree, Mt 21:18-19p). In Jn 15:1-2 he unfolds the mystery of the 'true' vine. There are other aspects of the vine theme in Dt 32:32-33 and Si 24:17.

b. 'of his love' corr.; 'of my friend' Hebr.

c. In Hebr. 'of soreq', probably a vine of fine-quality red grapes.

d. This poem also must belong to the first days of Isaiah's ministry. Some scholars add the malediction of 10:1-4 to these six.

e. 'this has sworn' corr.

g. Vv. 14-16 are out of place and should probably be read with 2:6-22.

h. Populace of an unnamed city, possibly Samaria.

i. The 'holiness' of God, cf. 6:3+, 'separates' him from all created things: since he transcends them they cannot contaminate him. But this transcendent sanctity of God can affect man to whom it appears under the form of 'justice' (1:26+), and thereby emphasises its moral nature: God rewards good and punishes evil; this is God's 'judgement'. God's lovingkindness does not clash with his 'justice', on the contrary it is part of it, since God's kindness in forgiving Israel and the repentant sinner comes from his faithfulness to what he has promised, Mi 7:9; Ps 51:14. See also 1:26+; 4:3; cf. Mt 5:48.

m. Many hold that this fragment belongs to the long poem of 9:7-10:4, the refrain of which occurs here also.

n. 'he has killed the princes' corr.; 'the mountains shook' Hebr.

o. This poem may refer to one of the great Assyrian invasions in the days of Isaiah: those of Tiglath-pileser III in 735 or 732, of Shalmaneser in 722, of Sargon in 711, or of Sennacherib in 701.

p. 'it' here could mean not the invader but the people of Judah and Israel.

6 a. The more natural place for the vision would have been at the beginning of the book, but it aptly introduces the 'Book of Immanuel' which assembles the oracles relating to the Syro-Ephraimite war when the threats of vv. 11-13 came true.

b. Usually dated 740 B.C.

c. 'Yahweh' restored in accordance with several Hebr. MSS.

d. The Hekal, the chamber leading into the Debir or 'Holy of Holies', cf. 1 K 6:1-38.

e. Heavenly beings which Isaiah is the first to associate with Yahweh. Their name means 'burning ones' (cf. the 'burning' serpents of Nb 21:6+; Dt 8:15, and the flying dragons of Is 14:29; 30:6). They are perhaps the same as the cherubs on the ark of the covenant, Ex 25:18+.

Jr 1:23

h. The holiness of God, cf. Lv 17:1+, is a central theme of Isaiah's preaching; he frequently calls Yahweh 'the Holy One of Israel', 1:4; 5:19,24; 10:17,20; 41:14, 16,20, etc. This divine sanctity requires man himself to be sanctified, i.e. separated from everything profane, Lv 17:1+, purified from sin, Is 6:5-7, sharing in the 'justice' of God, cf. 1:26+; 5:16+.

i. The equivalent of the cloud on Sinai.

j. The live coal is holy because Yahweh has sanctified the altar from which it is taken. Fire is normally associated with Yahweh in the theophanies of Sinai, Ex 19:18; Dt 4:11-12, 15,33,36. This is a destroying fire, Ex 24:17; Nb 11:1-3, but here it is purifying, cf. Is 1:25; Mt 3:11+.

k. The readiness of Isaiah recalls the faith of Abraham, Gn 12:1-4, and is in contrast to the hesitation of Moses, Ex 4:10-12, and especially of Jeremiah, Jr 1:6.

l. This verse reappears in the gospels, cf. Mt 13:13+; characteristically semitic in form, it does not mean that the obstinacy of the people is directly willed by God, but that God has foreseen it and incorporated it into his plan; hence it must not dismay the prophet.

m. The question suggests that there is hope for conversion. The answer, though not excluding that possibility, emphasises the magnitude of the punishment which only a 'remnant', cf. 4:3+, will survive.

n. 'countryside left desolate' Greek and Lat.

o. The text is corrupt and overloaded. The last line is absent from the Greek.

7 a. 'Rezin' Hebr., but according to Greek and the Assyrian inscriptions the form is Razon.

b. This prophetic name, cf. 1:26+, means 'A remnant will return', i.e. will be converted to Yahweh and thus escape punishment, cf. 4:3+. See 10:21-22.

c. Contemptuous reference to the kings of Damascus and of Israel: they are already extinguished, only the smoke remains. A gloss adds 'by reason of the fierce anger of Razon, of Aram, and of the son of Remaliah'. The Greek differs substantially.

d. Probably an Aramaean of the Damascene court.

e. 'capital' and 'head' here render the same Hebr. word rosh. The two verses are ironical: Damascus and Samaria have only men for leaders, the real king of Jerusalem is Yahweh.

f. 'six or five' corr.; 'sixty-five' Hebr. Samaria fell in 722.

g. Or 'if you do not believe': what Isaiah asks of Ahaz is an act of faith. In the prophets, faith is not so much a theoretical belief in the existence and uniqueness of God as an attitude of confidence based on God's choice of Israel: he has chosen Israel, he is Israel's God, Dt 7:6+, he alone has the power to save his people. This unconditional trust, a guarantee of salvation, Is 28:16, excludes all reliance not only on men but still more on false gods, Is 30:15; Jr 17:5; Ps 52:7.

h. The prophecy of Immanuel is one of the outstanding 'royal Messiah' texts of Isaiah. Many interpreters identify the proffered 'sign' with the birth of the future king Hezekiah, son of Ahaz. The hopes of Israel had rested, since Nathan's prophecy, 2 S 7:1+, on the permanence of the Davidic dynasty. But the solemnity of the oracle and the symbolic name given to the child show that the prophet sees more in this royal birth than dynastic continuity, namely a decisive intervention by God, towards the final establishment of the messianic kingdom spoken of in 9:1-6 and 11:1-9. Thus the prophecy of Immanuel goes beyond the person of Hezekiah: the evangelists, Mt 1:23 quoting Is 7:14, Mt 4:15-16 quoting Is 8:23-9:1, cf. Jn 1:5, followed by the whole Christian tradition, see in it a hidden prophecy of the birth of Christ. In its immediate application, however, the 'sign' is twofold: it foretells the deliverance of the capital and dynastic continuity, but also the disasters to be sustained both by Judah and by her enemies.

i. The Greek version reads 'the virgin', being more explicit than the Hebr. which uses almah, meaning either a young girl or a young recently married woman.

But the abundance of this simple food, recalling in these times of distress the 'milk and honey' of the Promised Land, Ex 3:8+, shows that the survivors as well as Immanuel, v. 15, will regard this food as a privilege.

8 a. The cylindrical seal of the Assyrians and Babylonians.

b. I.e. 'Speedy-spoil-quick-booty'. A proper name, cf. v. 3.

c. 'find me' versions; 'I found' Hebr.

d. The third symbolic name used by Isaiah, cf. 1:26+. Like Shear-jashub and Immanuel, this child is a sign of the confederates' defeat. Cf. the names given by Hosea to his children, Ho 1:4,6,9; 2:1-3,25.

e. Jerusalem's only spring, cf. 2 K 20:20+. It symbolises the hidden protection of God, the true source of confidence.

The vengeance of Yahweh^e

The Lord hurls a word against Jacob,

All the people of Ephraim and all the inhabitants of Samaria know it.
In their pride they have said,
speaking in the arrogance of their heart,
'The bricks have fallen down, then we will build with dressed stone;
the sycamores have been cut down, we will put cedars in their place'.
But Yahweh is marshalling his people's^f enemies against them,

k. The retort is probably ironical. Isaiah gibes at his compatriots who would rather consult necromancers than himself.

l. Interpretation uncertain. Possibly the last line belongs to what follows.

m. Image of a man driven from home by war. This passage, which has perhaps been curtailed, is apparently out of context.

n. This last line seems to be a gloss.

o. These few lines in prose, probably written later, introduce the poetic oracle spoken, apparently, at the time of the Galilean deportation following the campaign of Tiglath-pileser III in 732. It foretells the 'day of Yahweh' which will bring the deliverance of the deported and the peaceful empire of a child of a royal line, probably Immanuel, cf. 7:14+. The coming of Christ to Galilee gave the prophecy its full realisation.

9 a. 'their gladness' corr.; 'the nation' Hebr.
b. 'the bar' corr.; 'the rod (that beat)' Hebr.

c. A prophetic proper name, cf. 1:26+. The child possesses to a supreme degree the qualities of all the great figures of his race: the wisdom of Solomon, the valour of David, the virtues of Moses and the patriarchs. Cf. 11:2. Christian tradition and the Christmas liturgy apply these titles to Christ, presenting him as the true Immanuel.

d. 'Wide' Greek and Targ.

e. A poem against Samaria and the Northern Kingdom, delivered at a time of hostilities between Israel and Judah, either in 739 when the war was brewing (against Ahaz), or else in 734 when the war was over and the Northern Kingdom was torn by intrigues occasioned by Assyrian domination.

f. Hebr. reads 'the enemies of Razon'.

11 a. A messianic poem describing in some detail the salient characteristics of the coming Messiah: of Davidic stock: v. 1, he will be filled with the spirit of the prophets, v. 2, will establish among men that 'integrity' which is the reflection of God's sanctity on earth, vv. 3f, cf. 1:26+ and 5:16+; he will restore the peace of Eden, vv. 6-8, which is the fruit of knowledge of God, v. 9.

b. The 'spirit of Yahweh' or 'holy spirit of Yahweh', 42:1; 61:1f; 63:10-13; Ps 51:11; Ws 1:5; 9:17, his 'breath' ('breath' and 'spirit' translate the same word, ruah), is found active throughout biblical history. Before creation it rests on the abyss, Gn 1:1, and to it all creatures owe life, Ps 104:29-30; 33:6; Gn 2:7, cf. Ezk 37:5-6,9-10. It inspires the Judges, Jg 3:10; 6:34; 11:29, and Saul, 1 S 11:6. It gives craftsmen their skill, Ex 31:3; 35:31, judges their discretion, Nb 11:17, Joseph his wisdom, Gn 41:38. But especially it inspires the prophets, Nb 11:17 (Moses), 25-26; 24:2; 1 S 10:6, 10; 19:20; 2 S 23:2 (David); 2 K 2:9 (Elijah); Mi 3:8; Is 48:16; 61:1; Zc 7:12; 2 Ch 15:1; 20:14; 24:20, whereas false prophets follow their own spirit, Ezk 13:3, cf. also Dn 4:5,15; 5:11-12,14. This text teaches that this spirit of the prophets will be bestowed on the Messiah; Jl 3:1-2 later foretells that in the messianic era it will be poured out on all men, cf. Ac 2:16-17. Like the doctrine of wisdom, cf. Pr 8:22+; Ws 7:22+, the doctrine of the Spirit is to achieve its perfect expression in the New Testament, cf. Jn 1:33+; 14:16+ and 26+; Ac 1:8+; 2+; Rm 5:5+.

c. The prophetic spirit confers on the Messiah the outstanding virtues of his great ancestors: the wisdom and insight of Solomon, the heroism and prudence of David, the knowledge and fear of God characteristic of patriarch and prophet, of Moses, of Jacob, of Abraham. Cf. 9:5. The list of these qualities, as given in LXX and Vulg. (these add 'piety', a repetition of the 'fear of Yahweh'), has become the Christian 'seven gifts of the Holy Spirit'.

d. 'the ruthless' corr.; 'the earth' Hebr.

e. 'the loincloth' versions.

f. Man's rebellion against God, Gn 3, had broken the harmony between man and nature, Gn 3:17-19, and between man and man, Gn 4. The prophets foretell war and oppression as the punishment for the sins of Israel. The messianic era, however, with its forgiveness of sin, its reconciliation with God, its reign of justice, will establish the peace that results from these: it will pay to till the land, Am 9:13-14; Ho 2:20,23-24; weapons of war will all be set aside, Is 2:4; 9:4; Mi 4:3-4; 5:9-10; Zc 9:10; there will be lasting peace, Is 9:6; 32:17; 60:17-18; Zp 3:13; Zc 3:10; Jl 4:17. The new covenant is a covenant of peace, Ezk 34:25; 37:26. The messianic kingdom is a kingdom of peace, Zc 9:8-10; Ps 72:3,7. Here the messianic age is symbolically described as a return to the peace of Eden.

C. ORACLES ON FOREIGN NATIONS

Against Babylon^a

13 Oracle on Babylon, seen by Isaiah son of Amoz. 1
 On a bare hill hoist a signal, sound the war cry.^b 2 Beckon them^c to come to the Nobles' Gate.^d I, for my part, issue orders 3
 to my sacred warriors,
 I summon my knights to serve my anger,
 my proud champions.
 Listen! A rumbling in the mountains 4 like a great crowd.
 Listen! The din of kingdoms,

21:1-10:
47:1-15

of nations mustering.
 It is Yahweh Sabaoth
 marshalling the troops for battle.
 5 They come from a distant country,
 from the far horizons, Yahweh and the instruments of his fury
 to lay the whole earth waste.
 6 Howl! For the day of Yahweh is near, bringing devastation from Shaddai.
 7 At this, every arm falls limp . . .
 The heart of each man fails him,
 8 they are terrified,
 pangs and pains seize them,
 they writhe like a woman in labour.
 They look at one another with feverish faces.
 9 The day of Yahweh is coming, merciless, with wrath and fierce anger,
 to reduce the earth to desert
 and root out the sinners from it.
 10 For the stars of the sky and Orion shall not let their light shine;
 the sun shall be dark when it rises,
 and the moon not shed her light.
 11 I will punish the world for its evil-doing,
 and the wicked for their crimes,
 to put an end to the pride of arrogant men
 and humble the pride of despots.
 12 I will make men scarcer than pure gold,
 human life scarcer than the gold of Ophir.
 13 This is why I am going to shake the heavens—
 and make the earth reel from its place, before the wrath of Yahweh Sabaoth,
 the day when his anger flares.
 14 Then like a startled gazelle,
 like sheep that no one shepherds,
 each man will return to his people,
 each take flight to his native land.
 15 All those caught are slaughtered,
 all those captured fall by the sword, 16 their babies are dashed to pieces before their eyes,
 their houses plundered,
 their wives raped.
 17 See now, I stir up against them the Medes, who think nothing of silver,
 who take no pleasure in gold.
 18 The baby boys all cut to pieces,
 the baby girls all crushed.^e
 They have no mercy on the fruit of the womb, no pity in their eyes for children.

A satire on the death of a tyrant^b

Hab 2:6 The day Yahweh gives you rest after your suffering and torment and the 3 grim servitude to which you were forcibly enslaved, • you are to recite this satire 4 on the king of Babylon:

Jr 50:23-24
 Rv 18:9-19 What was the end of the tyrant?
 What was the end of his arrogance?^c Yahweh has broken the staff of the wicked 5 and the sceptre of tyrants—which angrily thrashed the peoples 6
 with blow after blow,
 which furiously tyrannised over the nations, persecuting without respite.
 Jr 51:48
 Rv 18:20:
 19:1-2 The whole earth is at rest, it is calm, 7 shouting for joy.
 The cypresses, the cedars of Lebanon 8
 rejoice at your fate,
 'Now that you have been laid low,
 no one comes up to fell us'.^d
 Nb 16:33 +
 Ezk 32:18-32 On your account Sheol beneath us 9
 is astir to greet your arrival.
 Jb 3:14 To honour you he rouses the ghosts of all the rulers of the world.
 He makes all the kings of the nations get up from their thrones.
 Each has something to say 10
 and what they will say to you is this,
 'So you too have been brought to nothing, like ourselves.
 You, too, have become like us.
 Your magnificence has been flung down to Sheol 11
 with the music of your harps;

- underneath you a bed of maggots,
and over you a blanket of worms.
12 How did you come to fall from the heavens,
Daystar, son of Dawn?^e
How did you come to be thrown to the ground,
you who enslaved the nations?
13 You who used to think to yourself,
"I will climb up to the heavens;
and higher than the stars of God
I will set my throne.
I will sit on the Mount of Assembly in the recesses of the north.
14 I will climb to the top of thunderclouds,
I will rival the Most High."
15 What! Now you have fallen to Sheol to the very bottom of the abyss!
16 All who see you will gaze at you,
will stare at you,
'Is this the man who made the earth tremble,
and overthrew kingdoms,
17 who made the world a desert and levelled cities,
who never to his captives opened the prison gates?'
18 All the kings of the nations lie honourably, each in his tomb.
19 But you, you have been expelled from your grave like loathsome dung,^f buried under the slaughtered,
under those cut down by the sword,
and thrown on the stones of the ditch
like a mangled carcass.
20 You are never going to rejoin them in the grave, for you have brought your country to ruin
and destroyed your people.
The offspring of the wicked will leave no name behind them.
21 Start slaughtering the sons
for the guilt of their fathers!
Never again must they rise to conquer the earth and spread across the face of the world.

14 a. This oracle refers to the return from exile and the conversion of the heathen nations, and belongs to the cycle of the 'Book of the Consolation of Israel', Is 40-55.

b. This mashal (cf. Introduction to Wisdom Books) satirises a fallen tyrant; some think it was written by Isaiah himself to celebrate the death either of Sargon II or of Sennacherib and supplemented in the exilic period by a few introductory lines applying it to a king of Babylon. Many others hold, however, that the poem was directly written against Nebuchadnezzar or Nabonidus.

c. 'his arrogance' versions and DSIa; 'the oppres-

d. For building palaces.

e. This section of the poem contains several expressions common in Phoenician mythology: the 'mount of assembly' of the gods; the 'Most High' is a name of Yahweh but also of the Phoenician Baal. The Fathers identified the fall of the Morning Star (Vulg. 'Lucifer') with that of the prince of the demons represented and symbolised by the pagan tyrant.

f. 'dung' following Greek; 'like a branch' Hebr.

g. These few lines also belong to the poems against Babylon in the second part of Is.

10:24+ Assyria will be destroyed^h

what I have planned shall happen, what I have decided shall be fulfilled—to break Assyria in my country, 25
to crush him on my mountains.
9:3 His yoke will slip from them,
his burden from their shoulder.
This is the decision taken 26
against the whole world;
this, the hand stretched out against all the nations.
When Yahweh Sabaoth has made a decision, 27
who would dare cancel it?
When he stretches out his hand,
who can make him withdraw it?

A warning to the Philistines

Zp 2:4 In the year Ahaz diedⁱ this oracle was pronounced: 28
Do not rejoice, whole country of Philistia, 29
because the rod that beat you has broken,
since the serpent's stock can still produce a basilisk 30:6 and the offspring of that will be a flying dragon.^j
But the poor are going to feed in my pastures 30
and beggars rest in safety, while I let your posterity die out through hunger, killing off any that survive.^k
Howl, Gate; cry, City; 31
shudder, whole country of Philistia!
20:1 For a smoke is coming from the north,^l
Jr 1:13f and there are no deserters in those battalions.
What reply will be given then 32
to the messengers of that nation?
'Yahweh has laid the foundations of Zion, and there the poor of his people shall find refuge.'^m

Lament for Moab^a

Am 2:1-3
Zp 2:8

The night when Ar was ravaged

The night when Kir was ravaged Moab collapsed.

People climb to the temple of Dibon,^c climb high places to weep;
on Nebo and in Medeba Moab laments.

Every head shaven,
every beard clipped;

[Jr 48:37-38

- 3 they wear sackcloth in the streets,
and wail^d on the housetops.
- All in the squares are lamenting and bursting into tears.
- 4 Heshbon and Elealeh are howling,
their noise can be heard as far as Jahaz.
That is why the loins of Moab are shivering,^e
why its soul is shuddering;
5 why the heart of Moab is groaning, why its fugitives are as far afield as Zoar (Eglath Shelishiyah).^f
- Ah, slopes of Luhith,
they climb them weeping.
On the road to Horonaim
they utter heartrending cries.
- 6 Ah, the waters of Nimrim
are a waste land,
the grass dried up, the turf all withered,
nothing green any more.
- 7 That is why they are busily preparing . . .
And they transport their possessions across the wadi of the Willows.
- 8 Ah, the shrieking rings round
the whole territory of Moab;
its wailing resounds right to Eglaim, echoes as far as Beer-elim.
- 9 Ah, the waters of Dibon are swollen with blood, and worse disasters are still in store for Dibon,
a lion to pounce on anyone who escapes from Moab,
and on the few survivors of that country.

The Moabites take refuge in Judah

like bewildered nestlings,

2 Ch 17:11

b. Oracle of Isaiah probably delivered in 701, at the time of Sennacherib's invasion.

i. It seems from this dating that an editor may have wanted to apply the epithets used by Isaiah to the king of Judah: serpent, adder, dragon. But the 'rod that beat' Philistia must have been Sargon II (died 705).

j. The 'dragon' (saraph) is the 'burning serpent' of Nb 21:6,8; Dt 8:15. The Philistines had nothing to gain, therefore, from the death of the Assyrian prince. They would have even more to fear from his successors.

k. 'my pastures', 'your posterity': corr. 'killing' lit. 'I shall kill' Latin and DSIa; 'he will kill' Hebr.

l. Assyrian armies invaded from the N. Later, in the prophecies of Jeremiah and Ezekiel, enemies are always represented as coming from the N.

m. The reply asserts that Zion is inviolable and a city of refuge in time of war.

15 a. Composed by Isaiah probably during one of the Assyrian campaigns which ravaged Moab. The poem is in the qinah rhythm. 1:21+.

b. The Hebr. divides the text differently. Ar-moab, about 14 m. N. of the Arnon. Kir-moab (or Korha), capital of Moab, on the site of the present Kerak.

c. 'to the temple of Dibon' corr.

d. 'and wail' added, following Jr 48:38. Vv. 2f mention the traditional gestures of mourning.

e. 'loins are shivering' following Greek and Syr.

f. 'the heart of Moab' following Greek; 'my heart on Moab' Hebr. 'its fugitives' corr. 'Eglath Shelishiyah' is a gloss.

16 a. Text very uncertain, lit. 'Send a lamb, ruler of the country (or: the lamb of the ruler of the country) from Sela ('the Rock', i.e. Petra) towards the desert (or: by way of the desert) to the mountain of the daughter of Zion'. Isaiah is apparently inviting the refugees from Moab to render homage to the king of Judah and secure his protection. The Vulg. interpretation 'Send, O Lord, the Lamb, the ruler of the earth, from the Rock of the desert to the mountain of the daughter of Zion' makes the text messianic.

such are the daughters of Moab
at the ford of the Arnon.

'Advise us what to do,
decide for us.'^b

3

'Spread your shadow as if it were night
at the height of noon.
Hide those who have been driven out,
do not let the refugee be seen.

'Let those who have been driven out of Moab stay with you;
be their refuge
against the destroyer.'^c

Once the oppression is over,
and the destroyer is no more,
and those now trampling the country underfoot have gone away,
the throne will be made secure in gentleness,
and on it there will sit in all fidelity,
within the tent of David,
a judge careful for justice
and eager for integrity.

Pr 20:28

||Jr 48:29-33 Lament for Moab

We have heard of the pride of Moab, an excessive pride—
of his conceit, his pride, his arrogance;
his pretensions are empty.

And so the Moabites must mourn for Moab,
all of them lamenting together.
For the raisin cakes of Kir-hareseth they^d mourn, in their utter bewilderment.

For blighted are the fields of Heshbon, and the vine of Sibmah whose clusters proved too strong for the overlords of the nations;

it once reached all the way to Jazer, had even wound its way into the desert,
and its shoots had spread even beyond the sea.

And so I weep, as Jazer weeps,
for the vine of Sibmah.
I water you with my tears,
Heshbon and Elealeh.

For over your fruit and your vintage
a cheer^e has been heard;
joy and gladness
have vanished from the orchards.

No more revelry in the vineyards,
no more happy shouting;
no more wine trodden out in the presses,
the shouting^f all silenced.

- 11 And so for Moab my whole being quivers like lyre strings,
my inmost self, for Kir-hareseth.
- 12 In vain may Moab go to wear himself out at high places,
to come and pray in his temple;
he can do nothing.

Yahweh reverses the situation at the Exodus and becomes the liberator of an oppressed Egypt, which he now calls 'my people'. When his 'day' comes, Egypt and Assyria and Israel, traditional foes, will be reconciled under his blessing.

Against Kedar^l

16:14 Yes, the Lord said this to me, 'In one year's time as a wage-earner reckons 16 it, all the glorious power of Kedar will be finished. •Of the bowmen, of the 17 Jr 49:28f hardest sons of Kedar, hardly any will be left, for Yahweh God of Israel has decreed this.'

Against untimely rejoicing in Jerusalem^a

What is the matter now that you are all climbing

- with one accord to the housetops,
 2 you the uproarious, the boisterous town, the joyful city?
 Your slain were not slain by the sword,
 your dead have not fallen in battle;
 3 your rulers have all fled away and been captured before bending their bows;
 and the bravest^e among you have been taken prisoner,
 they have fled far away.
 4 That is why I say, 'Turn your eyes away from me, let me weep bitterly;
 do not try to comfort me
 over the destruction of the daughter of my people'.^d 5 For this, a day of panic and rout,^e is from the Lord Yahweh Sabaoth.
 In the Valley of Hinnom a wall is thrown down,
 they are shouting for help on the mountains.
 6 Elam takes up his quiver, Aram mounts his horse^f
 and Kir^g fetches out his shield.
 7 Your fairest valleys are filled with chariots
 and the horsemen take up positions at the gates;
 8 thus falls the defence of Judah.

Against military preparations^h

- You turned your gaze that day to the armoury of the House of the Forest. 1 K 7:2-5 9 You saw how many breaches there were in the Citadel of David. 2 S 5:9+
 You collected the waters 2 K 20:20+ of the lower pool. 2 Ch 32:4 10 You counted
 the houses of Jerusalem, and you pulled down houses
 to strengthen the wall.
 11 In the middle you made a reservoir between the two walls for the waters of the old pool.
 But you had no thought for the Maker, Si 48:17
 no eyes for him who shaped everything long ago.
 12 The Lord Yahweh Sabaoth called you that day

f. Lit. 'O my threshed one of the threshing-floor, O son of my threshing-floor'. This refers to the Jewish people exiled in Babylon.

g. In 711 the Edomites had been allied with the Philistines against Sargon; defeated by the Assyrians, they are here presented as asking Isaiah how long their subjection is to last.

h. 'Edom' Greek; 'Dumah' Hebr.

i. I.e. deliverance followed by renewed oppression if the Edomites are not converted.

j. A tribe of Bedouin associated with Sheba, cf. 1 K 10:1+. Isaiah asks the people of Tema to help their fugitives.

k. Country lying to the N.E. of Arabia. According to Gn 25:15 its inhabitants were descended from Ishmael.

l. A tribe of wandering Arabs.

22 a. Presumably 705, the year of the first victory of Hezekiah over the allies of Assyria before the invasion of Sennacherib. The prophet castigates the people's reckless celebrations and foretells disaster.

b. 'of Hinnom' corr.; 'of vision' Hebr.; 'of Zion' Greek. So also in v. 5. This valley bordered Jerusalem on the S.W.

c. 'the bravest' Greek.

d. Jerusalem.

e. Hebr. adds 'and of confusion'.

f. Line corr.; 'with the chariots of men' Hebr. The defeated Aramaeans provided soldiers for the armies of Sennacherib.

g. Unidentified.

h. Shortly before Sennacherib's invasion, Hezekiah undertook the defensive fortification of Jerusalem, see 2 K 14:13+ and 2 K 20:20+.

Mi 1:16 to weep and mourn,
 to shave your heads, to put on sackcloth;
 instead, there is joy and amusement, 13 killing of oxen, slaughtering of sheep,⁴

 for tomorrow we may be dead'.
 My ears have had this revelation 14
 from Yahweh Sabaoth:
 'Most certainly this sin will not be atoned for,
 until you die'
 says the Lord Yahweh Sabaoth.

Against Shebna

36:3, 11, 22
 2 K 18:18,
 26, 37
 Thus says the Lord Yahweh Sabaoth: 15
 Now go to this steward,
 to Shebna, the master of the palace,
 who is hewing a tomb for himself high up, 16
 carving out a room for himself in the rock,
 'What right have you here, and what relatives have you here for you to hew yourself a tomb in this place?'
 See, Yahweh hurls you down, 17 down with a single throw;
 then with a strong grip he grips you,
 and he winds you up into a ball 18
 and hurls you into an immense country.
 There you will die,
 and there will be sent the chariots you were so proud of,
 you, the disgrace of your master's palace.'

Another oracle against Shebna

36:3, 11, 22
 2 K 18:18,
 26, 37
 I dismiss you from your office, 19
 I^k remove you from your post, and the same day I call on my servant 20
 Eliakim son of Hilkiah.
 I invest him with your robe, 21
 gird him with your sash, entrust him with your authority;
 and he shall be a father to the inhabitants of Jerusalem and to the House of Judah.
 Mt 16:19
 Rv 3:7 I place the key of the House of David 22
 on his shoulder;
 Jb 12:14 should he open, no one shall close,
 should he close, no one shall open.
 I drive him like a peg 23
 into a firm place;
 he will become a throne of glory
 for his father's house.^l

The calamity of the family of Eliakim^m

On it they will hang all the glory of his father's house, offspring and issue, 24 all the least of vessels from cups to pitchers. •That day—it is Yahweh Sabaoth 25 who speaks—the peg driven into a firm place will give way. It will be torn out J1 4:8 and will fall. And the whole load hanging on it will be shattered, for Yahweh has spoken.

On Tyre and Sidon^a

1 23 Oracle on Tyre:

Howl, ships of Tarshish,^b
 for your fortress^c has been destroyed.
 They learn the news
 on their way from the land of Kittim.^d
 Be struck dumb, you inhabitants of the coast,
 you merchants of Sidon,
 whose goods^e travelled over the sea,
 over wide oceans.
 The grain of Nile, the harvest of the river,
 formed her revenues,
 as she marketed it throughout the world.
 Blush, Sidon,
 for thus speaks the sea,^f
 'I have not laboured nor given birth, not reared young men
 nor brought up young girls'.^g
 When the Egyptians learn the fate of Tyre, they will be appalled.
 Take ship for Tarshish,^h howl,
 you inhabitants of the coast.
 Is this your joyful city
 founded far back in the past?
 Whose footsteps led her abroad
 to found her own colonies?
 Who took this decision against imperial Tyre,ⁱ whose traders were princes, whose merchants, the great ones of the world?
 Yahweh Sabaoth took this decision to humble the pride of all her beauty and humiliate the great ones of the world.
 Till the soil,^j daughter of Tarshish,
 the harbour^k is no more.
 He has stretched his hand over the sea
 to overthrow its kingdoms;
 Yahweh has ordained the destruction of the fortresses of Canaan.
 He has said: Rejoice no more,
 ravished one,

virgin daughter of Sidon.

The subjection of Tyre

Jr 25:11-12 That day, Tyre will be forgotten for seventy years.ⁿ But in the reign of another 15 king,^o at the end of the seventy years, Tyre will become like the whore in the song:

Take your lyre, walk the town,
 forgotten whore.
 Play your sweetest, sing your songs again,
 to make them remember you.

Rv 17:2 At the end of the seventy years Yahweh will visit^p Tyre. Once again she will 17 begin to receive the pay for her whoring. She will play the whore with all the kingdoms on the surface of the earth. • But her profits and wages will be dedicated 18 to Yahweh and not stored or hoarded. Her profits will go to buy abundant food and splendid clothes for those who live in the presence of Yahweh.

A prayer of thanksgiving

Yahweh, you are my God, 1
 I extol you, I praise your name;
 for you have carried out your excellent design,
 long planned, trustworthy, true.
 For you have made the town a heap of stones, 2
 the fortified city a ruin.
 The citadel of the proud is a city no longer,
 it will never be rebuilt.
 Hence a mighty people gives you glory, 3
 the city of pitiless nations holds you in awe;
 for you are a refuge for the poor, 4
 a refuge for the needy in distress,
 a shelter from the storm,
 a shade from the heat;
 while the breath of pitiless men
 is like the winter^a storm.
 Like drought in a dry land 5
 you will repress the clamour of the proud;
 like heat by the shadow of a cloud
 the singing of the despots will be subdued.

Mt 8:11 The messianic banquet^b

On this mountain,^c 6

 a banquet of rich food, a banquet of fine wines,
 of food rich and juicy, of fine strained wines.
 On this mountain he will remove 7
 the mourning veil covering all peoples, and the shroud enwrapping all nations,
 he will destroy Death for ever. 8
 The Lord Yahweh will wipe away
 the tears from every cheek;
 he will take away his people's shame
 everywhere on earth,
 for Yahweh has said so.
 That day, it will be said: See, this is our God 9
 in whom we hoped for salvation;
 Yahweh is the one in whom we hoped.
 We exult and we rejoice
 that he has saved us;
 for the hand of Yahweh 10
 rests on this mountain.

Continuation of the poem against evil counsellors

- But hail will sweep away the refuge of lies and floods overwhelm the shelter;
18 your covenant with Mot will be broken^k and your pact with Sheol annulled.
When the destructive whip goes by
it will crush you;
19 each time it goes by,
it will seize you.
It will go by, morning after morning,
both day and night;
what panic there would be if you were to understand what it meant!
20 The bed is too short to stretch in,
the blanket too narrow for covering.^l
21 Yes, as Yahweh did on Mount Perazim, he is going to rise, as he did in the Valley of Gibeon he is going to stir himself to do the deed, his extraordinary deed, to work the work, his mysterious work.
22 Stop scoffing, then,
or your bonds will be tightened further;
for I have listened to the warrant of destruction issued against the whole country by the Lord Yahweh Sabaoth.

b. The armies of Sargon.

c. Oracle against participants in sacred banquets, who ridiculed Isaiah.

d. Mimicking Isaiah's preaching, which they consider unintelligible, with words chosen for their sound-value and recalling the babbling of a child. If the words are to be translated at all, they will read 'order on order, order on order, rule on rule, rule on rule, a little here, a little there'.

e. The languages spoken by the Assyrian troops who were of various nationalities. Isaiah's hearers have refused to understand him, yet through him Yahweh was speaking a message of peace; therefore God will make them hear another unintelligible message, the language of a conqueror.

f. Referring to the counsellors at the court of Judah, either under Ahaz or when Hezekiah considered joining the anti-Assyrian coalition.

g. 'Mot' corr.; 'death' Hebr. Mot was the Phoenician god of wheat, germination, and the underworld. In the Egyptian pantheon he is Osiris.

h. 'made a pact' versions; 'in vision' Hebr.

i. This oracle interrupts the poem in which it has been inserted and which is resumed in v. 17c.

j. 'stumble' corr.; 'hasten' Hebr.; 'be ashamed' Greek. This sentence is the proper name of the foundation stone of the new Jerusalem, cf. 1:26+.

The parable of the farmer^m

Listen closely to my words, 23
 be attentive and understand what I am saying.
 Does the ploughmanⁿ do nothing but plough 24
 and turn the soil and harrow it?
 Will he not, after he has levelled it, 25 scatter fennel, sow cummin, put in wheat and barley^o
 and, on the edges, spelt?
 He has been taught this discipline 26
 by his God who instructs him.

41:15 For fennel must not be crushed, 27
 nor a drag be rolled over cummin;^p fennel must be beaten with a stick,
 and cummin with a flail.
 Does a man crush wheat? No; 28
 he does not thresh it endlessly.
 When he has rolled the drag over it he winnows it^q without crushing it.
 This too comes from Yahweh Sabaoth, 29 whose advice is always admirable, whose deeds are very great.

Woe, Ariel, Ariel, 1
 city where David encamped.
 Let a year or two pass,
 let the feasts make their full round
 then I will lay siege to Ariel, 2
 and there will be moaning and bemoaning.

You^b will be an Ariel for me,
 like David^e I will encamp against you, 3
 I will blockade you with palisades, and mount siege-works against you.

Thrown down—you will speak from the ground, 4
 your words will come muffled by dust.
 Your voice will rise from the earth like a ghost's,
 you will speak from the dust in a whisper.

Suddenly, unexpectedly,^d 5c
 you shall be visited by Yahweh Sabaoth with thunder, earthquake, mighty din, 6 hurricane, tempest, flame of devouring fire.

The horde of your enemies shall be scattered like fine dust, 5ab
 the tyrant horde like flying chaff;
 the horde of all the nations at war with Ariel shall vanish like a dream, like a vision at night. 7

And all those fighting against her,
 the entrenchments besieging her,^e shall be like the hungry man who dreams he eats, 8
 and wakes with an empty belly, like the thirsty man who dreams he drinks
 and wakes exhausted, his throat parched;

j. Oracle presumably delivered in the same circumstances as 28:14-22. It seems, however, to refer to Samaria.

k. The ancient story of creation, Gn 2:7, had already pictured Yahweh as a potter, shaping man from the earth. The prophets after Isaiah frequently use this figure to show that man is a dependent and fragile thing in the hands of God; so also St Paul.

l. Vv. 17-18 and 21 seem to be later additions.

Abraham's redeemer:

You will throw them away like the polluted things they are, shouting after them, 'Good riddance!' •He will send rain for the seed you sow in the ground, and the bread that the ground provides will be rich and nourishing. Your cattle will graze, that day, in wide pastures. •Oxen and donkeys that till the ground will eat a salted fodder, winnowed with shovel and fork. On every lofty mountain, on every high hill there will be streams and watercourses, on the day of the great slaughter when the strongholds fall. •Then moonlight will be bright as sunlight and sunlight itself be seven times brighter—like the light of seven days in one—on the day Yahweh dresses the wound of his people and heals the bruises his blows have left.

The integrity of the king

11:3-4 Jr 23:5-6	32	A king reigns by integrity and princes rule by law; each is like a shelter from the wind, a refuge from the storm, like streams of water in dry places, like the shade of a great rock in a thirsty land.	1

Ps 14:1 Qo 10:13		For the fool speaks folly, and his heart meditates ^b wickedness, that he may practise godlessness and speak wild words about Yahweh, and leave the hungry man's craving unsatisfied, and refuse drink to the thirsty.	6
		And the villain—his villainies are evil; he devises wicked plots to ruin the poor with lies even when the cause of these lowly ones is just; but the noble man plans only noble things and bears himself nobly.	7

Then the cupbearer-in-chief stood erect and, shouting loudly in the Judaeans language, called out, 'Listen to the words of the great king, the king of Assyria. The king says to you: "Do not let Hezekiah delude you! He will be powerless to save you. •Do not let Hezekiah persuade you to rely on Yahweh by saying: Yahweh is sure to save us; this city will not fall into the power of the king of Assyria." •Do not listen to Hezekiah, for the king of Assyria says: Make peace with me, •surrender to me, and every one of you will eat the fruit of his own vine and of his own fig tree and drink the water of his own cistern until I come and deport you to a country like your own, a land of corn and good wine, a land of bread and of vineyards. •Do not let Hezekiah delude you by saying: Yahweh will save you. Has any god of any nation saved his country from the power of the king of Assyria? •Where are the gods of Hamath and Arpad? Where are the gods of Sepharvaim? Where are the gods of the land of Samaria?^a Did they save Samaria from me? •Tell me which of all the gods of these countries have saved their countries from my hands, for Yahweh to be able to save Jerusalem?"

They kept silence and said nothing in reply, since this was the king's order: 'Do not answer him' he had said. •The master of the palace, Eliakim son of Hilkiah, Shebna the secretary and the herald Joah son of Asaph, with their garments torn, went to Hezekiah and reported what the cupbearer-in-chief had said.

37 On hearing this, King Hezekiah tore his garments, covered himself with sackcloth and went to the Temple of Yahweh. •He sent the master of the palace, Eliakim, Shebna the secretary and the elders of the priests, covered in sackcloth, to the prophet Isaiah son of Amoz. •They said to him, 'This is what Hezekiah says, "Today is a day of suffering, of punishment, of disgrace. Children come to birth and there is no strength to bring them forth. •May Yahweh your God hear the words of the cupbearer-in-chief whom his master, the king of Assyria, has sent to insult the living God, and may Yahweh your God punish the words he has heard! Offer your prayer for the remnant that is left."'

When the ministers of King Hezekiah had come to Isaiah, •he replied, 'Say to your master, "Yahweh says this: Do not be afraid of the words you have heard or the blasphemies the minions of the king of Assyria have uttered against me. •I am going to put a spirit in him, and when he hears a rumour he will return to his own country and in that country I will bring him down with the sword."'

The cupbearer returns to his master

The cupbearer went back and rejoined the king of Assyria at Libnah, which he was attacking. The cupbearer had already learnt that the king of Assyria had left Lachish, •since he had received this news about Tirhakah king of Cush: 'He has set out to fight you'.

||36:1 Sennacherib sent messengers to Hezekiah again,^a saying, '•Tell this to Hezekiah king of Judah, "Do not let your God on whom you are relying deceive you when he says: Jerusalem shall not fall into the power of the king of Assyria. You have learnt by now what the kings of Assyria have done to every country, putting them all under the ban. Are you likely to be spared? •What power to help did the gods have of those nations my fathers destroyed, Gozen, Haran, Rezeph and the Edenites who were in Tel Basar?^b •Where are the king of Hamath, the king of Arpad,^c the kings of Sepharvaim, of Hena, of Ivvah?"'

- 14 Hezekiah took the letter from the hands of the messengers and read it; he then went up to the Temple of Yahweh and spread it out before Yahweh.
 15 Hezekiah said this prayer in the presence of Yahweh, •‘Yahweh Sabaoth, God of Israel, enthroned on the cherubs, you alone are God of all the kingdoms of the earth, you have made heaven and earth. 2 Ch 32:20 Jdt 6:2
- 17 ‘Give ear, Yahweh, and listen.
 Open your eyes, Yahweh, and see.
 Hear the words of Sennacherib who has sent to insult the living God. Dn 9:18 1 S 17:26
- 18 ‘It is true, Yahweh, that the kings of Assyria have exterminated all the nations^d and their countries, •they have thrown their gods on the fire, for these were not gods but the work of men’s hands, wood and stone, and hence they have destroyed them. •But now, Yahweh our God, save us from his hand, and let all the kingdoms of the earth know that you alone are God,^e Yahweh.’

Isaiah intervenes

||2 K 19:20-28

- 21 Then Isaiah son of Amoz sent to Hezekiah. ‘This’ he said ‘is what Yahweh, the God of Israel, says in answer to the prayer you have addressed to me about Sennacherib king of Assyria. •Here is the oracle that Yahweh has pronounced against him: 10:24
- 23 “She despises you, she scorns you,
 the virgin, daughter of Zion;
 she tosses her head behind you,
 the daughter of Jerusalem.
 Whom have you insulted, whom did you blaspheme?
 Against whom raised your voice and lifted your insolent eyes?
 Against the Holy One of Israel.
- 24 Through your minions you have insulted the Lord;
 you have said: With my many chariots
 I have climbed the tops of mountains,
 the utmost peaks of Lebanon.
 I have felled its tall forest of cedars,
 its finest cypresses.
 I have reached its furthest recesses,
 its forest garden.
- 25 Yes I have dug wells and drunk
 of alien waters;^f
 I have put down my feet, and have dried up all the rivers of Egypt.

 it was time to get up, there they lay, so many corpses.

Sennacherib struck camp and left; he returned home and stayed in Nineveh. 37

||2 K 20:1-11 The illness and cure of Hezekiah

 Ps 21:4 38 In those days Hezekiah fell ill and was at the point of death. The prophet 1
 Isaiah son of Amoz came and said to him, ‘Yahweh says this, “Put your 2 affairs in order, for you are going to die, you will not live”’. •Hezekiah turned 2 his face to the wall and addressed this prayer to Yahweh, ‘Ah, Yahweh, remem- 3 ber, I beg you, how I have behaved faithfully and with sincerity of heart in your presence and done what is right in your eyes’. And Hezekiah shed many tears.

Si 48:23 Then the word of Yahweh came to Isaiah, ‘Go and say to Hezekiah, 4 “Yahweh, the God of David your ancestor, says this: I have heard your prayer and seen your tears. I will cure you: in three days’ time you shall go up to the Temple of Yahweh.” I will add fifteen years to your life. •I will save you from the 6 hands of the king of Assyria, I will protect this city.”’

- 21 'Bring a fig poultice,' Isaiah said 'apply it to the ulcer and he will recover.'
 22 Hezekiah said, 'What is the sign to tell me that I shall be going up to the Temple
 7 of Yahweh?' •Here' Isaiah replied^b 'is the sign from Yahweh that he will do
 8 what he has said. •Look, I shall make the shadow cast by the declining sun go back ten steps on the steps of Ahaz.' And the sun went back the ten steps by which it had declined.

||2 K 20:12-19 The Babylonian embassy

||2 Ch 32:26 39 At that time, the king of Babylon, Merodach-baladan son of Baladan, sent 1
letters and a gift to Hezekiah, for he had heard of his illness and recovery.
||2 Ch 32:27 Hezekiah was delighted at this and showed the messengers his treasure-house, 2
the silver, gold, spices, precious oil, his armoury too, and everything there was in his storehouses. There was nothing Hezekiah did not show them in his palace or in his whole domain.

Then the prophet Isaiah came to King Hezekiah and asked him, 'What have 3 these men said, and where have they come from?' Hezekiah answered, 'They have come from a faraway country, from Babylon'. •Isaiah said, 'What have 4 they seen in your palace?' 'They have seen everything in my palace' Hezekiah answered. 'There is nothing in my storehouses that I have not shown them.'

Ps 62:9 Then Isaiah said to Hezekiah, 'Listen to the word of Yahweh Sabaoth, •"The 5 days are coming when everything in your palace, everything that your ancestors have amassed until now, will be carried off to Babylon. Not a thing will be left" says Yahweh. •"Sons sprung from you, sons begotten by you, will be chosen 7 to be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon." ' •Hezekiah said to Isaiah, 8
'This word of Yahweh that you announce is reassuring', for he was thinking,
'There is going to be peace and security during my own lifetime.'

40 a. See Introduction to the Prophets.

b. This opening poem plays the same part in the Book of Consolation as the narrative of the prophet's call plays in the other prophetic collections. In the author's usual mysterious manner it describes a divine manifestation. The 'voice' of Yahweh, vv. 3 and 6, here takes the place of the theophany found in Is 6 and in Ezk 1-3, indicating a more developed consciousness of God's transcendence. This calling-poem sums up the message of the book: the 'consolation', v. 1, of Israel in Babylon with a prophecy of a return accomplished by the creative word of God.

c. The voice of Yahweh addressing the prophet. The evangelists quote this text in its LXX form: 'A voice of one who cries in the wilderness...'; for them this is the voice of John the Baptist, the forerunner of the Messiah.

d. The Exodus is to be repeated: Yahweh will lead his people back to Palestine. The wonders of the Exodus have already been recalled by Isaiah, 10:25-27, as an earnest of God's protection. The prophets of the Exile elaborate this theme. As of old, God will come to save his people, Jr 16:14-15; 31:2; Is 46:3-4 and 63:9 (repeating Ex 19:4). The miracles of the first Exodus, Mi 7:14-15, the crossing of the Red Sea, Is 11:15-16; 43:16-21; 51:10; 63:11-13, the water from the rock, 48:21, the bright cloud, 52:12, cf. 4:5-6, the desert march, 40:3f, cf. Ba 5:7-9, become both type and guarantee of the second, from Babylon to Jerusalem. On the theme of the Exodus see also Ho 2:16+.

e. Mountains symbolise the arrogance of the great; the reduction of these has already been foretold in Is 2:12-15 as a sign of the 'day of Yahweh'.

f. 'I answered' versions; 'he answers' Hebr.

g. With this dialogue between Yahweh and the prophet about his mission, compare Is 6:8-13; Jr 1:4-8; Ezk 2:3-7; Ex 3:1-4:17.

h. To make himself audible throughout the world.

m. These seven lines are an interpolation, like 41:6-7 which are related. Polemic against pagan gods, cf. 41:21+; 42:8+, and allusions to the making of idols, cf. 42:17; 45:16,20; 46:5-7, are frequent in the second part of Is. The latter theme is developed in two short satirical passages (vv. 19-20 with 41:6-7, and 44:9-20) which seem to be later insertions, these passages are reminiscent of J: 10:1-16.

n. The author of the Book of Consolation adopts this name used to describe God in the first part of Is, cf. 6:3+.

41 a. Cyrus, the future liberator of the people of Judah exiled in Babylon, plays a prominent part in the Book of Consolation. Yahweh establishes him, not to punish (like a Sennacherib or Nebuchadnezzar), but to set free. An ancient Jewish tradition applied this passage to the call of Abraham. St Jerome (who in v. 2 translates 'who has aroused the Just One from the East') applied it to the Messiah, who would once for all bring deliverance. Cyrus who is later called 'the anointed of Yahweh', 45:1+, is in any case a foreshadowing of the Messiah.

b. The Hebr. word here rendered 'victory' (as in other passages of the Book of Consolation) is usually translated 'righteousness', 'integrity', 'justice'. In the present context it suggests a victory associated with the restoration of the world order willed by God. DSIa and versions have 'Who has aroused victory (Vulg.: the Just One) from the East and has hailed it...'

c. 'makes dust of them', 'scatters them' corr.

d. Image of the speed with which Cyrus sweeps to victory.

e. By his creative word, cf. Gn 1.

f. I.e. Yahweh is eternal.

g. 'encourages' corr.

h. Vv. 6-7 are an interpolation belonging to 40:19-20.

i. The second part of Is frequently represents the covenant by the image of a 'servant' whom God has chosen and set aside (from the surrounding peoples

Jacob whom I have chosen, descendant of Abraham my friend.

You whom I brought from the confines of the earth and called from the ends of the world;
you to whom I said, 'You are my servant,
I have chosen you, not rejected you', do not be afraid, for I am with you;

stop being anxious and watchful, for I am your God.
I give you strength, I bring you help,
I uphold you with my victorious right hand.

Yes, all those who raged against you,
shall be put to shame and confusion;
they who fought against you shall be destroyed, and perish.

You will seek but never find them,
those enemies of yours.
They shall be destroyed and brought to nothing,
those who made war on you.

For I, Yahweh, your God,
I am holding you by the right hand;
I tell you, 'Do not be afraid,
I will help you'.

Do not be afraid, Jacob, poor worm,
Israel, puny mite.^f

I will help you—it is Yahweh who speaks—
the Holy One of Israel is your redeemer.^g

See, I turn you into a threshing-sled, new, with doubled teeth;
you shall thresh and crush the mountains,
and turn the hills to chaff.

You shall winnow them and the wind will blow them away,
the gale will scatter them.
But you yourself will rejoice in Yahweh,
and glory in the Holy One of Israel.

Miracles of the new Exodus^h

The poor and needy ask for water, and there is none, their tongue is parched with thirst.

I, Yahweh, will answer them,
I, the God of Israel, will not abandon them.

I will make rivers well up on barren heights, and fountains in the midst of valleys;
turn the wilderness into a lake,
and dry ground into waterspring.

In the wilderness I will put cedar trees,
acacias, myrtles, olives.

In the desert I will plant juniper, plane tree and cypress side by side;

so that men may see and know,
may all observe and understand that the hand of Yahweh has done this,
that the Holy One of Israel has created it.

of the Diaspora, v. 9) to be his witness before all nations, 43:10. This 'servant', Israel, has proved unfaithful, 42:19, but Yahweh will forgive and save, 44:1f; 45:8; 48:20. In the 'songs of the servant' the term has a different significance, cf. 42:1+.

j. Line corr.: 'men of Israel' Hebr.

k. The 'redeemer', goel, is primarily the avenger of blood, Nb 35:19+, also the one who pays off a man's debt and frees him from prison, the close relative whose duty it is to protect the widow, Rt 2:20+. The word is used of God as avenger and liberator of his people. In this sense it is frequent in Ps, Ps 19:14+, and in the second part of Is, 43:14; 44:6,24; 47:4; 48:17; 59:20; cf. Jr 50:34. Finally the N.T. and Christian theology apply it to Jesus who delivers from sin.

l. The new Exodus, cf. 40:3+, is more marvellous than the old. Yahweh gave water to his people in the wilderness; now the wilderness itself is watered and God's abounding favour makes it a new Eden. This symbolic fertility is characteristic of the messianic era, cf. Is 11:6+, of which the return from exile is itself a presage, cf. Ezk 47:1-12.

m. The early prophets, like the ancient laws, condemned the worship of foreign gods; they regard them as 'nothingness'. This monotheism finds expression, from the Exile onwards, in formal arguments against their existence; here the argument is from their helplessness to predict or influence world-events: Yahweh alone, vv. 25f, has foretold and effected the victory of Cyrus; cf. 44:7; 45:21; 48:5. Polemic against false gods, mere man-made idols, cf. 40:20+, later becomes a common theme of Jewish literature, cf. Ba 6:1-72.

Part two

Thus says God, Yahweh,
he who created the heavens and spread them out,
who gave shape to the earth and what comes from it,
who gave breath to its people
and life to the creatures that move in it:

I, Yahweh, have called you to serve the cause of right;
I have taken you by the hand and formed^e you;
I have appointed you as covenant of the people and light of the nations,

to open the eyes of the blind,
to free captives from prison,
and those who live in darkness from the dungeon.

My name is Yahweh,^f
I will not yield my glory to another, nor my honour to idols.

See how former predictions have come true.
Fresh things I now foretell;
before they appear I tell you of them.

Hymn of triumph^g

Sing a new hymn to Yahweh!
Let his praise resound from the ends of the earth,
let the sea and all that it holds sing his praises,^h
the islands and those who inhabit them.

Let the desert and its cities raise their voice,
the camp where Kedar lives.

Let the inhabitants of Sela cry aloud and shout from the mountain tops.

Let them give glory to Yahweh and let the people of the islands voice his praise.

Yahweh advances like a hero,
his fury is stirred like a warrior's.

He gives the war shout, raises the hue and cry, marches valiantly against his foes.

'From the beginning' I have been silent,
I have kept quiet, held myself in check.
I groan like a woman in labour,
I suffocate, I stifle.

Look and see, you blind! 6:9-10

Mt 13:9-15
- 20 You have seen many things but not observed them;
your ears are open but you do not hear.
- 21 It is Yahweh's will, for the sake of his integrity, to make his Law great and glorious.
- 22 But this is a people all pillaged and plundered, be God's witness before the nations, cf. 41:8+. But the four 'songs of the servant of Yahweh', 42:1-9; 49:1-6; 50:4-11; 52:13-53:12, present a mysterious 'servant' who in some ways is like the servant-Israel of the other passages (a gloss in 49:3 actually identifies him with Israel); in 49:5-6 however he is distinguished from this servant-Israel and contrasted with him by other qualities which show that this mysterious servant is a particular individual. Called by Yahweh while still in his mother's womb, 49:1,5 (cf. Jr 1:5), 'formed' by him, 42:6; 49:5, filled with his spirit, 42:1, the servant is a 'disciple' and Yahweh has opened his ears, 50:4-5, so that, by establishing justice on earth, 42:1,3, he may instruct mankind, 42:4; 50:4, sort them and judge them by his word, 50:10-11. He performs his task gently and without display, 42:2-3; even appears to fail in it, 49:4. He accepts outrage and contempt, 50:5-6; 52:14; 53:2-3; he does not succumb, because Yahweh sustains him, 42:4; 49:5; 50:7,9. The fourth song, some details of which may have been inspired by the life of Jeremiah (cf. also Ps 22), considers the suffering of this servant: like Job he is innocent, 53:9, but treated as an evil-doer whom God has punished, 53:4,12, condemned to a shameful death, 53:8-9. In fact however all this is his own free offering for sinners whose guilt he takes on himself and for whom he intercedes, 53:4-5,8,11-12; and by a hitherto undreamed-of act of power, 52:15-53:1, from this atoning suffering Yahweh brings the salvation of all men, 53:6,10-12. Therefore the servant will grow great, 52:13; he 'will see a posterity', 53:10, and hordes of the redeemed will be his, 53:12. He will not only 'gather' Israel, 49:5-6, but he will be the light of the nations, 42:6; 49:6, cf. 50:10. The New Testament, cf. Mt 3:17+; Lk 4:17-21; Ac 3:13+; 8:32-33, sees Jesus as this servant; in his person the attributes of the King-Messiah, Son of David, 2 S 7:1+; Is 7:14+, are united with those of the suffering servant.

b. Yahweh is speaking. He designates and consecrates the servant.

c. The spirit of the prophets, cf. Is 11:2+, the outpouring of which is the clearest sign of the messianic age, Jl 3:1-5, cf. Ac 2:16-21.

e. In Hebr. the same word as in Gn 2:7 to describe Yahweh, 'modelling' the body of the first man.

f. The name revealed to Moses, Ex 3:14+, of the one who alone exists. There is no other God, cf. Is 40:25; 43:10-12; 44:6-8; 45:3,5-6,14-15,18,20-22; 46:5,7,9; 48:11; cf. 41:21-29. He is the creator of all things, 40:12f,21f,28; 42:5; 43:1; 44:24; 45:9-12; 48:13; 51:13; 54:5, eternal, 41:4; 44:6; 48:12, 'the God of the whole earth', 54:5. He 'yields his glory to no other', 42:8 and 48:11. The exultant monotheism of the Book of Consolation thus resumes the earlier theme of the 'jealousy' of Yahweh, Dt 4:4+; cf. Ex 20:3, reinforcing it with an explicit assertion of the transcendence of God.

A satire on idolatry^g

They are all makers of idols; they are nothing and the works they prize are useless. Their servants^h see nothing, they understand nothing, and so they will

10 be put to shame. •Who ever fashioned a god or cast an image without hope of 11 gain? •Watch how its devotees will be put to shame, how its sculptors will blush.ⁱ Let them all come together, let them appear in court. They will be both terrified and ashamed.

 He works on it with his strong arm till he is hungry and tired; drinking no water, he is exhausted.^k

13 The wood carver takes his measurements, outlines the image with chalk, carves it with chisels, following the outline with dividers. He shapes it to human 14 proportions, and gives it a human face, for it to live in a temple. •He cut down a cedar, or else took a cypress or an oak which he selected from the trees in the 15 forest, or maybe he planted a cedar and the rain made it grow. •For the common man it is so much fuel; he uses it to warm himself, he also burns it to bake his bread. But this fellow makes a god of it and worships it; he makes an idol of it 16 and bows down before it. •Half of it he burns in the fire, on the live embers^l he roasts meat, eats it and is replete. He warms himself too. 'Ah!' says he 'I am 17 warm; I have a fire here!' •With the rest he makes his god, his idol; he bows down before it and worships it and prays to it. 'Save me,' he says 'because you are my god.'

k. With Greek and Lat.; Hebr. 'you have troubled yourself'.

l. The Law did indeed impose these duties but the latter did not constitute the essential part of religion.
 The ancient legislative texts, the Code of the Covenant and Dt, lay no great emphasis on ritual, while the prophets give justice and charity pride of place.

m. An aromatic reed used in Eastern religious observances.

n. 'blot out everything' following some MSS and Vulg.; 'blot out your sins for my own sake' Hebr.

o. 'Cast your mind back' corr.: 'Remind me' Hebr.
 p. Jacob. Alluding to Gn 27:1-29 and possibly Gn 30:25-43; 32:2-23.

q. The prophets, intermediaries between the nation and God.

r. Following Greek, Hebr. 'I profaned the princes of the sanctuary'.

44 a. This name for Israel, of uncertain meaning, appears only here and in Dt 32 and 33. The versions substitute 'Israel' here.

b. 'like grass where there is plenty of water' Greek and Syr.

c. As the devotees of some religions tattooed the name of their god on their skin. Cf. Rv 13:16.

d. 'call himself' Symmachus. 'be surnamed' Targ.
 and Syr.

e. Hebr. inserts 'Yahweh', absent from Greek.

f. These two lines corr. Hebr. 'since my establishing of an eternal people, and things to come have been revealed to them'.

g. This prose passage is apparently an interpolation.

h. 'servants' corr.; 'witnesses' Hebr.

i. 'will blush' corr.; 'are men' Hebr.

j. Hebr. adds 'an axe'.

k. Referring perhaps to a fast observed by the craftsman while making the idol.

l. 'on the live embers' Greek and Syr.

m. Ashes, like dust, symbolise impermanent things.

n. I.e. the futility of idols, if this oracle belongs to the foregoing. If it is independent, it refers to the election of Israel.

Shout for joy, you mountains,
and you, forest and all your trees!
For Yahweh has redeemed Jacob and displayed his glory in Israel.

The might of Yahweh

does the thing he shaped say, 'You have no skill'?
10 Woe to him who says to a father, 'What have you begotten?'
or to a woman, 'To what have you given birth?'

o. 'wizards' corr.; 'babblers' Hebr.

p. Or, following the versions 'I it is who say'.

45 a. This oracle resumes the theme of the call of Cyrus, cf. 41:1-5. It goes further, however, calling Cyrus 'the anointed of Yahweh', a title originally reserved to the king of Israel, 1 S 9:26+, and later becoming a messianic title ('anointed' is the English equivalent of mashiah, 'Messiah', in the Greek christos). Cyrus is 'summoned by name', vv. 3 and 4, by Yahweh who is unknown to him, vv. 4 and 5, with the same call, a creative force, received by the prophets and kings.

b. They are rendered powerless; the weapons fall from their belts.

c. The first two verses of this oracle may belong to the foregoing poem.

d. The Hebrew word sedaq here rendered 'victory' is usually translated 'integrity', 'righteousness', 'justice' (Vulg. 'the Just One'); so also sedaqah, 'deliverance', at the end of the verse. The Vulg. translation, which individualises the messianic hope in v. 8, is used in the Rorate coeli of the Advent liturgy.

e. The first part of Is has already compared the messianic prince with a branch from the Davidic stock, 6:13; 11:1. 'Branch' is a messianic title in Jr 23:5; 33:15; Zc 3:8; 6:12, and cf. the earlier text, Is 4:2+.

f. 'Can it argue' corr.; 'Woe to him who argues' Hebr.

g. As Yahweh 'fashioned' or 'modelled' the body of Adam, Gn 2:7.

i. This world-view, foreseeing a future gathering of the nations round Jerusalem to worship the God of Israel, is already found in Is 2:2-4 (= Mi 4:1-3); Jr 12:15-16; 16:19-21; Zp 3:9-10. It is one of the key ideas of the Book of Consolation, Is 42:1-4,6; 45:14-16,20-25; 49:6; 55:3-5; cf. 60. It reappears after the Exile, cf. Zc 2:15; 8:20-23; 14:9,16. See also Ps 87 and Jon.

Jr 27:8,11; 28; 30:8; Is 9:3; 10:27. But Yahweh, true to himself, has not rejected his people, vv. 9-11, and the light of his salvation will pierce the eyes of the blind who have rebelled, 42:7,16,18; 43:8f.

And so I revealed things beforehand, 5

For Zion was saying, 'Yahweh has abandoned me,
the Lord has forgotten me'.

Does a woman forget her baby at the breast,
or fail to cherish the son of her womb?

Yet even if these forget,
I will never^h forget you.

See, I have branded you on the palms of my hands,
Your ramparts are always under my eye.
Your rebuildersⁱ make haste,
and your destroyers and despoilers depart.

Look round about you, look,
all are assembling, coming to you.

By my life—it is Yahweh who speaks—
you will wear these as your jewels,
they will adorn you as brides are adorned;
for your desolate places and your ruins and your devastated country will now be too small for all your inhabitants,

now that your devourers are far away.

Once more they will speak in your hearing,
those sons you thought were lost,

'This place is too small for me,
give me more space to live in'.

You will then say in your heart,
'Who has borne me these?

I was childless and barren,^j
who has brought these up?

Like a sapling he grew up in front of us, ^a like a root ^b in arid ground. Without beauty, without majesty (we saw him), no looks to attract our eyes; a thing despised and rejected by men, a man of sorrows and familiar with suffering, a man to make people screen their faces; ^c he was despised and we took no account of him. And yet ours were the sufferings he bore, ours the sorrows he carried. But we, we thought of him as someone punished, struck by God, and brought low. First Yahweh delivers an oracle, v. 13, then the kings of the nations speak, vv. 14f, and next the people; the poem ends with a further oracle, 53:11-12. It is difficult to decide, however, precisely where the speaker changes.

e. 'cause' corr.; 'generation', 'descent' Hebr. Interpretation uncertain. The 'who will explain his descent?' of the Greek and Lat. has been taken by Christian tradition to refer to the mysterious origin of Christ; the Hebr. dor (a generation) cannot however bear this sense.

f. 'our' corr.; 'of my people' Hebr.

g. With DSIa; Hebr. 'in his death he is with the rich man'. Early Christian preaching seems to have had this text in mind when recording the burial of Jesus in the tomb of Joseph of Arimathea, 'a rich man', Mt 27:57-60. It is possible to correct to 'in his death he is with the evil-doers', cf. Lk 22:37 which, however, refers rather to v. 12.

e. These two lines are probably a gloss.

f. 'his own interest' Greek. Hebr. adds 'to the last one'.

57 a. Possibly alluding to the persecution under Manasseh.

b. Plural, following Greek.

c. Following Greek; Hebr. 'offspring of an adulterer and you prostitute yourself'.

d. 'in' following Greek. Allusion to the human sacrifice of Canaanite cults.

e. This oracle, like the foregoing, is probably pre-exilic. In the manner of the 7th century prophets. Jr 1:16; 7:18, etc., Ezk 8 etc., it attacks the idolatry of Jerusalem, cf. Is 2:6-8.

f. A domestic idol standing by the threshold or over the door.

A poem of consolation^m

	It shall be said:	14
Ps 68:4	Open up, open up, clear the way, remove all obstacles from the way of my people.
	For thus speaks the Most High,	15 whose home is in eternity, whose name is holy:
Lv 17:1+
Ps 51:17; 138:6 Pr 16:19 Zp 2:3	'I live in a high and holy place, but I am also with the contrite and humbled spirit, to give the humbled spirit new life, to revive contrite hearts.
Ps 103:9	'For I will not quarrel for ever nor be always angry, for then the spirit would give way before me, the very souls I have made.	16
54:8+	'Angered by his wicked brutality, I hid my face ⁿ and struck him in anger. Like a rebel he went the way of his choice; but I have seen the way he went.	17
Ex 15:26		18
	'But I will heal him, and console him, ^o I will comfort him to the full, both him and his afflicted fellows, bringing praise to their lips.	19
Dn 9:7 Ac 2:39 Ep 2:17	Peace, peace to far and near, I will indeed heal him' says Yahweh.
Jm 1:6 Jude 13	The wicked however are like the restless sea that cannot be still, and washes up mud and slime.	20
48:22	'No peace' says my God 'for the wicked.'	21

	Shout for all you are worth, raise your voice like a trumpet. ^b Proclaim their faults to my people, their sins to the House of Jacob.	1
	They seek me day after day, they long to know my ways, like a nation that wants to act with integrity and not ignore the law of its God.	2
	They ask me for laws that are just, they long for God to draw near: 'Why should we fast if you never see it, why do penance if you never notice?'	3
Mt 6:18	Look, you do business on your fastdays, ^c you oppress all your workmen; look, you quarrel and squabble when you fast and strike the poor man with your fist. ^d	4
	Fasting like yours today will never make your voice heard on high. Is that the sort of fast that pleases me, a truly penitential day for men?	5

Hanging your head like a reed, lying down on sackcloth and ashes?
Is that what you call fasting,
a day acceptable to Yahweh?

Ji 2:13

6 Is not this the sort of fast that pleases me
—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks^e—

to break unjust fetters
and undo the thongs of the yoke,

Jr 34:8-9

to clothe the man you see to be naked and not turn from your own kin?

and the glory of Yahweh behind you.

The sabbath

13 If you refrain from trampling the sabbath, and doing business on the holy day,

m. This poem, dating from after the return from exile, tells of Yahweh's care for the 'poor', cf. Zp 2:3+, like many Psalms of the same period.

n. 'I hid my face' indicates either God's displeasure or the hidden nature of his intervention.

o. 'console' following Greek; 'lead' Hebr.

58 a. Post-exilic oracle, cf. v. 12 and note. It insists on inward religion that must accompany outward observance in the spirit of the great prophets, cf. Am 5: 21+. The liturgy uses this passage at the beginning of Lent.

b. Feasts and the beginning of fasts were proclaimed by trumpet.

c. The only fast prescribed by the Law was for the day of Atonement, Lv 23:26-32, cf. Lv 16:1+; it seems, however, that at certain periods fasts were added either to commemorate national misfortunes, cf. Zc 7:1-5; 8:18-19, or to implore God's mercy.

d. 'the poor man with' versions; 'with wicked (fist)' Hebr.

e. 'it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks' added with Greek. The gospel will elaborate this profound concept of penance which must be accompanied by charity.

f. 'if you give' corr.; Hebr. 'give'. 'your bread' versions and MSS; 'your soul' Hebr.

g. 'You will rebuild' following Greek; 'They will build from you' Hebr. 'in ruins' corr.; 'paths' Hebr. This allusion suggests dating the prophecy between the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar and its restoration by Nehemiah.

if you call the sabbath 'Delightful', and the day sacred to Yahweh 'Honourable',
if you honour it by abstaining from travel,
from doing business and from gossip,
then shall you find your happiness in Yahweh
and I will lead you triumphant over the heights of the land.
I will feed you on the heritage of Jacob your father.
For the mouth of Yahweh has spoken.

Above you Yahweh now rises and above you his glory appears.
The nations come to your light and kings to your dawning brightness.

3

Lift up your eyes and look round:
all are assembling and coming towards you,
your sons from far away

for the sake of the Holy One of Israel who has made you glorious.

Foreigners will rebuild your walls and their kings will be your servants.
For though I struck you in anger,
in mercy I have pitied you.

And your gates will lie open continually,

b. The riches of the sea (i.e. of the maritime powers, Phoenicia and Greece) come by ship from the west. The riches of the East and of Egypt come by caravans across the deserts of Syria and Sinai respectively. Midian, Ephah and Sheba are peoples of Arabia. The liturgy applies this text to the visit of the Magi, Mt 2: 1-12; the immediate significance of the text is somewhat different but its worldwide outlook, cf. Is 45:14+, makes the application apt.

c. Kedar, 21:16-17, is a tribe of nomad bedouin. Nebaioth a small Arabian tribe.

d. Line corr.; Hebr. 'for the islands are waiting for me'.

e. 'will lie open' following versions. 'leading them' corr.; 'led' Hebr.

f. V. 12 is probably a gloss.

g. The cedars. These will be used to build the new Jerusalem as previously they had been used to build the Temple of Solomon, 1 K 5:15f.

h. A new name and, like that given by Isaiah, 1:26+, a symbolic one. Equally symbolic are the names which follow: of walls and gates, 60:18, of Zion and its territory, 62:4, of city and inhabitants, 62:12.

i. 'abandoned' Greek; 'with none passing through' Hebr.

j. 'the riches' following Greek; 'the breasts' Hebr.

k. The walls and gates of Jerusalem had names. Here new names are given; they are symbolic, cf. 60:14+ and 1:26+. Similar names are given in Rv. to the gates and foundations of the new Jerusalem, Rv 21:12,14.

l. 'that Yahweh has' DS1a; 'that I have' Hebr.

m. 'have spoken' restored conj.

61 a. This poem may have originally formed part of the collection ch. 60-62, or may have been added by a disciple.

Lv 25:10+	to proclaim a year of favour from Yahweh, a day of vengeance for our God,	2
Mt 5:5 Ps 30:11	to comfort all those who mourn ^b and to give them for ashes a garland; for mourning robe the oil of gladness, for despondency, praise. They are to be called 'terebinths of integrity', planted by Yahweh to glorify him.	3
58:12	They will rebuild the ancient ruins, they will raise what has long lain waste, they will restore the ruined cities, all that has lain waste for ages past.	4
14:1-2	Strangers will be there to feed your flocks, foreigners as your ploughmen and vinedressers; but you, you will be named 'priests of Yahweh', they will call you 'ministers of our God'. You will feed on the wealth of nations and array yourselves ^c in their magnificence.	5
Ex 19:6+ Rv 1:6; 5:11	For their shame ^d was twofold, disgrace and spitting ^e their lot. Twofold therefore shall they possess in their land, everlasting joy is theirs.	6
55:3+	For I, Yahweh, love justice, I hate robbery and all that is wrong. ^f I reward them faithfully and make an everlasting covenant with them.	7
Gn 12:2+ Ps 45:17; 149:4 1 S 2:1 Lk 1:46f	Their race will be famous throughout the nations, their descendants throughout the peoples. All who see them will admit that they are a race whom Yahweh has blessed.	8
Ps 132:16 Ba 5:2	'I exult for joy in Yahweh, my soul rejoices in my God, for he has clothed me in the garments of salvation, he has wrapped me in the cloak of integrity, like a bridegroom wearing his wreath, ^g like a bride adorned in her jewels.	9
Rv 19:8; 21:2	'For as the earth makes fresh things grow, as a garden makes seeds spring up, so will the Lord Yahweh make both integrity and praise spring up in the sight of the nations.'	10
45:8 Ps 5:11		11

Second poem on the glorious resurrection of Jerusalem

Tb 13:16	About Zion I will not be silent, about Jerusalem I will not grow weary, until her integrity shines out like the dawn and her salvation flames like a torch. ^a	1
Ps 45:17	The nations then will see your integrity, all the kings your glory, and you will be called by a new name, one which the mouth of Yahweh will confer. You are to be a crown of splendour in the hand of Yahweh, a princely diadem in the hand of your God;	2

- 4 no longer are you to be named 'Forsaken', nor your land 'Abandoned',^b
but you shall be called 'My Delight' and your land 'The Wedded';^c for Yahweh takes delight in you and your land will have its wedding.
- 5 Like a young man marrying a virgin,
so will the one who built you wed you,^d
and as the bridegroom rejoices in his bride, so will your God rejoice in you.
- 6 On your walls, Jerusalem,
I set watchmen.
Day or night
they must never be silent.
- You who keep Yahweh mindful must take no rest.
Nor let him take rest
till he has restored Jerusalem, and made her
the boast of the earth.
- 8 Yahweh has sworn it by his right hand
and by his mighty arm:
Never again shall I give your corn
to feed your enemies.
Never again will foreigners drink your wine that you laboured for.
- 9 But those who gather the harvest will eat it and praise Yahweh.
Those who gathered the grapes will drink
in the courts of my sanctuary.

- 10 Pass through, pass through the gates.
Make a way for the people.
Bank up, bank up the highway,
clear it of stones.
Hoist the signal for the peoples.
- 11 This Yahweh proclaims
to the ends of the earth:

An apocalyptic poem on the vengeance of Yahweh^a 34:1-17

Rv 19:13

Who is this coming from Edom,
from Bozrah in garments stained^b with crimson,
so richly clothed,
marching^c so full of strength?
—It is I, who speak of integrity and am powerful to save.

1

—Why are your garments red,
your clothes as if you had trodden the winepress?

2

—I have trodden the winepress alone.
Of the men of my people^d not one was with me.
In my anger I trod them down,
trampled them in my wrath.
Their juice spattered my garments,
and all my clothes are stained.

For in my heart was a day of vengeance,
my year of redemption had come.
I looked: there was no one to help;
aghast: not one could I find to support me.

My own arm then was my mainstay,
my wrath my support.
I crushed the people in my fury,
trampled them^e in my anger,
and made the juice of them run all over the ground.

^c 1 Co 2:9

63 a. Poem written in the form of a dialogue between Yahweh and the prophet.

b. Yahweh is represented as one who treads the grapes, his garments stained red. But what he has been treading are the nations, whose blood has spattered him, and who are represented by Edom. Some emend 'Edom' and 'Bozrah' and translate 'Who is this that comes all in red, in crimson garments like a wine-harvester?'; hence the application of the passage to the suffering Messiah.

c. 'marching' following Symmachus and Latin; 'bowing' Hebr.

d. 'men of my people' DSIa; 'of the peoples' Hebr.

e. 'trampled them' several MSS; 'made them drunk' Hebr.

f. This great psalm must date from the last years of the Exile or the first of the return. It recalls the past history of Israel, celebrates the reconciliation with God, and begs Yahweh to come and restore the city and the Temple.

g. Hebr. adds 'towards the House of Israel'.

h. 'neither messenger nor angel' following Greek and Lat.; 'he was not afflicted and an angel of his face' Hebr.

i. 'They remembered' corr.; 'He remembered' Hebr. 'his servant' Syr.; 'his people' Hebr. 'of Moses his servant' omitted by Greek and Lat.

j. 'brought out' DSIa and versions; 'brought them out' Hebr.

k. Israel or Moses.

l. The Red Sea is referred to in terms of the primordial Abyss vanquished by Yahweh, cf. Jb 7:12+.

m. Text corr. following Greek.

n. Not the nation but the patriarch (Jacob = Israel) after whom it was named.

o. Text corr.; Hebr. corrupt.

64 a. Hebr. here repeats 'that you would come down —at your Presence the mountains would melt'.

b. 'No ear has heard' with 1 Co 2:9; 'No one has heard' Hebr.

 You were angry when we were sinners;
 we had long been rebels against you.^d
 We were all like men unclean,
 all that integrity of ours like filthy clothing.
 We have all withered like leaves and our sins blew us away like the wind.
 No one invoked your name
 or roused himself to catch hold of you.
 For you hid your face from us
 and gave us up^e to the power of our sins.
 And yet, Yahweh, you are our Father;
 we the clay, you the potter,
 we are all the work of your hand.
 Do not let your anger go too far, Yahweh,
 or go on thinking of our sins for ever.
 See, see, we are all your people;
 your holy cities are a wilderness,
 Zion a wilderness,
 Jerusalem a desolation,
 our holy and glorious Temple,
 in which our fathers prayed to you,
 is burnt to the ground;
 all that gave us pleasure lies in ruins.
 Yahweh, can you go unmoved by all of this,
 oppressing us beyond measure by your silence?

A diatribe against idolatry; eschatological discourse^a

65 I was ready to be approached by those who did not consult me, ready to be found by those who did not seek me.^b I said, 'I am here, I am here', to a nation that did not invoke my name. •Each day I stretched out my hand to a rebellious people who went by evil ways, following their own whims, •a people who provoked me to my face incessantly, sacrificing in gardens, burning incense on bricks, •living in tombs, spending nights in dark corners,^c eating the meat of pigs, using unclean foods in their kitchens. •'Keep off,' they say 'do not come near me, or I might sanctify you.'^d Such men are smoke in my nostrils, an ever burning fire. •See, it is inscribed in front of me; I will not be silent until
 I have settled my account with them •for their sins and their fathers'^e sins, says Yahweh, those men who burned incense on the mountains and insulted me on the hills. I will pay them back in full all they deserve.

Yahweh says this: When new wine is found in a bunch of grapes people say, 'Do not destroy it, it contains a blessing'. I shall do the same for the sake of those who serve me. I refuse to destroy the whole. •I will create a race from Jacob, and heirs to my mountains from Judah. My chosen shall inherit them, my servants live in them. •Sharon will be a pasture for flocks, the Valley of Achor a feeding ground for oxen, for those of my people who have sought me.

But you who have abandoned Yahweh,
 and forgotten my holy mountain, who lay the table for Gad,
 who fill a cup for Meni,^f
 I commit you to the sword,
 all of you to fall in the slaughter.
 For I called and you would not answer,

19 creating, because I now create Jerusalem 'Joy' and her people 'Gladness'. •I shall rejoice over Jerusalem and exult in my people. No more will the sound of weeping 20 or the sound of cries beheard in her; •in her, no more will befound the infant living a few days only, or the old man not living to the end of his days. To die at the age of a hundred will be dying young; not to live to be a hundred will be the 21 sign of a curse. •They will build houses and inhabit them, plant vineyards and 22 eat their fruit. •They will not build for others to live in, or plant so that others can eat. For my people shall live as long as trees, and my chosen ones wear out 23 what their hands have made. •They will not toil in vain or beget children to their own ruin, for they will be a race blessed by Yahweh, and their children 24 with them. •Long before they call I shall answer; before they stop speaking 25 I shall have heard. •The wolf and the young lamb will feed together, the lion eat straw like the ox, and dust will be the serpent's food. They will do no hurt, no harm on all my holy mountain, says Yahweh.ⁱ 51:6; 66:22

c. Hebr. inserts 'who rejoice', a gloss.

d. Text corr. following Greek and Latin.

e. 'gave up' following versions; 'caused to tremble'

Hebr.

65 a. Ch. 65 and 66 (66:1, 2 excepted) apparently form one apocalypse. They may date from the return from exile or later.

b. The Jews.

c. Probably alluding to the practice of spending the night in the corner of a sanctuary to obtain a dream-revelation.

d. 'I might sanctify you' following Symmachus and Theodotion; Hebr. uncertain. Initiates claim that their sanctity is contagious.

e. 'their... their' versions; 'your... your' Hebr.

f. This 'Gad' is the Aramaean god of good fortune; Meni is a god mentioned elsewhere.

g. Understand 'like them'.

h. 'my servants are to be given' Greek and Lat.

i. The coming restoration will be like a new creation. On this return to the conditions of the earthly paradise, cf. 11:6+.

66 a. This oracle must have been delivered after the Temple had been rebuilt. It warns against an unduly materialistic notion of the presence of God in the Holy of Holies.

1 a. Here 'words' means 'discourses and doings'—the 'story' of Jeremiah.

b. A village near Jerusalem to which Abiathar the priest had been exiled by Solomon.

c. Formula introducing the narrative of the prophet's call (626), 1:4-19.

d. This verse refers to the years from 608 to July 587;

it does not therefore apply to ch. 40-44.

e. To 'know' means, for God, to choose and predestine, cf. Am 3:2; Rm 8:29. On man's 'knowledge' of God, cf. Ho 2:22+.

f. A designation for the prophetic function rather than an inward sanctification.

g. The ancient Phoenician colony of Kiton (Citium) in Cyprus; but here the term must include the coasts and islands of the Mediterranean. Here the text adds 'and see'.

h. Tribe of Transjordanian nomads; here representing the East, as Kittim does the West.

i. The monotheism of the early prophets involves the rejection of alien gods which, for them, are 'vanity', 'emptiness', 'helplessness', 'nothing'. After the Exile this implied condemnation becomes explicit in formal demonstrations of their non-existence, see Is 41:21 +; 40:20 +; cf. Jr 10:1-16.

k. 'shaved' conj.; 'broken' Hebr. Noph is Memphis, capital of Lower Egypt; Tahpanhes is a frontier town to the E. of the Delta. Jeremiah alludes to the Egyptian intervention of 608-605.

l. Hebr. adds 'when he led you in the way'.

m. 'Nile' lit. 'Shihor', a branch of the Nile; 'the river' is the Euphrates. These metaphors stand for the policy of appealing to the great powers; the prophets unanimously opposed this policy.

n. Israel while proclaiming its self-sufficiency is enslaved to false gods. In this passage, as in Ho, cf. Ho 1:2+, prostitution signifies idolatry, with secondary reference to sacred prostitution, cf. Dt 23:19+.

o. 'a degenerate plant' conj.

p. The Valley of Ben-hinnom or Gehenna where Topheth was, cf. Jr 7:31 and Lv 18:21+.

q. Lit. 'entangling her ways'.

r. 'bolts' conj. 'with her mate', lit. 'in her lair', conj. based on Greek.

s. The last two lines following Greek and 11:13; Hebr. omits.

t. 'you' Greek; 'they' Hebr.

u. Lit. 'See the word of Yahweh', the text is uncertain.

v. 'hands' Greek. 'the... blood', Hebr. inserts 'poor' before 'innocent'. He means either murdered prophets or sacrificed children, cf. 3:24; 7:31; 19:5, cf. Lv 18:21+.

The Northern Kingdom urged to repent^f

Is 50:1 In the days of King Josiah, Yahweh said to me, 'Have you seen what disloyal 6 Ezk 16:1; Israel has done? How she has made her way up every high hill and to every 23 spreading tree, and has prostituted herself^g there? •I thought: After doing all 7

 Dt 24:1 Judah saw this. •She also saw^h that I had repudiated disloyal Israel for all her 8 was not afraid: she too went and played the whore. •So shameless was her 9 whoring that at last she polluted the country; she committed adultery with lumps of stone and pieces of wood.ⁱ •Worse than all this: Judah, her faithless sister, has 10 not come back to me in sincerity, but only in pretence—it is Yahweh who speaks.'

And Yahweh said to me, 'Beside faithless Judah, disloyal Israel seems virtuous. 11
 So go and shout these words towards the North: 12

b. Following Greek; Hebr. 'may he go back to her?' Dt 24:1-4 forbids such remarriage. Israel, though not repudiated by God, has been so unfaithful that her return and reconciliation would be a miracle of grace, cf. vv. 19f; 31:23; Ho 1-3.

c. An expression not uncommon in Jr; here it indicates the 'high places'.

d. 'even then' corr.

e. Lit. 'Thus (hennah) you spoke' corr.; Hebr. hinneh 'behold'.

f. This section dates from the reign of Josiah and is to be assigned to the period following the reform of 621. It attests Jeremiah's consistent hope for the Northern Kingdom, cf. 30:1-31:22. It seems to have inspired Ezk 23.

g. '(she) prostituted' corr.; Hebr. 'you (sing.) prostituted'.

h. 'She saw' Syr.; 'I saw' Hebr.

i. Allusion to the syncretic cult in the reigns of Manasseh and Amon.

j. 'you' (sing.) corr.; 'you' (plur.) Hebr.

k. False gods. Hebr. adds 'under every spreading tree'.

l. Singular Greek and Vulg.; Hebr. has plural.

m. This passage presupposes the events of 587.

n. 'Where is' conj.

o. Evidently the ark had been destroyed with the Temple by the Chaldeans in 587. Jerusalem itself is to become 'the throne of Yahweh' as the ark had formerly been, Ex 25:10 +; 2 S 6:7 +.

p. Hebr. adds 'in Jerusalem'.

q. For messianic days the prophets foretell a kingdom united as in the time of David and Solomon, Jr 23:5-6; 31:1; Ezk 37:15-27; Ho 2:2; Is 11:13-14; Mi 2:12; Zc 9:10.

r. Continued from v. 5. What law did not permit, v. 1, grace makes possible.

s. Lit. 'thou wouldst call... wouldst never cease' qere, Targ., Vulg.; Hebr. 'you' (plur.) in each case.

t. The verse is translated according to the Greek.

u. Contrasting with 3:2.

v. In v. 22 Yahweh appeals, the repentant community answers.

w. Following Greek. God brings down the high and mighty.

x. A name for Baal.

1:13-15 Invasion from the North^d

Announce it in Judah, 5 proclaim it in Jerusalem!

an immense calamity.

Na 2:12 The lion is up from his thicket, 7
the destroyer of nations is on his way,
he has come from his home

to reduce your land to a desert;
your towns will be in ruins, deserted.
So wrap yourselves in sackcloth, 8 lament and wail,

since the burning anger of Yahweh
has not turned away from us.

'That day—it is Yahweh who speaks— 9
the king's heart will fail him,
the princes' hearts will fail them too,
the priests will stand aghast,
the prophets stupefied.

People will say, "Ah, Lord Yahweh, 10
how utterly you deceived us^e

14:13 by saying: You will have peace,^f—even when the sword is at our throats!"

When that time comes, this will be said 11

to this people and to Jerusalem:

4 a. Following Greek.

b. ‘you’ corr.; ‘him’ Hebr. The promise to Abraham is renewed.

c. For Israel, circumcision, Gn 17:10+, was the symbol of the covenant. For Jeremiah the symbol is meaningless without inward devotion, ‘circumcision of the heart’, cf. Dt 10:16. Israel refuses to listen to God, he has ‘uncircumcised ears’, Jr 6:10; he refuses to repent, he has an ‘uncircumcised heart’, 9:24-25, cf. Lv 26:41. Yahweh himself, by converting Israel, will circumcise its heart, Dt 30:6. Foreigners are said to be uncircumcised in heart and flesh, Ezk 44:7. The N.T. uses the same metaphor, Ac 7:51, and St Paul teaches that true circumcision, the circumcision which is the mark of the true Israel, is that of the heart, Rm 2:25-29, cf. 1 Co 7:19; Ga 5:6; 6:15; Ph 3:3; Col 2:11; 3:11.

d. Here, as in 1:15, the enemy from the north is not any nation in particular. Jeremiah possibly has in mind both the Scythians (who, between 630-625, are found on the Syria-Palestine frontier) and the Assyrians. In 605, when the Chaldaean invasion threatened, this prophetic oracle would have alarming relevance.

e. ‘People will say’ following Greek; ‘And I said’ Hebr. ‘us’ corr.; ‘this people and Jerusalem’ (v. 11) Hebr.

f. Allusion to the promises of the false prophets.

g. ‘blows from the desert’ corr.

h. ‘full of threats’ corr.

i. The ‘destroyer’ of v. 7.

j. ‘announce it in Judah’ corr. ‘enemies’ corr. following Greek.

f. Following Greek. Yahweh instructs Jeremiah to collect a few who will listen to him. Vv. 10-11 express the prophet's discouragement; Yahweh's answer follows.

g. Here, as in 8:3, the expression is still not technical. It becomes so in 23:3; 31:7 (there translated 'remnant'), indicating the faithful Israel, heir to the blessings to come, cf. Is 4:3+.

h. 'But I' corr.

i. Allusion to the lying promises of the false prophets, 14:13; 23:17; 28:8-9, of whom Jeremiah is to make bitter enemies by his forecasts of disaster. They foretell 'peace', shalom, which for the Hebrew means not merely the absence of external danger (a primary preoccupation in the times of Jeremiah) but an ideal state of happiness in which individual and nation prosper and social harmony reigns (the 'peace' characterising the messianic age, cf. Is 11:6+). 'Peace! Peace!' could be translated here as 'All is well!'

j. 'on the ways of long ago' corr.

k. The prophets.

l. 'I will do' is here supplied.

m. 'apostasy' Greek; 'scheming' Hebr.

n. 'each man equipped' corr.

o. Hebr. adds 'as a fortress'.

p. 'apostates' Greek. Hebr. adds '(they are but) bronze and iron'.

q. 'to make the fire burn away the lead' following Greek. To purify the silver ore, it is thrown into molten lead, for the silver to separate from the dross which, combining with the oxydised lead, settles at the bottom of the melting-pot. Here the operation fails: no pure metal emerges.

B. ORACLES MAINLY IN THE REIGN OF JEHOIAKIM

26:1-19+ True worship^a*a. Against the Temple^b

Ezk 24:21 7 The word that was addressed to Jeremiah by Yahweh, •‘Go and stand at the ¹/₂ gate of the Temple of Yahweh and there proclaim this message. Say, “Listen to the word of Yahweh, all you men of Judah who come in by these gates to worship Yahweh. •Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this: Amend ³ your behaviour and your actions and I will stay with you^c here in this place. Put no trust in delusive words like these: This is the sanctuary of Yahweh, the ⁴ sanctuary of Yahweh, the sanctuary of Yahweh! •But if you do amend your ⁵ behaviour and your actions, if you treat each other fairly, •if you do not exploit ⁶ the stranger, the orphan and the widow (if you do not shed innocent blood in this place), and if you do not follow alien gods, to your own ruin, •then here ⁷ in this place I will stay with you, in the land that long ago I gave to your fathers for ever. •Yet here you are, trusting in delusive words, to no purpose! ⁸ Steal, would you, murder, commit adultery, perjure yourselves, burn incense to Baal, follow alien gods that you do not know?—•and then come presenting ¹⁰ yourselves in this Temple that bears my name, saying: Now we are safe—safe to go on committing all these abominations! •Do you take this Temple that ¹¹ bears my name for a robbers’ den? I, at any rate, am not blind—it is Yahweh who speaks.

Now go to my place in Shiloh^d where at first I gave my name a home; see ¹² what I have done to it because of the wickedness of my people Israel! •And ¹³ now, since you have committed all these sins—it is Yahweh who speaks—and have refused to listen when I spoke so urgently, so persistently, or to answer when I called you, •I will treat this Temple that bears my name, and in which ¹⁴ you put your trust, and the place I have given to you and your ancestors, just as I treated Shiloh. •I will drive you out of my sight, as I drove all your kinsmen, ¹⁵ the entire race of Ephraim.”

b. Alien gods

11:14; 14:11 •You, for your part, must not intercede for this people, nor raise either plea or ¹⁶ prayer on their behalf; do not plead with me, for I will not listen to you. •Cannot ¹⁷ you see what they are doing in the towns of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem? The children collect the wood, the fathers light the fire, the women knead the ¹⁸ dough, to make cakes for the Queen of Heaven;^e and, to spite me, they pour libations to alien gods. •Is it really me they spite—it is Yahweh who speaks— ¹⁹ is it not in fact themselves, to their own confusion? •Therefore, the Lord ²⁰ Yahweh says this: My anger and my wrath shall be poured out on this place, over man and beast, trees of the countryside, fruits of the soil; it shall burn, and not be quenched.

c. Worship without sincerity

11:15-17 •Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this: Add your holocausts to ²¹ your sacrifices and eat all the meat. •For when I brought your ancestors out of ²² the land of Egypt, I said nothing to them, gave them no orders, about holocaust and sacrifice. •These were my orders: Listen to my voice, then I will be your ²³ God and you shall be my people. Follow right to the end the way that I mark out for you, and you will prosper. •But they did not listen, they did not pay ²⁴ attention; they followed^f the dictates of their own evil hearts, refused to face me, and turned their backs on me. •From the day your ancestors came out of the land ²⁵ of Egypt until today, day after day^g I have persistently sent you all my servants the prophets. •But they have not listened to me, have not paid attention; they ²⁶ have grown stubborn and behaved worse than their ancestors. •You may say all ²⁷ these words to them: they will not listen to you; you may call them: they will 28 not answer. •So tell them this, "Here is the nation that will not listen to the voice of Yahweh its God nor take correction. Sincerity is no more, it has vanished from their mouths.^a Is 7:9 +

d. More about idolatrous worship: a threat of exile

19:1-13

29 "Cut off your tresses, throw them down.
 On the bare heights raise a dirge.
 For Yahweh has rejected, has abandoned,
 a brood that he detests." Mi 1:16

30 'Yes, the sons of Judah have done what displeases me—it is Yahweh who speaks. They have put their abominationsⁱ in the Temple that bears my name, = 32:34 31 to defile it; •they have built the high place^j of Topheth in the Valley of Benhinom, to burn their sons and daughters; a thing I never commanded, a thing 32 that never entered my thoughts. •So now the days are coming—it is Yahweh = 19:6
 who speaks—when people will no longer talk of Topheth or of the Valley of Ben-hinnom, but of the Valley of Slaughter. Topheth will become a burial ground, 33 for lack of other space; •the corpses of this people will feed the birds of heaven 34 and the beasts of the earth, and there shall be no one to drive them away. •I will silence the shouts of rejoicing and mirth, the voices of bridegroom and bride, in the towns of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem, for the whole land will be 1 reduced to desert. 8 When that time comes—it is Yahweh who speaks—the bones of the kings of Judah, and of the princes, of the priests, of the prophets, 2 of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, will be taken from their tombs. •They will be spread out before the sun, the moon, the whole array of heaven, whom they have loved and served, followed, consulted and worshipped.^a They will not be 3 gathered or reburied but stay lying on the surface like dung. •And death will seem preferable to life to all the survivors of this wicked race, wherever I have driven them—it is Yahweh Sabaoth who speaks. Ezk 6:45

7 a. The following discourses, placed together because of their common concern with religious observance, belong to the reign of Jehoiakim.

b. Ch. 26 narrates the events that prompted this tirade delivered in the early days of Jehoiakim (608). That the Temple was sanctified by the presence of Yahweh, 1 K 8:10f, cf. Dt 4:7+, might make it seem indestructible, and Sennacherib's setback outside the very walls of Jerusalem in 701 had shown how Yahweh protected his holy city, 2 K 19:32-34; Is 37:33-35. The conclusion was too readily drawn that this protection would be effective a second time. Jeremiah is about to shock his countrymen, ch. 26, by asserting, like Micah before him, Mi 3:12, that their confidence is illusory: that God may well desert his Temple. Ezekiel similarly was to see the glory of Yahweh abandoning the sanctuary, Ezk 11:23.

c. 'stay with you' Greek A, and Vulg.; 'make you stay' Hebr. So also in v. 7.

Greek; 'for the army' Hebr. The 'Queen of Heaven' is Ishtar, the Assyrian goddess of fertility.

i. I.e. loathsome idols.

j. 'the high place' Greek, Targ.; 'the high places' Hebr.

8 a. Worship of the heavenly bodies was widely practised in the reigns of Manasseh and Amon.

b. This section, 8:4-10:25, is a collection of oracles delivered in the reign of Jehoiakim, about 605. The three poems of 8:4-7; 8:13-18; 9:1-8 resume and expand the reproaches against Israel. The lamentation, 9:9-21, is continued in 10:17-22 and ends with the prayer of Jeremiah in 10:23-24. Other poems of Jeremiah have then been added, 8:8-9; 8:10-12; 8:18-23; 9:22-23; 9:24-25. The fragment 10:1-16 does not seem to be authentic.

c. Hebr. inserts 'Jerusalem', absent from Greek.

Yahweh, there is no one like you,
 so great are you,
 so great your mighty name.

Who would not revere you, King of nations?
 Yes, this is your due.

Since of all the wise among the nations,
 and in all their kingdoms,
 there is not a single one like you.

The whole lot of them^e are brutish and stupid:
 the teaching given by these Nothings is void of sense.^f

But Yahweh is the true God.

He is the living God,
 the everlasting King.

The earth quakes when he is wrathful,
 the nations cannot endure his fury.

("Tell them this, "The gods who did not make the heavens and the earth, will vanish from the earth and from under the heavens".")

By his power he made the earth,
 by his wisdom set the world firm,
 by his discernment spread out the heavens.

When he thunders^g
 there is a tumult of water in the heavens;
 he raises clouds from the boundaries of earth,
 makes the lightning flash for the downpour,
 and brings the wind from his storehouse.

At this all men stand stupefied, uncomprehending,
 every goldsmith blushes for the idol he has made,
 since his images are nothing but delusion,
 with no breath in them.

They are a Nothing, a laughable production;
 when the time comes for them to be punished, they will vanish.

'The Portion of Jacob'^h is not like these,
 for he is the maker of everything,
 and Israel is the tribe that is his heritage.

His name is Yahweh Sabaoth.

 Many days afterwards Yahweh said to me, ‘Get up and go to the Euphrates and fetch the loincloth I ordered you to hide there’. •So I went to the Euphrates, and I searched, and I took the loincloth from the place where I had hidden it. The loincloth was spoilt, good for nothing. •Then the word of Yahweh was addressed to me, •‘Thus says Yahweh: In the same way I will spoil the arrogance of Judah and Jerusalem. •This evil people who refuse to listen to my words, who follow the dictates of their own hard hearts, who have followed alien gods, and we are called by your name.

Do not desert us!

Yahweh says this regarding this people, 'They take such pleasure in 10 wandering, they cannot control their feet!' But Yahweh accepts them no longer;
now he recalls their crime and will punish their sins. •Yahweh said to me, 11
'Do not intercede for this people or their welfare. •If they fast, I will not listen 12 to their plea; if they offer holocaust and oblation, I will not accept them. Rather,
I mean to exterminate them by sword, famine and pestilence.'

•Ah, Lord Yahweh,' I answered 'here are the prophets telling them, "You 13 will not see the sword, famine will not touch you; I promise you unbroken peace in this place".'

14 Then Yahweh said to me, 'The prophets are prophesying lies in my name; I have not sent them, I gave them no orders, I never spoke to them. Delusive visions, hollow predictions, daydreams of their own, that is what they prophesy to you. •Therefore, Yahweh says this: The prophets who prophesy in my name when I have not sent them, and tell you there will be no sword or famine in this land, these same prophets are doomed to perish by sword and famine. 15 And as for the people to whom they prophesy, they will be tossed into the streets of Jerusalem, victims of famine and the sword, with not a soul to bury them: neither them nor their wives, nor their sons, nor their daughters. I will pour down on them their own wickedness. 5:31; 27:10; 29:9

17 'Say this word to them,
"Tears flood my eyes
night and day, unceasingly, since a crushing blow falls on the daughter of my people,"
a most grievous injury.

18 If I go into the countryside,
there lie men killed by the sword;
if I go into the city,
I see people sick with hunger;
even prophets and priests plough the land: they are at their wit's end."

19 'Have you rejected Judah altogether?
Does your very soul revolt at Zion?
Why have you struck us down without hope of cure?
We were hoping for peace—no good came of it!

14 a. Probably in the reign of Jehoiakim (609-598). This dialogue between the prophet and Yahweh has features borrowed from a liturgical lamentation, cf. Jl 1-2; Ps 74 and 79. To the collective confession ascribed to the people, as to the pleading of Jeremiah, Yahweh returns a negative answer, and to the threat of famine adds that of invasion: the description of the famine, 14:2-6; lamentation of the people, vv. 7-9, reply of Yahweh, 10-12; complaint of Jeremiah, 13-16; second description of the famine, 17-18; second lamentation of the people, 19-22; second reply of Yahweh,

e. Another dialogue between God and Jeremiah, cf. 11:18–12:5. It reveals a spiritual crisis of the prophet half-way through his ministry. Here, as in 12:5, God, far from soothing Jeremiah's distress, condemns it as 'despicable' and demands of him a new 'conversion', which he sanctions by renewing, in almost identical terms, the commands and promises of Jeremiah's original call, vv. 19–20, cf. 1:9, 17–19. On these 'confessions of Jeremiah' cf. 11:18–12:5; 15:10–21; 17:14–18; 18:18–23; 20:7–18, and Introduction to the Prophets.

j. 'hope' corr.; 'praise' Hebr.; 'glory' Greek.

k. The threats of Jeremiah have not materialised. The time is therefore before 598.

l. Line corr., cf. 15:11; 'I have not hastened to avoid being a shepherd (i.e. a prophet) in following you' Hebr.

m. Most commentators deny the authenticity of this passage on the grounds of the importance it attributes to the sabbath which is not mentioned elsewhere in Jeremiah.

n. Hebr. adds 'and nobles'.

18 a. The time of this enacted parable is before 598, since the great disaster has not yet taken place, cf. v. 12. Symbolic gesture had accompanied the preaching of the earliest prophets, of Samuel for example, 1 S 15: 27-28, of Ahijah of Shiloh, 1 K 11:29-39, and of the false prophet Zedekiah, 1 K 22:11-12. This procedure was not simply a dramatisation of the spoken prophecy: it was a pre-enactment of the event threatened or promised, in such a way that the event itself became as inevitable as the gesture was irrevocable. The same phenomenon recurs among the 'writing' prophets. Hosea's whole mission is inextricable from a symbolic action which in turn is his private predicament, Ho 1-3. With Isaiah the symbolic gesture is found less frequently, though cf. Is 20 and the symbolic names he gives to his children, Is 7:3 (cf. 10:21); 8:1-4; 8:18, cf. 1:26+. Jeremiah performs, or interprets, many symbolic actions: the almond tree and the pot, 1:11-14; the hidden loin-cloth, 13:1-11 (though this seems only to have been enacted in vision); the potter, 18:1-12; the jug, 19; the figs, 24; the yoke, 27-28; the buying of the field, 32. To which we may add that his life itself is a symbol, 16:1-8, and that his sufferings (though he gives this no emphasis) identify him in advance with the nation itself about to suffer, and make him foreshadow the suffering servant of Yahweh, cf. Is 42:1+. Later, Ezekiel was to perform more symbolic actions: the brick 'besieged', Ezk 4:1-3, the rationed food, 4:9-17; the hair, ch. 5; the mime of the exile, 12:1-20; the pot, 24:3-14; the two sticks, 37:15-28; and he too, like Hosea, interprets his personal experiences symbolically: his illness, 4:4-8, his wife's death, 24:15-24, his dumbness and recovery, 24:27; 33:22. Symbolism of this kind is also found in N.T., cf. the fig tree cursed by Jesus, Mt 21:18-19p, the prophecy of Agabus, Ac 21:10-14.

b. 'against which I have pronounced' omitted by Greek, misplaced in Hebr.

c. By way of commentary on 18:12, the editor has inserted this passage characteristic of the early preaching of Jeremiah, cf. 2:10,32, but very timely under Jehoiakim with the recrudescence of idolatry.

d. 'from the lofty crag', 'run dry', 'proud waters' corr.

e. 'They have lost their footing' Greek. 'tortuous' (tohu) is added.

f. Lit. 'I will show them my back' versions.

Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this: I am bringing down such a disaster on this place that the ears of every one who hears of it will ring. •This is because 4
they have abandoned me, have profaned this place, have offered incense here to alien gods which neither they, nor their ancestors, nor the kings of Judah, ever knew before. They have filled this place with the blood of the innocent. •They 5 have built high places for Baal to burn their sons there,^d which I had never ordered or decreed, which had never entered my thoughts. •So now the 6 days are coming—it is Yahweh who speaks—when people will no longer call this place Topheth, or the Valley of Ben-hinnom, but Valley of Slaughter.
Because of this place, I mean to drain^e Judah and Jerusalem of sound advice; I will 7 make them fall by the sword before their enemies, fall by the hand of people determined to kill them; I will give their corpses as food to the birds of heaven and the beasts of earth. •And I will make this city a desolation, a derision; every 8 passer-by will be appalled at it, and whistle in amazement at such calamity.
I will make them eat the flesh of their own sons and daughters: they shall eat 9 each other during the siege, in the shortage to which their enemies, in their determination to kill them, will reduce them.”

The symbolic action of the jug, performed before a few witnesses near the Gate of the Potsherds and interpreted subsequently in the Temple, thus provoking the animosity of Pashhur: 19:1,2bc, 10-11a, 14-15; 20:1-6. The incident must have taken place about 605, before the events narrated in ch. 36. 2. A discourse delivered at Topheth, addressed to the kings of Judah and the people of Jerusalem: 19:2a,3-9,11b-13; it resumes earlier Jeremian themes which have acquired immediacy under Jehoiakim; it alludes to the jug incident, v. 7.

C. ORACLES MAINLY LATER THAN THE REIGN OF JEHOIAKIM

Jeremiah answers the envoys of Zedekiah^a

34:1-7

21 The word that was addressed to Jeremiah by Yahweh when King Zedekiah 1 sent Pashhur son of Malchiah to him, with the priest Zephaniah son of Ma- 2 aseiah, to say this, 'Please consult Yahweh for us, since Nebuchadnezzar king 2 of Babylon is making war on us: perhaps Yahweh will work all his wonders on 3 our behalf, so that the enemy will have to withdraw'. •Jeremiah said to them, 3
'Take this answer to Zedekiah, •"Yahweh, the God of Israel, says this: I am 4 going to bring back the weapons of war which you are now carrying, and with 4 which you are fighting the king of Babylon and the Chaldeans now besieging 5 your walls; I am going to stack them in the centre of this city. •And I am going 5 to fight against you myself with outstretched hand and mighty arm, in anger, 6 fury and great wrath. •I am going to strike the inhabitants of this city, man 6 and beast, with a frightful plague: they will die. •After which—it is Yahweh 7 who speaks—I am going to deliver Zedekiah king of Judah with his servants and 7
the people of this city who escape the plague, the sword, or the famine, into the 8 hands of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, into the hands of their enemies and 9

of those determined to kill them; mercilessly, relentlessly, pitilessly, he will put them to the sword."

- 8 'And you are to say to this people, "Yahweh says this: Look, I now set 9 in front of you the way of life and the way of death. •Those who stay in this city will die by sword, by famine, or by plague; but anyone who leaves it and surrenders to the Chaldeans now besieging it will live; he shall escape with 10 his life. •For I have turned my face against this city for its ruin, not for its king of Babylon, and he will burn it down."'

f. The enemies of Jeremiah mock him with his own familiar expression, 6:25; 20:3; 46:5; 49:29.

g. 'with justice' two Hebr. MSS, Syr., Arab., cf. 11:20; 'the just man' Hebr. 'committed' corr., cf. 11:20; 'revealed' Hebr. This verse, a repetition of 11:20, does not seem to have belonged here originally.

h. The 'needy', ebion, here in the sense of 'devout', the man who looks to Yahweh for support. The 'poor of Yahweh', cf. Zp 2:3+, are the spiritual children of Jeremiah.

i. Called from his mother's womb, 1:5, Jeremiah curses the day of his birth. This curse, later repeated in Jb 3, marks the climax of his spiritual suffering.

j. 'in the womb' Greek and Syr.; '(coming) from the womb' Hebr.

21 a. The time is the siege of Jerusalem in 588; the passage is perhaps placed here to point the contrast between the Pashhur of v. 1 and the Pashhur of 20:1. The Greek omits several words of this passage.

b. The heading (cf. 23:9) covers the section 21:11-23:8; it indicates a collection that may once have formed a separate unit.

c. Hebr. adds 'for the wickedness of your deeds', cf. 4:4, absent from Greek.

d. Text corr.; Hebr. 'inhabitants of the Valley, of Rock-in-the-Plain'. It is probably addressed to the occupants of the royal palace built on Ophel which looks down on the valley ('plain') of the Kidron. The 'forest' image is repeated in 22:6f where it refers to the cedarwood pillars of the palace, cf. 1 K 7:2.

A tract against the false prophets

On the prophets.^d

My heart^e is broken within me,
 I tremble in all my bones
 I am like a drunken man,
 a man overcome with wine—
 because of Yahweh
 and his holy words,
 ‘The land is full of adulterers^f

(yes, because of these men^g the land is in mourning and the desert pastures have dried up);

‘they are quick only at doing wrong
 and powerful only in crime.
 Yes, even prophet and priest are godless,
 I have found their wickedness even in my own House
 —it is Yahweh who speaks.
 Because of this their way will prove treacherous going for them;
 in the darkness where they are driven,
 there they will fall.
 For I will bring disaster down on them when the year comes for me to deal with them—
 it is Yahweh who speaks.

‘In the prophets of Samaria
 I have seen nauseating things:
 they prophesied in the name of Baal
 and led my people Israel astray,
 But in the prophets of Jerusalem
 I have seen horrors:
 adultery, persistent lying,
 such abetting of evil men,
 that no one renounces his evil-doing;

- to me they are all like Sodom,
its inhabitants all like Gomorrah.
15 So this is what Yahweh Sabaoth says about the prophets:
Now I will give them wormwood for their food,
and poisoned water to drink,
since from the prophets of Jerusalem
godlessness has spread throughout the land.
- 16 'Yahweh Sabaoth says this:
Do not listen to what those prophets^b say:
they are deluding you,
they retail visions of their own,
and not what comes from the mouth of Yahweh;
17 to those who reject the word of Yahweh^c they say,
"Peace will be yours",
and to those who follow the dictates of a hardened heart,
"No misfortune will touch you".'
- 18 (But who has been present at the council of Yahweh? Who has seen it and heard his word? Who has paid attention to his word in order to proclaim it?)^d
- 19 Now a storm of Yahweh^e breaks,
a tempest whirls,
it bursts over the head of the wicked;
20 the anger of Yahweh will not turn aside until he has performed, and has carried out,
the decision of his heart.
- You will understand this clearly in the days to come.
- 21 'I have not sent those prophets,
yet they are running;
I have not spoken to them,
yet they are prophesying.
22 Have they been present at my council?
If so, let them proclaim my words to my people and turn them from their evil way and from the wickedness of their deeds!'^f
- 23 'Am I a God when near—it is Yahweh who speaks—
and not one when far away?
24 Can anyone hide in a dark corner
without my seeing him?—it is Yahweh who speaks.
Do I not fill heaven and earth?—it is Yahweh who speaks.

c. 'he' Greek; 'I' Hebr.

d. The title (as in 21:11) of a composite booklet, its text overloaded, vv. 9-40. The first section, vv. 9-12, in which Jeremiah apparently for the first time becomes aware of the wickedness of the false prophets, might be dated under Josiah. The subsequent sections could equally well reflect the situation under Jehoiakim or under Zedekiah. On this polemic against the false prophets, see Introduction to the Prophets.

l. On the criteria of genuine prophecy, see Introduction to the Prophets.

'I have heard what the prophets say who make their lying prophecies in my name. "I have had a dream," they say "I have had a dream!"^m •How long will they retain this notion in their hearts, these prophets prophesying lies, who announce their private delusions as prophetic? •They hope, by means of the dreams that they keep telling each other, to make my people forget my name, just as their fathers forgot my name in favour of Baal. •Let the prophet who has had a dream tell his dreamⁿ as his own! And let him who receives a word from me, deliver it accurately!

'What have straw and wheat in common?

—it is Yahweh who speaks.

Does not my word burn^o like fire

—it is Yahweh who speaks—

is it not like a hammer shattering a rock?

'So, then, I have a quarrel with the prophets—it is Yahweh who speaks—who steal my words from one another. •I have a quarrel with the prophets—it is Yahweh who speaks—who have only to move their tongues to utter oracles. I have a quarrel with the prophets who make prophecies out of lying dreams —it is Yahweh who speaks—who recount them, and lead my people astray with their lies and their pretensions. I certainly never sent them or commissioned them, and they serve no good purpose for this people—it is Yahweh who speaks.

'And when these people, either a prophet or a priest, ask you, "What is the Burden of Yahweh?"^p you are to answer, "You, you are the burden^q of Yahweh; yes, you, and I mean to be rid of you! It is Yahweh who speaks."

'And the prophet, priest, or anyone else, who says, "Burden of Yahweh", I will punish that man, and his household too. •This is the way you ought to talk, neighbour to neighbour, brother to brother, "What answer has Yahweh given?" or "What has Yahweh said?" •But do not go on using^r the expression burden of Yahweh or, for the man who uses it, burdensome it will certainly prove, since you twist the words of the living God, of Yahweh Sabaoth, our God. •This is the way to speak to a prophet, "What answer has Yahweh given?" or "What has Yahweh said?" •But if you say, "Burden of Yahweh", then thus speaks Yahweh: Since you use these words, "Burden of Yahweh", when I have warned you to stop saying, "Burden of Yahweh", •I myself will pick you up^s and fling you out of my sight, both you and the city I gave to you and to your ancestors. •I will bring down everlasting shame on you, everlasting and unforgettable disgrace.'

The two baskets of figs^a

24 Yahweh gave me a vision: placed in front of the Temple of Yahweh stood two baskets of figs.^b This was after Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had led away Jeconiah son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, into exile from Jerusalem, with all the nobles of Judah, and the blacksmiths and metalworkers, and had taken them to Babylon. •One basket contained excellent figs, like those that ripen first; the other contained very bad figs, so bad they were uneatable. •Yahweh said to me, 'What do you see, Jeremiah?' 'Figs,' I answered 'the good ones excellent, the bad ones very bad, so bad as to be uneatable.' •Then the word of Yahweh was addressed to me, •'Yahweh, the God of Israel, says this: As these figs are good, so I mean to concern myself with the welfare of the exiles of Judah whom I have sent from this place to the land of the Chaldeans. •My eyes will watch over them for their good, to bring them back to this land, to build them up and not to break them down, to plant them and not to tear them up. •I will give them a heart to acknowledge that I am Yahweh. They shall be my people and I will be their God, for they will return to me with all their heart. •As for the bad figs, the figs so bad as to be uneatable—yes, Yahweh

D. BABYLON THE SCOURGE OF YAHWEH^a

25 The word that was addressed to Jeremiah about all the people of Judah in the fourth year of Jehoiakim son of Josiah, king of Judah (that is to say the first year of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon). • The prophet Jeremiah proclaimed it before all the people of Judah and all the citizens of Jerusalem: • For twenty-three years, from the thirteenth year of Josiah son of Amon, king of Judah, until today, the word of Yahweh has been addressed to me and I have persistently spoken to you (but you have not listened. • Furthermore, Yahweh has persistently sent you all his servants the prophets, but you have not listened, or paid attention.) • The message was this, “Turn back, each of you, from your evil behaviour and your evil actions, and you will stay on the soil Yahweh long ago gave to you and to your ancestors for ever. • (And do not follow alien gods to serve and worship them, do not provoke me by what your own hands have made; then I will not harm you.) • But you have not listened to me (it is Yahweh who speaks—so that you have now provoked me by what your own hands have made, and thus harmed yourselves).
“So—this is what Yahweh Sabaoth says: Since you have not listened to my words, • I will now send for all the clans of the North (it is Yahweh who speaks—referring to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, my servant) and bring them down on this land and its inhabitants (and on all these surrounding nations): I will lay the ban on them and make them an object of horror, of scorn, of lasting shame.^b • I will put an end for them to the shouts of rejoicing and mirth, to the voices of bridegroom and bride, to the sound of the millstone and to the light of the lamp. • The whole land shall be devastated and reduced to a desert, while they will stay in slavery among the nations^c for seventy years.^d (But when the seventy years are over, I will punish the king of Babylon and that nation—it is Yahweh who speaks—for the wrong they have done; and I will punish the land of the Chaldaeans too, and make it a desert for ever.) • I will bring down on that country all the words I have pronounced against it, all that is written in this book.”’

m. The false prophets accept any dream, as they accept their ‘private delusions’, as prophetic. God might indeed use dreams to convey a message, Nb 12:6, but the message and its origin need discernment.

n. ‘his dream’ Greek; ‘a dream’ Hebr.

o. ‘Does not my word burn’ corr.; ‘Is not my word thus’ Hebr.

p. The word massa means ‘burden’, but also, as in Is 13:1; 14:28; 19:1; Zc 9:1; 12:1; Mi 1:1, ‘oracle’. The objectors play on the word: the gloomy oracles of Jeremiah are burdensome. The prophet selects the sense of ‘burden’ and applies it to his critics.

q. Greek. Hebr. ‘What burden’.

r. ‘using’ Greek; ‘remembering’ Hebr.

s. ‘pick you up’ Greek; ‘forget you’ Hebr.

24 a. This vision, cf. 13:1+, is reminiscent of Am (8:1-2). It may be assigned to the reign of Zedekiah, about 593. The verdict given by Jeremiah (cf. also 29:1-23) is matched by that of Ezk (11:14-21): from the exiles God will recruit a people devoted to him, cf. Is 4:3+.

b. ‘placed’ Greek; ‘appointed’ Hebr. The country people used to bring the first-fruits of the harvest to

c. Perhaps those who shared the captivity of Jehoahaz, 2 K 23:34, perhaps Israelite refugees in Egypt.

d. Hebr. adds ‘a disaster’, absent from Greek.

25 a. This passage recapitulates the activity of the prophet Jeremiah from his call, and proclaims the imminence of the Chaldaean menace, thus giving new urgency to all the earlier threats. It may be regarded as a summary, cf. v. 13, of the scroll first dictated by Jeremiah to Baruch in 605, cf. 36:2, then rewritten and completed, 36:32, see Introduction to the Prophets. There are considerable divergences between the Hebr. text and the Greek version: with occasional exceptions we follow Hebr. Brackets indicate passages that appear not to be original (several are absent from Greek).

b. ‘shame’ Greek; ‘ruins’ Hebr.

c. ‘they will stay in slavery among the nations’ Greek; ‘these nations will be slaves to the king of Babylon’ Hebr.

d. Round number for the years of exile, repeated in 29:10 and, in another form, in 27:7. The figure is also found in 2 Ch 36:21 and is the basis for the calculation in Dn 9.

II. ORACLES AGAINST THE NATIONS

A. INTRODUCTION^e

The vision of the cup

(LXX 33:13-38)

What Jeremiah prophesied against all the nations.

(‘For these in their turn are to be enslaved^f to powerful nations and great kings, and I will pay them back as their deeds and their handiwork^g deserve.’)

Yahweh the God of Israel said this to me, ‘Take this cup of wine^g from my hand and make all the nations to whom I send you drink it, •let them drink and reel and lose their wits at the sword I am sending among them’. •I took the cup from the hand of Yahweh and made all the nations to whom Yahweh sent me drink it^h. •(Jerusalem and the towns of Judah, its kings and its nobles, to make them into a desolation and a waste, a thing of scorn, a curse, as is so today): Pharaoh king of Egypt, with his servants, his nobles, and all his people, •the whole crowd of foreigners besides (all the kings of the land of Uz); all the kings of the country of the Philistines, Ashkelon, Gaza, Ekron and what still remains of Ashdod; •Edom, Moab and the sons of Ammon; •(all) the kings of Tyre, (all) the kings of Sidon, the kings of the islands across the sea; •Dedan, Tema, Buz, all the Crop-Heads,ⁱ •all the kings of Arabia^k who live in the desert; •(all the kings of Zimri)^l and all the kings of Elam, and all the kings of Media; •all the kings of the north, near and far, one after another; and all the kingdoms that are on the face of the earth. (As for the king of Sheshak,^m he shall drink last of all.)

‘You are to say to them, “Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this: Drink! Get drunk! Vomit! Fall, never to rise, at the sword that I am sending among you!” •If they refuse to take the cup from your hand and drink, you are to say to them, “Yahweh Sabaoth says this: You must drink! •Since I am now making a beginning of disaster with the city that bears my name, do you think you are likely to go unpunished? You certainly shall not, for I will next summon a sword against all the inhabitants of the earth—it is Yahweh Sabaoth who speaks.”

‘Let your prophecy to them contain all these words, and tell them:

“Yahweh roars from on high,
he makes his voice heard from his holy dwelling place,
he roars loud against his sheepfold,
he shouts aloud like those who tread the grape.
The sound reaches all the inhabitants of the earth,
to the far ends of the world.
For Yahweh is indicting the nations,
arraigning all flesh for judgement;
the wicked he abandons to the sword
—it is Yahweh who speaks.”

Yahweh Sabaoth says this:

See! The disaster spreads from nation to nation,
a mighty tempest rises
from the far ends of the world.

“Those slaughtered by Yahweh that day will be scattered across the world from end to end. No dirge will be raised for them; no one will gather them or bury them; they will stay lying on the surface like dung.

“Howl, shepherds, shriek,
roll on the ground, you lords of the flock,
for the days have arrived for your slaughter,
like the finest rams^o you will fall.

- 35 No refuge now for the shepherds,
no escape for the lords of the flock!
- 36 Listen! A shout from the shepherds,
a howl from the lords of the flock!
- 37 For Yahweh has laid their pastures waste, their quiet sheepfolds are in ruins.^p
- 38 The lion^q has left his lair,
their land is a wasteland now,
thanks to the destroying sword,
and the fierce anger of Yahweh.”^r

III. PROPHECIES OF HAPPINESS

A. INTRODUCTION: JEREMIAH THE TRUE PROPHET

Jeremiah's discourse against the Temple: his arrest and condemnation^a (LXX 33) Mt 24:26;
59-66 Lk 19:41-44

- 1 26 At the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim son of Josiah, king of Judah, 2 this word was addressed to Jeremiah^b by Yahweh, “Yahweh says this:
Stand in the court of the Temple of Yahweh. To all the people of the towns of Judah who come to worship in the Temple of Yahweh you must speak all the 3 words I have commanded you to tell them; do not omit one syllable. •Perhaps they will listen and each turn from his evil way: if so, I shall relent and not bring 4 the disaster on them which I intended for their misdeeds. •Say to them, “Yahweh says this: If you will not listen to me by following my Law which I put 5 before you, •by paying attention to the words of my servants the prophets 6 whom I send so persistently to you, without your ever listening to them, •I will treat this Temple as I treated Shiloh, and make this city a curse for all the nations of the earth”.
- 7 The priests and prophets and all the people heard Jeremiah say these words
8 in the Temple of Yahweh. •When Jeremiah had finished saying everything that Yahweh had ordered him to say to all the people, the priests and prophets^c 9 seized hold of him and said, ‘You shall die! •Why have you made this prophecy in the name of Yahweh, “This Temple will be like Shiloh, and this city will be desolate, and uninhabited”?’ And the people were all crowding round Jeremiah in 10 the Temple of Yahweh. •Hearing of this, the officials of Judah went up from the royal palace to the Temple of Yahweh and took their seats at the entry of the New Gate of the Temple of Yahweh.^d
- 11 The priests and prophets then addressed the officials and all the people, ‘This man deserves to die, since he has prophesied against this city, as you have 12 heard with your own ears’. •Jeremiah, however, replied to the people as follows,

Gn 6:6
Jon 3:10
32:23; 44:10,
Dt 28:15
Dn 9:10
11:7-8; 25-26

Ps 78:60

e. This is a sort of preface to the oracles against the nations, ch. 46-51, the earliest of which must have formed part of the scroll dictated in 605. The Greek puts these oracles immediately after ch. 25, the Hebr. places them at the end of the book. Again, in this section the Hebr. text and the Greek version show differences.

f. ‘are to be enslaved’ corr.; ‘were enslaved’ Hebr.

g. Hebr. adds ‘wrath’.

h. The peoples threatened fall into four groups, here named in the order in which they appear in ch. 46-51: 1. Egypt; 2. the Philistines on the W.; 3. Edom, Moab, Ammon on the E.; 4. Dedan, Tema, Buz to the S.E. Vv. 18-29 were expanded, while the collection of oracles was taking its present shape, by the addition of the Phoenicians, cf. 47:4, Elam, cf. 49:34, and Babylon, cf. ch. 50-51.

i. The Phoenician colonies.

j. The Arabs, cf. 9:25.

k. Hebr. adds ‘and all the kings of the medley of peoples’.

l. Possibly Zimki, which would be a cryptogram for Elam.

m. Possibly a cryptogram for Babel.

n. Vv. 30-31, which describe the universal judgement, are probably post-exilic.

o. ‘rams’ Greek; ‘vessels’ Hebr.

p. Hebr. adds ‘because of the fierce anger of Yahweh’.

q. ‘The lion’ corr.; ‘like the lion’ Hebr. The ‘lion’ is either Nebuchadnezzar or Yahweh himself.

r. ‘sword’ Greek; ‘anger’ Hebr. ‘the anger of Yahweh’ corr.; ‘his anger’ Hebr.

26 a. These biographical passages may be attributed to Baruch; here he summarises the discourse against the Temple, 7:1-15, and tells of what followed it.

b. ‘to Jeremiah’ Lat. and Syr.; omitted by Hebr. and Greek.

c. Hebr. adds ‘and all the people’, which seems to contradict vv. 11 and 16.

d. A formal assize held by officials of the king.

‘Yahweh himself sent me to say all the things you have heard against this Temple and this city. •So now amend your behaviour and actions, listen to the voice of Yahweh your God: if you do, he will relent and not bring down on you the disaster he has pronounced against you. •For myself, I am as you see in your hands. Do whatever you please or think right with me. •But be sure of this, that if you put me to death, you will be bringing innocent blood on yourselves, on this city and on its citizens, since Yahweh has truly sent me to you to say all these words in your hearing.’

Jon 1:14

The officials and all the people then said to the priests and prophets, ‘This man does not deserve to die: he has spoken to us in the name of Yahweh our God’. •Some of the elders of the land had risen to address all the assembled people. •‘Micah of Moresheth,’ they said ‘who prophesied in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, had this to say to all the people of Judah, “Yahweh says this:

Mi 3:12

*Zion will become ploughland, Jerusalem a heap of rubble,
and the mountain of the Temple a wooded height”.*^e

‘Did Hezekiah king of Judah and all of Judah put him to death for this? Did they not rather, fearing Yahweh, entreat his favour, to make him relent and not bring the disaster on them which he had pronounced against them? Are we now to burden our souls with such a crime?’

There was another man, too, who used to prophesy in the name of Yahweh, Uriah son of Shemaiah, from Kiriath-jearim. He prophesied exactly the same things against this city and this land as Jeremiah. •When King Jehoiakim with all his ministers and officials heard what he said, he wished to put him to death. Learning this, Uriah took fright and escaped to Egypt. •King Jehoiakim, however, sent Elnathan son of Achbor to Egypt with others, •who brought Uriah back from Egypt and took him to King Jehoiakim, who had him put to the sword and his body thrown into the common burying ground. •But Jeremiah had a protector in Ahikam son of Shaphan,^f so he was not handed over to the people to be put to death.

B. THE PAMPHLET FOR THE EXILES^a

18:1+ The symbolic yoke and the message to the kings of the west

(LXX 34)

27 ^b(At the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah^c son of Josiah, king of Judah, this word was addressed to Jeremiah by Yahweh:) •Yahweh said this to me, ‘Make yourself ropes and a yoke and put them on your neck. •Then send word^d to the king of Edom, the king of Moab, the king of the Ammonites, the king of Tyre, and the king of Sidon,^e through their envoys accredited to Zedekiah king of Judah in Jerusalem. •Give them the following message for their masters, “Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this: You must tell your masters this: •I by my great power and outstretched arm made the earth, man and the animals that are on earth. And I can give it to whom I please. •For the present, I have handed all these countries over to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, my servant; I have even put the wild animals at his service. •(All the nations will be subject to him, to his son and to his grandson, until the time for his own country comes in its turn, when mighty nations and great kings will enslave him.) •Any nation or kingdom that will not submit to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and will not bow its neck to the yoke of the king of Babylon, I shall punish with sword, famine and plague—it is Yahweh who speaks—until I have delivered it into^f his power. •For your own part, do not listen to your prophets, your diviners, dreamers,^g soothsayers, or sorcerers, who tell you: You will not be subjects of the king of Babylon. •They prophesy lies to you, the result of which will be that you will be banished from your soil, that I shall expel you, and you will perish. •The nation, however, that bends its neck to the yoke of the king of Babylon and submits to him, I shall leave in peace on its own soil—it is Yahweh who speaks—to farm it and stay in it.”

12 To Zedekiah king of Judah I had the same to say. ‘Bend your necks,’ I told him ‘to the yoke of the king of Babylon; submit to him and to his people and you will live. •(Why so anxious to die, you and your people, by sword, famine and plague, with which Yahweh has threatened the nation that will not submit to the king of Babylon?) •Do not listen to the words the prophets say to you, “You will not be subjects of the king of Babylon”. They prophesy lies to you. Since I have not sent them—it is Yahweh who speaks—they prophesy untruths in my name. The result will be that I shall expel you, you will perish, and so will the prophets who prophesy to you.’

16 Next I spoke to the priests and all the people as follows, ‘Yahweh says this, “Do not listen to the words of your prophets who prophesy to you as follows: Look, the vessels of the Temple of Yahweh will (soon) be brought back from Babylon: they prophesy lies to you. •(Do not listen to them; submit to the king of Babylon and you will live; why should this city become a waste?) •If they were prophets, if they had the word of Yahweh, they would now be praying to Yahweh Sabaoth that the remaining vessels in the Temple of Yahweh, in the royal palace of Judah and in Jerusalem should not go to Babylon. •For this is what Yahweh Sabaoth says about (the pillars, the Sea, the stands and) the other vessels still remaining in this city, •those not carried off by Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon when he led away Jeconiah son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, into exile from Jerusalem to Babylon (with all the leading men of Judah and Jerusalem). •Yes, this is what Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says about the vessels still remaining in the Temple of Yahweh, in the royal palace of Judah, and in Jerusalem: •They will be carried off to Babylon (and stay there until the day I fetch them)—it is Yahweh who speaks. (Then I shall bring them back and restore them to this place).”’

The dispute with Hananiah^a

14:13-16; 23:9-40

28 That same year, at the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah in the fifth month of the fourth year, the prophet Hananiah son of Azzur, a Gibeonite, spoke as follows to Jeremiah^b in the Temple of Yahweh in the presence of the priests and of all the people. •‘Yahweh, the God of Israel, says this, “I have broken the yoke of the king of Babylon. •In two years’ time I will bring back all the vessels of the Temple of Yahweh which Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon carried off from this place and took to Babylon. •And I will also bring back Jeconiah son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, and all the exiles of Judah who have gone to Babylon—it is Yahweh who speaks. Yes, I am going to break the yoke of the king of Babylon.”’

5 The prophet Jeremiah then replied to the prophet Hananiah in front of the priests and all the people there in the Temple of Yahweh. •‘I hope so’ the prophet Jeremiah said. ‘May Yahweh do so. May he fulfil the words that you have prophesied and bring the vessels of the Temple of Yahweh and all the exiles back to this place from Babylon. •Listen carefully, however, to this word 7 that I am now going to say for you and all the people to hear: •From remote 8 times, the prophets who preceded you and me prophesied war, famine^c and plague for many countries and for great kingdoms; •but the prophet 9 who prophesies peace can only be recognised as one truly sent by Yahweh when his word comes true.^d

The prophet Hananiah then took the yoke off the neck of the prophet Jeremiah 10 and broke it. •In front of all the people Hananiah then said, 'Yahweh says 11 this, "This is how, two years hence, I will break the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon and take it off the necks of all the nations"'. At this, the prophet Jeremiah went away.

After the prophet Hananiah had broken the yoke which he had taken off 12
the neck of the prophet Jeremiah the word of Yahweh was addressed to Jeremiah, 'Go to Hananiah and tell him this, "Yahweh says this: You can break 13 wooden yokes? Right, I will^e make them iron yokes instead! •For Yahweh 14 Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this: An iron yoke is what I now lay on the necks of all these nations to subject them to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon.
(They will be subject to him; I have even given him the wild animals.)"' 15

The prophet Jeremiah said to the prophet Hananiah, 'Listen carefully, 15 Hananiah: Yahweh has not sent you; and thanks to you this people are now relying on what is false. •Hence—Yahweh says this, "I am going to throw 16 you off the face of the earth: you are going to die this year (since you have preached apostasy from Yahweh)"'.^f

The prophet Hananiah died the same year, in the seventh month.^g 17

Ba 6:1 The letter to the exiles

(LXX 36:1-23)

24:1f 29 This is the text of the letter that the prophet Jeremiah sent from Jerusalem 1 to those elders^a carried off into exile, to the priests, the prophets and all the people whom Nebuchadnezzar had led away into exile from Jerusalem to Babylon.
2 K 24:12-16 This was after King Jeconiah had left Jerusalem with the queen mother, the 2 eunuchs, the nobility of Judah and Jerusalem, and the blacksmiths and metal-workers. •The letter was entrusted to Elasah son of Shaphan and to Gemariah 3 son of Hilkiah, whom Zedekiah king of Judah had sent to Babylon, to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon.^b The letter said:

'Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this to all the exiles deported^c 4 from Jerusalem to Babylon, •"Build houses, settle down; plant gardens and eat 5 what they produce; •take wives and have sons and daughters; choose wives for 6 your sons, find husbands for your daughters so that these can bear sons and daughters in their turn; you must increase there and not decrease. •Work for 7 the good of the country^d to which I have exiled you; pray to Yahweh on its behalf, since on its welfare yours depends.^e •For Yahweh says this: Only 10 when the seventy years granted to Babylon are over, will I visit you and fulfil my promise in your favour by bringing you back to this place. •I know the plans 11
I have in mind for you—it is Yahweh who speaks—plans for peace, not disaster, reserving a future full of hope for you. •Then when you call to me, and come 12 to plead with me, I will listen to you. •When you seek me you shall find me, 13 when you seek me with all your heart; •I will let you find me (—it is Yahweh 14 who speaks. I will restore your fortunes and gather you from all the nations and all the places where I have dispersed you—it is Yahweh who speaks. I will bring you back to the place from which I exiled you.)

"You may say: Yahweh has raised up prophets for us in Babylon, •but 15 thus says Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel: Do not be deceived by the prophets among you or by your diviners; do not listen to the dreams they dream,^f •since they prophesy lies to you in my name. I have not sent them— 9
it is Yahweh who speaks.

- 16 "For this is what Yahweh says about the king now seated on the throne of David and all the people who live in this city, your brothers who did not go 17 with you into exile: •Thus says Yahweh Sabaoth: I am now going to send them sword, famine and plague; I will make them like rotten figs, so bad as
 18 to be uneatable. •I will pursue them with sword, famine and plague, and make them an object of horror to all the kingdoms of the earth, a curse, a thing
 19 of wonder, scorn, derision, for all the nations where I have dispersed them; because they have refused to listen to my words—it is Yahweh who speaks—
 20 although I have persistently sent them all my servants the prophets. However, they^h would not listen—it is Yahweh who speaks. •But all you exiles, whom I have sent from Jerusalem to Babylon, listen to the word of Yahweh. 24

- 24 'Shemaiah of Nehelam sent a letter of his own (to all the people in Jerusalem)

 26 'Yahweh has appointed you priest in succession to Jehoiada to keep order in the Temple of Yahweh; in the case of a madman who acts the prophet, your 27 duty is to put him in the stocks and iron collar. •This being the case, why have you not disciplined Jeremiah of Anathoth, who poses as a prophet to you?
 28 —since on the strength of this pretension he has sent a message to us in Babylon to say, "It will be a long time. Build houses, settle down; plant gardens and eat what they produce."'
- 29 The priest Zephaniah read this letter aloud to the prophet Jeremiah. •The 30 word of Yahweh, however, was addressed to Jeremiah, •'Send this message to all the exiles, "This is what Yahweh says about Shemaiah of Nehelam: Since 31 Shemaiah has prophesied to you without my sending him, and since it is due
 32 to him that you are now relying on what is false, •now therefore—thus says Yahweh—I will punish Shemaiah of Nehelam and his descendants; no male member of his family shall survive among this people to see the happiness that I will bestow on my people (—it is Yahweh who speaks—since he has preached apostasy from Yahweh)." =28:16

30 a. The greater part of the 'Book of Consolation', 30:1-31:22, was written between the reform of 622 and the days are coming—it is Yahweh who speaks—when I will restore the fortunes of my people Israel (and Judah), Yahweh says, and bring them back to possess the land I gave to their ancestors.

These are the words Yahweh spoke about Israel (and Judah):

	Yahweh says this:	4
Na 2:11	I ^b have heard a cry of panic, of terror, not of peace. Now ask, consider: can men bear children?	5
4:31 +	Then why do I see each man with his hands on his loins like a woman in labour? Why has every face changed, turned ^c pale?	6
Dn 12:1	This is indeed a great day, no other like it: a time of distress for Jacob; but he will be freed from it.	7
Is 9:3 + 5:19 Ho 3:5	On that day—it is Yahweh Sabaoth who speaks—I will break the yoke on their necks, and snap their chains. ^d They will be no longer the servants of aliens, •but will serve Yahweh their God, and David their king whom I will raise up for them. ^e	8 9
=46:27-28 Is 41:8	So do not be afraid, my servant Jacob —it is Yahweh who speaks— Israel, do not be alarmed: look, I will rescue you from distant countries and your descendants from the country where they are captive. Jacob will have quiet again	10
Mi 4:4	and live at ease, with no one to trouble him. For I am with you ^f to save you: I will make an end of all the nations where I have scattered you; I will not make an end of you, only discipline you in moderation, so as not to let you go entirely unpunished.	11
Lm 2:13	Yes, Yahweh says this: Your wound is incurable, ^g your injury past healing.	12
Is 1:5-6	There is no one to care for your sore, no medicine to make you well again. ^h	13
4:30 Lm 1:2	All your lovers ⁱ have forgotten you, they look for you no more. Yes, I have struck you as an enemy strikes, with harsh punishment (so great is your guilt, so many your sins). Why bother to complain about your wound? Your pain is incurable.	14 15
10:25	So great is your guilt, so many your sins, that I have done all this to you. But ^j all those who devoured you shall themselves be devoured, all your oppressors go into captivity, those who despoiled you shall be despoiled, and all who preyed on you I will make into prey. For they used to call you 'The Outcast', 'Our booty' whom no one cares about!	16 17b

- 17a But I will restore you to health and heal your wounds—it is Yahweh who speaks.
- 18 Yahweh says this:
Now I will restore the tents of Jacob,
and take pity on his dwellings:
the city shall be rebuilt on its ruins,
the citadel restored on its site.
- 19 From them will come thanksgiving and shouts of joy.
I will make them increase, and not diminish them,
make them honoured, and not disdained.
- 20 Their sons shall be as once they were,
their community fixed firm in my presence,
and I will punish all their oppressors.
- 21 Their prince will be one of their own,
their ruler come from their own people.¹
I will let him come freely into my presence and he can come close to me;
who else, indeed, would risk his life
by coming close to me?—it is Yahweh who speaks.
- 22 And you shall be my people and I will be your God.
- 23 Now a storm of Yahweh breaks,
a tempest whirls,
it bursts over the head of the wicked;
- 24 the anger^m of Yahweh will not turn aside until he has performed and carried out,
the decision of his heart.
You will understand this in the days to come.
- 1 31 When that time comes—it is Yahweh who speaks—I will be the God of all the clans of Israel: they shall be my people.
- 2 Yahweh says this:
They have found pardon in the wilderness,^a
those who have survived the sword.
Israel is marching to his rest.
- 3 Yahweh has appeared to him^b from afar:
I have loved you with an everlasting love,
so I am constant in my affection for you.

the death of Josiah (609). The deuteronomic reform, cf. 2 K 22:3-23:24, had both stimulated the cult of Yahweh by breaking with the religious syncretism introduced by Manasseh, and revived national aspirations: the decline of Assyria had allowed Josiah to undertake the reconquest of Samaria and Galilee, 2 K 23:15,19; 2 Ch 35:18. This gave rise to the hope that the exiles of 721 might return to a restored kingdom of David. The poems that follow express this hope. Yahweh still loves the Israel of the north, 31:3,15-20, cf. Ho 11:8-9; he will bring the exiles back to their homes, 30:3; 31:2-14, cf. Ho 10:11; religious unity will be restored with Zion as its centre, 31:6, cf. Is 11:10-16. Later, this promise of return was extended to Judah, conquered and exiled in its turn. Subsequent oracles, 30:8-9; 31:1,23-26,27-28, with glosses in 30:3,4; 31:31, associate Judah with Israel, thus giving the 'Book of Consolation' its final, messianic scope: Israel and Judah will unite, cf. 3:18+, to serve 'Yahweh their God and David their king', 30:9. This gathering of scattered Israel becomes a major theme of the exilic, Is 43:5f; 49:5-6,12,18-23, etc.; Ezk 11:17; 20:34; 28:25; 34:12-13, etc. and post-exilic prophets, Zc 10:6-12; cf. also Jn 11:52.

Bring me back, let me come back,
for you are Yahweh my God!
- 19 Yes, I turned away, but have since repented;
I understood, I beat my breast.^k
I was deeply ashamed, covered with confusion;
yes, I still bore the disgrace of my youth'.

still be deeply moved for him,
and let my tenderness yearn over him?

k. Lit. 'smote the thigh', gesture expressing regret.

l. The Hebr. verb translated here as 'set out to find again', means 'to surround', 'to turn (dance?) round something', 'to go looking for'. The text expresses the resumption of the loving relationship between Israel and her Husband, Yahweh, cf. Ho 1:2+; Is 54:5-8; Ezk 16:59-60. The Vulg. has accentuated the messianic scope of the text by translating: 'the woman will surround the man', suggesting the virginal conception of Christ.

D. ADDITIONS TO THE BOOK OF CONSOLATION

Jeremiah buys a field in token of his confidence in the future of Judah^a (LXX 39) 18:1+ : 34:1-7

- 32 The word that was addressed to Jeremiah by Yahweh in the tenth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, which was the eighteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar. •The army of the king of Babylon was at that time besieging Jerusalem, and the prophet Jeremiah was confined to the Court of the Guard in the royal palace of Judah, •where Zedekiah king of Judah had imprisoned him. 'Why' he had asked 'do you make a prophecy like this, "Yahweh says this: I am now going to deliver this city into the hands of the king of Babylon, for him to capture it; •and Zedekiah king of Judah will not escape the power of the Chaldeans, but will inevitably be delivered into the hands of the king of Babylon, speak to him personally and see him face to face. •He will take Zedekiah to Babylon and he will stay there (until I visit him—it is Yahweh who speaks. If you fight the Chaldeans you will not succeed!)"?'
- Jeremiah said, 'The word of Yahweh has been addressed to me as follows, "Look, Hanamel the son of your uncle Shallum will come to you and say: Buy my field at Anathoth, for you have the right of redemption^b to purchase it". And, as Yahweh had said, my cousin Hanamel came to me, in the Court of the Guard. He said to me, "Buy my field at Anathoth,^c for you have the right of inheritance and redemption; buy it". I knew then that this was Yahweh's order. •Accordingly, I bought the field from my cousin Hanamel of Anathoth and paid him the price: seventeen silver shekels. •I drew up the deed and sealed it, called in witnesses and weighed out the money on the scales. I then took both the sealed deed of purchase and its open copy, in accordance with the requirements of the law, •and handed over the deed of purchase to Baruch^d son of Neriah, son of Mahseiah, in the presence of my cousin Hanamel, of the witnesses who had signed the deed of purchase, and of all the Jews who then happened to be in the Court of the Guard. •In their presence I gave Baruch these instructions: •"Take these deeds, the sealed deed of purchase and its open copy, and put them in an earthenware pot, so that they may be

p. Here Jeremiah refutes a common saying, quoted again in Ezk 18:2, expressing the old principle of collective responsibility: in this context the penalty contracted by all the members of a family for the fault of one. He foretells that a new principle will be applied in the future—Ezekiel is to declare that the time has come already—namely that sinners will be punished individually, cf. Ezk 14:12+; 18.

q. In vv. 31-34 Jr reaches its highest peak of spirituality. The old covenant has been violated, v. 32, Ezk 16:59, and the attempted reform under Josiah has been short-lived: it is evident now that God has other plans. A disaster will ensue, leaving only a 'remnant' of the nation, Is 4:3+, and then an everlasting covenant will be made, v. 31, a covenant as in the days of Noah, Is 54:9-10. The former perspectives remain: man's obedience to the Law, and the divine presence bestowing peace and material prosperity, Ezk 36:29-30, this ideal being summed up in the formula: 'I will be your God and you shall be my people', v. 33; 24:7; 32:38; Ezk 11:20; 36:28; 37:27; cf. Dt 7:6+; But the covenant is 'new' in three respects: 1. God's spontaneous forgiveness of sin, v. 34; Ezk 36:25,29; Ps 51:1-2,7. 2. Individual responsibility and retribution, v. 29, cf. Ezk 14:12+. 3. Interiorisation of religion: the Law is no longer to be a code regulating external activity but an inspiration working on the heart of man, v. 33; 24:7; 32:39, under the influence of the spirit of God, who gives man a new heart, Ezk 36:26-27; Ps 51:10, cf. Jr 4:4+, capable of 'knowing' God, Ho 2:22+. This new and eternal covenant, proclaimed again by Ezekiel, Ezk 36:25-28, by the closing chapters of Is, Is 55:3; 59:21; 61:8, cf. Ba 2:35, and operative in Ps 51, will be inaugurated by the sacrifice of Christ, Mt 26:28p—and the apostles will proclaim its fulfilment, 2 Co 3:6; Rm 11:27; Heb 8:6-13; 9:15f; 1 Jn 5:20+.

r. Before 'the moon' Hebr. inserts 'the established order' (lit. 'the laws'), cf. v. 36; absent from Greek.

s. Hebr. inserts at beginning of verse 'Thus says Yahweh', absent from Greek.

t. The measurements of the newly built city are those of the old, destroyed by the Chaldeans. So also in Zc 14:10.

u. Goah, Zc 14:5, was presumably situated at the junction of the three valleys: Ben-hinnom, the Tyropoean and Kidron.

v. 'beside' one MS; 'as far as' Hebr.

32 a. The incident, which is given a symbolic construction, cf. 18:1+, took place in 587 when the siege foretold in 34:21-22 had been resumed, vv. 2,24. The purchase of the field is doubtless connected with the distribution of property for which Jeremiah proposed to go to Anathoth, 37:12. The original, autobiographical text, vv. 6b-17a, 24-29a, 42-44, seems to have been expanded by an introduction, vv. 1-6a, a prayer, vv. 17b-23 (reminiscent of Ne 9), and a messianic passage, vv. 29b-41, resuming themes characteristic of Jeremiah.

b. For this right of priority in purchase cf. Rt 4.

c. Hebr. adds 'which is in the land of Benjamin'.

d. The scribe who acted as secretary to Jeremiah, ch. 36:45.

e. Hebr. inserts at the beginning of the verse 'Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel says this'.

preserved for a long time. •For Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this, 15 “People will buy fields and vineyards in this land again”.

•After I had entrusted the deed of purchase to Baruch son of Neriah, I prayed 16
 thus to Yahweh: •Ah, Lord Yahweh, you have made the heavens and 17 the earth with your great power and outstretched arm. To you nothing is impossible. •You show kindness to thousands but repay the fathers’ guilt in 18 full to their children after them. Great and mighty God, whose name is Yahweh

Sabaoth! •Great in purpose, mighty in execution, whose eyes are open on all 19 the ways of men, rewarding each man as his ways and the results of his actions deserve! •You performed signs and wonders in the land of Egypt and do the same 20 today, in Israel and among mankind. You have won the name that is yours 21 today. •You brought your people Israel out of the land of Egypt with signs 21 and wonders, with mighty hand and outstretched arm and fearsome terror; then you gave them this land which you promised on oath to their ancestors, 22

a land where milk and honey flow; •and in due course they entered it and took 23 possession. But they would not listen to your voice or follow your Law: they would do nothing you ordered them to do; and so you made all these disasters happen to them. •See how the earthworks grow nearer to the city for 24 the assault! Sword, famine, and plague will deliver the city into the hands of the attacking Chaldeans. What you have said is now fulfilled, as you see.

Yet you yourself, Lord Yahweh, told me, “Buy the field with money in front 25 of witnesses”—and even now the city is falling into the hands of the Chaldeans!

•The word of Yahweh was addressed to me^f as follows, •“See, I am Yahweh, 26
 the God of all mankind: is anything impossible to me? 27

“Therefore—Yahweh says this: I am now putting this city into the power of 28 the Chaldeans, into the power of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and he will capture it; •the Chaldeans attacking this city will come and set fire to it; 29

they will burn the houses on the roofs of which incense was offered to Baal and libations were poured to alien gods, to provoke me. •For the sons of Israel and 30 of Judah have done nothing but displease me from their youth up (the sons of Israel in fact have done nothing but provoke me by their actions—it is 31

Yahweh who speaks). •Yes, from the day when it was built until today, this 31 city has been such cause of anger and of wrath to me that I mean to remove it from my sight, •because of all the wickedness the sons of Israel and the sons 32 of Judah have committed to provoke me: they, their kings, their nobles, their priests and their prophets, the men of Judah and the citizens of Jerusalem.

 They turned their backs to me, never their faces; and though I taught them^g 33

so urgently, so persistently, they would not listen and learn the lesson. •They 34 have put their abominations in the Temple that bears my name to defile it.

They have built the high places of Baal in the Valley of Ben-hinnom, there to 35 make their sons and daughters pass through fire in honour of Molech—something I never ordered, for it never entered my thoughts that they would do such detestable things—and so they have led Judah into sin.

“But now, and for the same reason, this is what Yahweh, the God of Israel, 36 says about this city of which you say:^h Sword, famine and plague will deliver it into the hands of the king of Babylon: •I mean to gather them from all the 37 countries where I have driven them in my anger, my fury and great wrath.

I will bring them back to this place and make them live in safety. •Then they 38 shall be my people, and I will be their God. •I will give them a different heart and 39 different behaviourⁱ so that they will always fear me, for the good of themselves and their children after them. •I will make an everlasting covenant with them; I 40 will not cease in my efforts for their good, and I will put respect for me into their hearts, so that they turn from me no more. •It will be my pleasure to bring 41 about their good, and I will plant them firmly in this land, with all my heart and soul. •For Yahweh says this: As I have brought this great disaster on this 42 people, so I am going to bring them all the good I promise them. •People will 43

Another promise of recovery for Jerusalem and Judah^a

(LXX 40)

- 1 33 Jeremiah was still confined to the Court of the Guard when the word
 2 of Yahweh was addressed to him a second time, •‘Yahweh, who made the earth,^b who formed it and set it firm—Yahweh is his name—says this,
 3 Call to me and I will answer you; I will tell you great mysteries of which you
 4 know nothing. •For this is what Yahweh, the God of Israel, says about the houses of this city and the royal palaces of Judah which are to be destroyed.
 5 Against the earthworks and the palisades^c •they will join battle with the Chaldaeans, only to fill the city with the corpses of those I strike down in my anger and my wrath, of those from whom I turned my face because of all their wickedness.^d
 6 •But look, I will hasten their^e recovery and their cure; I will cure them
 7 and let them know peace and security in full measure. •I will restore the fortunes of Judah and Jerusalem,^f and build them again as they were before. •I will cleanse them of every sin they have committed against me; the sins by which 9 they offended me and apostatised from me, all these I will forgive. •And Jerusalem^g shall be my theme of joy, my honour and my boast, before all the nations of the earth: these, when they hear of all the prosperity that I shall grant, will be seized with fear and trembling at all the prosperity and the peace that I provide for it.
 10 •Yahweh says this: In this place of which you say, “It is a waste without man or beast”, in the towns of Judah and in the ruined streets of Jerusalem
 11 where there is neither man nor beast, once more will be heard •shouts of rejoicing and mirth, the voices of bridegroom and bride, and the singing of those who bring thanksgiving sacrifices to the Temple of Yahweh, “Give thanks to Yahweh Sabaoth, for Yahweh is good, for his love is everlasting”. For I will restore the fortunes of this land as they were before. Yahweh declares it!
 12 ^a‘Yahweh Sabaoth says this: In this place, this waste without man or beast, and in all its towns, once again there will be pastures for the shepherds
 13 to rest their flocks. •In all the towns of the highlands, of the Lowlands and the Negeb, in the land of Benjamin, in the districts round Jerusalem and in the towns of Judah, once again the flocks shall pass under the hand of him who counts them.^h Yahweh declares it!

E. MISCELLANEOUS PASSAGES

21:1-7; 32: The fate of Zedekiah^a 1-5

(LXX 41:1-7)

34 The word addressed to Jeremiah by Yahweh when Nebuchadnezzar king 1 of Babylon and his whole army, with all the kingdoms of the earth under his dominion and all the peoples, were waging war on Jerusalem and its outlying towns, •‘Yahweh, the God of Israel, says this: Go and speak to Zedekiah 2 king of Judah. Say this to him, “Yahweh says this: I am now handing over this city into the power of the king of Babylon, and he will burn it down. •And you 3 yourself will not escape his power but will inevitably be captured and delivered into his hands. You will see the king of Babylon face to face and speak to him personally. Then you will go to Babylon. •Even so, listen to the word of 4 Yahweh, Zedekiah king of Judah, and you will not die by the sword;^b •you will 5 die in peace. And as spices were burnt for your fathers, the kings who in times past preceded you, so they will also burn spices for you and raise this dirge for 22:18 you: Mourn for his highness! I myself declare it—it is Yahweh who speaks.” ’

The prophet Jeremiah repeated all these words to Zedekiah king of Judah, 6 in Jerusalem, •while the army of the king of Babylon was attacking Jerusalem 7 and the towns of Judah which still held out, namely Lachish and Azekah, these being the only towns of Judah that still held out, since they were fortified.

The episode of the liberated slaves^c

(LXX 41:8-22)

Lv 25:10,39 The word addressed to Jeremiah by Yahweh after King Zedekiah had made 8
Ne 5:1f a pact with all the people in Jerusalem to free their slaves: •each man was to 9
Jb 31:13 free his Hebrew slaves, men and women, and no one was any longer to keep a
Is 58:6 brother Jew in slavery. •All the nobles and all the people who had entered into 10 the pact had agreed that everyone should free his slaves, men or women, and no longer keep them as slaves: they had agreed on this and set them free. •Afterwards, 11 however, they changed their minds, recovered the slaves, men and women, whom they had set free, and reduced them to slavery again. •So the word of Yahweh 12

- 13 was addressed to Jeremiah,^d •Yahweh, the God of Israel, says this: I made 14 a covenant with your ancestors when I brought them out of Egypt, out of the house of slavery; it said: •At the end of seven years each one of you is to free Dt 15:12-13 his brother Hebrew who has sold himself to you: he may be your slave for six years, then you must send him away free. But your ancestors did not listen to 15 me and would not pay attention. •Now, today you took a different attitude and did what pleases me by proclaiming freedom for your neighbour; you made a 16 covenant in my presence in the Temple that bears my name. •And then you changed your mind and, profaning my name, each of you has recovered his slaves, men and women, whom you had sent away free to live their own lives, and has forced them to become your slaves again.
- 17 •Therefore—Yahweh says this: You have disobeyed me, by not each granting freedom to his brother and his neighbour. Very well, I in my turn—it is 29:18
 Yahweh who speaks—leave sword, famine and plague free to deal with you; 18 I will make you an object of horror to all the kingdoms of the earth. •And these men who have infringed my covenant, who have not observed the terms of the covenant made in my presence, I will treat these men like the calf they cut in 19 two to pass between the parts of it.^e •As for the nobles of Judah and of Jerusalem, the eunuchs and the priests, and all the people of the country who have passed 20 between the parts of the calf, •I will put them into the power of their enemies and into the power of men determined to kill them: their corpses will feed the 7:33 21 birds of heaven and the beasts of the earth. •As for Zedekiah king of Judah and his nobles, these too I will hand over to their enemies and to men determined to kill them, and to the army of the king of Babylon which has just 22 withdrawn. •Listen, I will give the order—it is Yahweh who speaks—and bring them back to this city to attack it and capture it and burn it down. I am going to 9:10 make an uninhabited desert of the towns of Judah.'

The example of the Rechabites^a

(LXX 42)

- 1 35 The word addressed to Jeremiah by Yahweh in the days of Jehoiakim
 2 son of Josiah, king of Judah, •'Go to the clan of the Rechabites and speak to them; bring them into one of the apartments of the Temple of Yahweh and 3 offer them wine to drink'. •So I brought Jaazaniah son of Jeremiah, son of Habazziniah, with his brothers and all his sons: the whole Rechabite clan. Nb 6:4 4 I took them to the Temple of Yahweh into the apartment of Ben-johanan^b son of Igdaliah, a man of God,^c a room near that of the officials, over the 5 apartment of Maaseiah son of Shallum, guardian of the threshold. •I then set pitchers full of wine, and some cups, before the men of the Rechabite clan and said, 'Drink some wine'.
 6 They replied, 'We do not drink wine, because our ancestor Jonadab son of 2 K 10:15 Rechab gave us this order: "You must never drink wine, neither you nor your 7 sons; •nor must you build houses, sow seed, plant vineyards, or own property; king of Babylon invaded this country, we decided, "We must get away! We will go to Jerusalem to escape the army of the Chaldaeans and the army of Aram."

So here we are, living in Jerusalem."

Then the word of Yahweh was addressed to Jeremiah, •"Thus says Yahweh 12
Sabaoth, the God of Israel: Go and say to the men of Judah and the inhabitants 13 of Jerusalem, "Will you not learn the lesson and listen to my words? It is Yahweh who speaks. •The word of Jonadab son of Rechab ordering his sons to drink 14 no wine has been kept; obedient to their ancestor's command, they drink none even today. But to me, who spoke to you so urgently, so persistently, you 7:13 have not listened. •I have sent you all my servants the prophets so persistently, 15 so often, to say: Each of you turn from your evil way, and amend your actions, 25:4-7 do not follow alien gods and serve them; then you will be able to stay on the soil I gave to you and your ancestors. But you would not listen to me. •The sons of Jonadab son of Rechab have kept the command their ancestor gave them, but this people has not listened to me. •And so—Yahweh, the God of 16 Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this: I will bring down on Judah and the citizens of Jerusalem all the disasters with which I have threatened them, because I spoke to them and they would not listen, called to them and they would not answer." "

Then Jeremiah said to the Rechabite clan, 'Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, 18 says this, "Because you have obeyed the orders of Jonadab and kept all his rules and done all that he ordered you, •for this—thus says Yahweh 19 Sabaoth, the God of Israel—Jonadab son of Rechab shall never lack a male descendant to stand in my presence" '.

IV. THE SUFFERINGS OF JEREMIAH

The scroll written in 605-604^a

(LXX 43)

36 In the fourth year of Jehoiakim^b son of Josiah, king of Judah, this word 1 was addressed to Jeremiah by Yahweh, •"Take a scroll and write on it all 2 the words I have spoken to you about Jerusalem^c and Judah and all the nations, from the day I first spoke to you, in the time of Josiah, until today. •Perhaps 3 when the House of Judah hears of all the evil I have in mind for them, each man will turn from his evil way, and then I can forgive their misdeeds and their sin.'
Jeremiah therefore summoned Baruch son of Neriah, who at his dictation wrote 4 down on the scroll all the words Yahweh had spoken to him."^d

Now in the fifth year of Jehoiakim son of Josiah, king of Judah, in the ninth 9 month,^e there was a summons to a fast in the presence of Yahweh for the whole population of Jerusalem and for all the people who could come to Jerusalem from the towns of Judah. •Jeremiah then gave Baruch this order: 'As I am 5 prevented from entering the Temple of Yahweh, •you yourself must go and, 6 from the scroll you wrote at my dictation, read all the words of Yahweh to the people in his Temple on the day of the fast; read them also in the hearing of all the men of Judah who come in from the towns. •Perhaps they will offer their prayers 7 to Yahweh and each one turn from his evil way, for great is the anger and wrath with which Yahweh has threatened this people.' •Baruch son of Neriah duly 8 carried out the order that the prophet Jeremiah had given him, to read all the words of Yahweh from the book in his Temple. •He read the words of Jeremiah 10 from the book; this happened in the apartment of Gemariah, son of Shaphan 11

the secretary, in the upper court at the entry of the New Gate of the Temple of Yahweh, where all the people could hear.

- 11 Micaiah son of Gemariah, son of Shaphan, had heard all the words of Yahweh 12 read from the book, and he went down to the royal palace and into the secretary's room. All the officials were in session there: Elishama the secretary, Delaiah son of Shemaiah, Elnathan son of Achbor, Gemariah son of Shaphan, 13 Zedekiah son of Hananiah and all the other officials. Micaiah reported to them 14 all the words he had heard as Baruch was reading the book to the people. The officials then by common consent sent Jehudi son of Nethaniah to Baruch, with Shelemiah^f son of Cushi, to give him this message, 'Come, and bring the scroll with you which you were reading to the people'. Bringing the scroll with him, 15 Baruch son of Neriah appeared before them. 'Sit down,' they said 'and read 16 it out.' So Baruch read it to them. When they had heard all the words they turned to one another in alarm and said,^g 'We must certainly inform the king 17 of all this'. They then questioned Baruch: 'Tell us' they said 'how you came 18 to write all these words'.^h 'Jeremiah dictated them to me,' Baruch replied 'and 19 I wrote them down in ink in this book.' The officials then said to Baruch, 'You and Jeremiah had better go into hiding; and do not tell anyone where you are'.
 20 Whereupon they went off to the king in the palace court, depositing the scroll in the room of Elishama the secretary. And they informed the king of the whole affair.

- 21 The king sent Jehudi for the scroll, and he brought it from the room of Elishama the secretary and read it out to the king and all the officials standing round the 22 king. The king was seated in his winter apartments—it was the ninth month—
 23 with a fire burning in a brazier in front of him. Each time Jehudi had read three or four columns, the king cut them off with a scribe's knife and threw them into the fire in the brazier until the whole of the scroll had been burnt in 24 the brazier fire. But even after hearing all these words, neither the king nor 25 any of his servants took alarm or tore their garments; and although Elnathan and Delaiah and Gemariah had urged the king not to burn the scroll he would 26 not listen to them. He ordered Prince Jerahmeel and Seraiah son of Azriel and Shelemiah son of Abdeel to arrest the scribe Baruch and the prophet Jeremiah.
 But Yahweh had hidden them.

- 27 And then the word of Yahweh was addressed to Jeremiah, after the king had burnt the scroll containing the words Baruch had written at the dictation 28 of Jeremiah, 'Take another scroll and write down all the words that were 29 written on the first scroll burnt by Jehoiakim king of Judah. And as regards Jehoiakim king of Judah, say, "Yahweh says this: You have burnt this scroll, saying: Why have you written down: The king of Babylon will certainly come 30 and lay this country waste and leave it without man or beast? And so, this is what Yahweh says about Jehoiakim king of Judah: He will have no one to sit on the throne of David, and his corpse will be tossed out to the heat of 31 the day and the frost of the night. I will punish him, his heirs and his servants for their misdeeds; on them, on the citizens of Jerusalem and on the men of Judah I will bring down all the disasters with which I have threatened them, though they have not listened."'

- 32 Jeremiah then took another scroll and gave it to the scribe Baruch son of 4 These leading men accordingly spoke to the king. ‘Let this man be put to death: he is unquestionably disheartening the remaining soldiers in the city, and all the people too, by talking like this. The fellow does not have the welfare of this people at heart so much as its ruin.’ •‘He is in your hands as you know,’ King Zedekiah answered ‘for the king is powerless against you.’^b •So they took Jeremiah and threw him into the well of Prince Malchiah in the Court of the Guard, letting him down with ropes. There was no water in the well, only mud, and into the mud Jeremiah sank.

7 But Ebed-melech the Cushite, a eunuch attached to the palace, heard that Jeremiah had been put into the well. As the king was sitting at the Benjamin Gate, •Ebed-melech came out from the palace and spoke to the king. •‘My lord king,’ he said ‘these men have done a wicked thing by treating the prophet Jeremiah like this: they have thrown him into the well where he will die.’^c
10 At this the king gave Ebed-melech the Cushite the following order: ‘Take three^d men with you from here and pull the prophet Jeremiah out of the well before he dies’. •Ebed-melech took the men with him and went into the palace to the storehouse wardrobe;^e out of it he took some torn, worn-out rags which he lowered on ropes to Jeremiah in the well. •Ebed-melech the Cushite then said to Jeremiah, ‘These torn, worn-out rags are for you to put under your armpits to pad the ropes’. Jeremiah did this. •They then hauled Jeremiah up with the ropes and pulled him out of the well. And Jeremiah stayed in the Court of the Guard.

The last conversation between Jeremiah and Zedekiah

14 King Zedekiah had the prophet Jeremiah summoned to him at the third entrance to the Temple of Yahweh. ‘I want to ask you for a word,’ the king said to Jeremiah ‘keep nothing back from me.’ •Jeremiah answered Zedekiah, ‘If I tell you, surely you will have me put to death? And if I give you advice, you will not listen to me.’ •King Zedekiah then swore this oath in secret to Jeremiah, ‘As Yahweh lives, giver of this life of ours, I will neither have you put to death nor handed over into the power of these men who are determined to kill you’.
17 Jeremiah then said to Zedekiah, ‘Yahweh, the God of Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this, “If you go out and surrender to the officers of the king of Babylon, your life will be safe and this city will not be burnt down; you and your family will survive. •But if you do not go out and surrender to the officers of the king of Babylon, this city will be handed over into the power of the king of the Chaldeans who will burn it down; and you yourself will not escape their hands.”’ •King Zedekiah then said to Jeremiah, ‘I am afraid of the Jews who have already gone over to the Chaldeans: I might be handed over to them and they would ill-treat me’. •‘You will not be handed over to them,’ Jeremiah replied ‘just listen to the voice of Yahweh, in obedience to which I have spoken, and all will go well with you and your life will be safe. •But if you refuse to go, this is what Yahweh has shown me: •a vision of all the women left in the palace of the king of Judah being led off to the officers of the king of Babylon and singing:

“They have misled you, they have overreached you,
your fine friends!
Are your feet sinking in the mud?
They are up and away!”

Zedekiah then said to Jeremiah, 'Do not let anyone else hear these words or 24 you will die. •If the officials hear that I have been talking to you, and come to 25
you and say, "Tell us what you said to the king and what the king said to you;"
keep nothing back from us, or we will put you to death", •you must reply, 26
"I presented this request to the king: that he would not have me sent back to the house of Jonathan to die there".'

All the officials did in fact come to Jeremiah to question him. He told them 27 exactly what the king had ordered him to say. They then left him in peace, since no part of the conversation had been overheard. •Jeremiah stayed in the Court 28 of the Guard until the day Jerusalem was captured.

The fall of Jerusalem: the treatment Jeremiah received^a

(LXX 45:28; 46:14)

Now when Jerusalem was captured...

39 In the ninth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the tenth month,^b 1 Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came with his whole army to attack Jerusalem and besieged it. •In the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in the fourth month,^c a 2 breach was made in the city wall.

...all the officers of the king of Babylon marched in and took up their quarters 3 at the Middle Gate: Nergal-sharezer, prince of Sin-magir, the chief officer,^d Nebushazban, the high official,^e and all the other officers of the king of Babylon...

Seeing this, Zedekiah king of Judah fled under cover of dark, with all the 4 fighting men, leaving the city by way of the king's garden through the gate between the two walls, and making their way towards the Arabah.^f •The Chaldean 5 troops pursued them and caught up with Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho. They captured him and took him up to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon at Riblah 6 in the land of Hamath, who passed sentence on him. •The king of Babylon had the sons of Zedekiah slaughtered before his eyes at Riblah; the king of Babylon also had all the leading men of Judah put to death. •He then put out Zedekiah's 7 eyes and, loading him with chains, carried him off to Babylon. •The 8 Chaldeans burnt down the royal palace and the private houses, and demolished the walls of Jerusalem. •Nebuzaradan, commander of the guard, deported the 9 remainder of the population left behind in the city, the deserters who had gone over to him, and the rest of the artisans^g to Babylon. •Nebuzaradan, command- 10 er of the guard, left some of the humbler people who had nothing, in the land of Judah, at the same time giving them vineyards and fields.

Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had given the following orders to^h 11
Nebuzaradan, commander of the guard, about Jeremiah: •'Take him, look 12 after him; do him no harm, but treat him as he wishes'.

Whereupon (Nebuzaradan, commander of the guard,) Nebushazban, the 13 high official, Nergal-sharezer, the chief officer, and all the officers of the king of Babylon despatched men.

...and they despatched men to take Jeremiah from the Court of the Guard, 14 and allowed him to move about freely.ⁱ And so he lived among the people.

An oracle assuring the safety of Ebed-melech^j

(LXX 46:15-18)

While Jeremiah was confined in the Court of the Guard, the word of Yahweh 15 was addressed to him, •'Go and say to Ebed-melech the Cushite, "Yahweh, the 16 God of Israel, says this: See, I am bringing disaster, not prosperity, on this city, as I said I would. That day, when this comes true before your eyes, •I will 17 rescue you that day—it is Yahweh who speaks—and you will not be delivered

Further details about the treatment of Jeremiah

(LXX 47:1-6)

- 1 40 The word addressed to Jeremiah by Yahweh after Nebuzaradan, commander of the guard, had released him from Ramah; there he had him singled out, chained as he was with all the other captives from Jerusalem and Judah who were being deported to Babylon.^a •Then taking Jeremiah aside, the commander of the guard said to him, 'Yahweh your God foretold calamity for this country, •and now he has brought it. He has done what he threatened to do, because you had sinned against Yahweh and would not listen to his voice; so all this has happened to you. •Look, today I am having your hands unchained. If you like to come with me to Babylon, then come: I will look after you. If you do not want to come with me to Babylon, never mind. Look, you have the whole country to choose from: you may go where you please, wherever you choose.^b •You can, for instance, go back to Gedaliah son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, whom the king of Babylon has appointed governor of the towns of Judah, and stay with him and live with the people; or you can go anywhere else you choose.' With that, the commander of the guard provided him with food and gave him a present and sent him on his way. •Jeremiah went to Mizpah to Gedaliah son of Ahikam and stayed with him, living with the people still left in the country.

- 7 When all the commanders of the troops, who with their men were still roaming the countryside, heard that the king of Babylon had appointed Gedaliah^c son of Ahikam as governor of the country, making him responsible for the men, women and children, and those humbler people of the country who had not been deported to Babylon, •they went to Gedaliah at Mizpah: Ishmael son of Nethaniah, Johanan^d son of Kareah, Seraiah son of Tanhumeth, the sons of Ephai the Netophathite, Jezaniah son of the Maacathite, they and their men. 9 To them and to their men Gedaliah son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, swore an oath. 'Do not be afraid' he said 'of submitting to the Chaldeans; but live in the country, and obey the king of Babylon, and all will go well with you. 10 I for my part, as the man answerable to the Chaldeans when they come to us, am going to live here at Mizpah; but you can harvest your wine, summer fruits and oil, fill your storage jars and settle down in those towns which you care to occupy.' 11 Similarly, when all the Judaeans living in Moab and among the Ammonites, and in Edom, heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant in Judah and had appointed Gedaliah son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, as their governor, 12 they all came back from all the places to which they had been dispersed. On their return to the land of Judah, to Gedaliah at Mizpah, they harvested an immense quantity of wine and summer fruits.

g. Following Syr.

39 a. The text of this section is composed of disparate, ill-assorted elements. The Greek version lacks 38:28b and 39:4-13. Apparently, to the original biographical elements relating to Jeremiah, 38:28b; 39:3,14, were added, first, 39:1-2, the account of the siege from its start to the opening of the breach, as in 2 K 25:1-4a (Jr 52:4-7a); next, 39:4-10, an account of the end of the siege and of what followed it, which is an abridgement of 2 K 25:4b-7,9-12 (Jr 52:7b-16); and, finally, 39:11-13 with its information on the prophet's release.

b. January-February 588.

c. August 587.

d. rab-mugi a superior officer of high, but unspecified, rank.

e. Lit. 'chief of the eunuchs', but the phrase more probably means one of the higher officials of the court. The proper names in this verse have been corrected from v. 13.

f. 'this' corr.; 'them' Hebr. 'making their way'

corr.; 'he went out' Hebr. The Arabah here means the Jordan valley.

g. 'artisans' corr.; cf. 52:15; 'people' Hebr. Hebr. adds 'who were left'.

h. 'to' corr.; 'through' Hebr.

i. Lit. 'and they gave him to go out and to come in', corr.; 'they entrusted him to Gedaliah son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, to take him home' Hebr. (but contradicting 40:1f).

j. This passage continues the narrative of 38:7-13.

40 a. There are evident gaps in the group of biographical narratives about Jeremiah. He was released in Jerusalem, 39:14, but here we find him among the captives at Ramah (about 6 m. north of Jerusalem). This second account must follow 39:11-12.

b. Hebr. inserts at the beginning of the verse 'And he did not return yet'.

c. Gedaliah came of a family of high Jewish officials who were well-disposed towards Jeremiah, 26:24+.

d. Hebr. adds 'and Jonathan', absent from Greek and from the parallel passages.

Now Johanan son of Kareah, and all the army leaders still roaming in the countryside, went to Gedaliah at Mizpah •and said to him, 'Are you aware that Baalis king of the Ammonites^e has sent Ishmael son of Nethaniah to murder you?' But Gedaliah son of Ahikam would not believe them. •Johanan son of Kareah had even told Gedaliah secretly at Mizpah, 'Let me go and kill Ishmael son of Nethaniah, and no one will know who did it. Why should he murder you? It would mean that all the Judaeans who have rallied round you would be scattered again. Why should the remnant of Judah perish?' •But Gedaliah son of Ahikam replied to Johanan son of Kareah, 'You must not do this; what you say about Ishmael is false'.

41 But in the seventh month, Ishmael son of Nethaniah, son of Elishama, ¹ who was of royal descent,^a and ten men with him, came to Gedaliah son of Ahikam at Mizpah. And as they were taking their meal together, there at Mizpah, •Ishmael son of Nethaniah stood up with his ten men, and attacking ² Gedaliah son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, with their swords, murdered the man whom the king of Babylon had made governor of the country. •And all the ³ Judaeans who were with him at the feast,^b and those of the Chaldaeans who happened to be there—they were fighting men—Ishmael killed too.^c

On the day after the murder of Gedaliah, before the news had become ⁴ known, •eighty men arrived from Shechem, Shiloh and Samaria, with their ⁵ beards shaved off, their garments torn and their bodies gashed; they had oblations and incense with them to take to the Temple of Yahweh.^d •Ishmael ⁶ son of Nethaniah left Mizpah to meet them as they^e approached, weeping as they went. When he met them he said, 'Come to Gedaliah son of Ahikam'. •But once ⁷ they were well inside the town, Ishmael son of Nethaniah slaughtered them, with the help of his men, and threw them^f into a cistern. •There were ten of ⁸ them, however, who said to Ishmael, 'Do not kill us: we have stocks of wheat and barley, oil and honey, hidden away in the fields'. So he spared them and did ⁹ not kill them with their brothers. •The cistern into which Ishmael threw the ¹⁰ corpses of all the men he had killed was a large cistern^g which King Asa had built as a precaution against Baasha king of Israel. Ishmael son of Nethaniah ¹¹ filled it with the bodies of his victims. •Then Ishmael led the entire remnant ¹² of the people at Mizpah away, and the royal princesses^h whom Nebuzaradan, commander of the guard, had left in the care of Gedaliah son of Ahikam. Ishmael son of Nethaniah set out early to cross to the Ammonites.

When Johanan son of Kareah and all the army leaders who were with him ¹³ heard about all the crimes committed by Ishmael son of Nethaniah, •mustering ¹⁴ all their men, they set out to attack Ishmael son of Nethaniah. They caught up ¹⁵ with him at the great Pool of Gibeon. •At the sight of Johanan son of Kareah and all the army leaders with him, all the people with Ishmael were beside ¹⁶ themselves with joy. •All the people whom Ishmael had led away from Mizpah ¹⁷ turned about and rallied to Johanan son of Kareah. •Ishmael son of Nethaniah ¹⁸ escaped from Johanan with eight of his men and fled to the Ammonites. Johanan son of Kareah and all the army leaders with him then rallied the ¹⁹ entire remnant of the people whom Ishmael son of Nethaniah had led awayⁱ from ²⁰ Mizpah after the murder of Gedaliah son of Ahikam: men,^j women and children, and eunuchs, whom Johanan brought back from Gibeon. •They set out, making ²¹ a halt at Khan Kimham near Bethlehem. Their plan was to make for Egypt, ²² away from the Chaldaeans, of whom they were now terrified because Ishmael son of ²³ Nethaniah had killed Gedaliah son of Ahikam whom the king of Babylon had ²⁴ made governor of the country.

42 Then all the army leaders, with Johanan son of Kareah and Azariah^a ¹ son of Hoshaiah, and all the people from least to greatest, approached the prophet Jeremiah and said, 'May it please you to hear our request! Intercede^b ²

- with Yahweh your God for all this remnant—and how few we are who once
 3 were so many, your own eyes can now see—so that Yahweh your God may show
 4 us the way we are to go and what we must do.’ •The prophet Jeremiah replied, ‘I hear you; and I will indeed pray to Yahweh your God as you ask; and every word Yahweh your God replies^c I will tell you, keeping nothing back from you’.
 5 They in their turn said to Jeremiah, ‘May Yahweh be a true and faithful witness against us, if we do not follow the instructions that Yahweh your God 6 sends us through you. •Whether we like it or not, we mean to obey the voice of Yahweh our God to whom we send you to speak for us, and by thus obeying the voice of Yahweh our God we will prosper.’
 7 Ten days later the word of Yahweh was addressed to Jeremiah. •He then summoned Johanan son of Kareah and all the army leaders who were with 9 him, and all the people from least to greatest. •He said, ‘Yahweh, the God of 10 Israel, to whom you delegated me to offer your request says this: •“If you are willing to remain peaceably^d in this country, I will build you and not overthrow you; I will plant you, not tear you up. For I am sorry for the evil I have done 11 you. •Do not be afraid of the king of Babylon any longer; do not fear him—it is Yahweh who speaks—for I am with you to save you and deliver you from his 12 hands. •I will take pity on you, and move him to pity you and let you return to 13 your native soil. •But if you say: We do not want to stay in this country; if you 14 disobey the voice of Yahweh your God, •and say: No, the land of Egypt is where we want to go, where we shall not see war nor hear the sound of trumpet, 15 nor lack for bread; that is where we want to live; •in that case, remnant of Judah, listen to the word of Yahweh. Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this: If 16 you are determined to go to Egypt, and if you do go and settle there, the sword you fear will overtake you, there in the land of Egypt; the famine you dread 17 will follow on your heels, right into Egypt; you shall die there. •All the men who are determined to go to Egypt and settle there shall die by sword, famine and 18 plague: not one survivor will escape the disaster I mean to bring them. •Yes, Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this: Just as my anger and my fury have been poured out on the citizens of Jerusalem, so will my fury be poured out on you if you go to Egypt: you will become an object of execration and horror, a curse, a laughing-stock; and you will never see this place again.”’^e 19 43 However, when Jeremiah had finished telling all the people all the words of Yahweh their God, with which Yahweh^a had entrusted him for them 2 —all the words quoted above—•Azariah son of Hoshaiiah, and Johanan son of Kareah, and all those arrogant and apostate^b men, said to Jeremiah, ‘You are lying. Yahweh did not instruct you to say, “Do not go to Egypt and settle 3 there”. •It is Baruch son of Neriah who keeps encouraging you to thwart us, to hand us over into the power of the Chaldeans, who will either put us to death or deport us to Babylon!’

go into Egypt". Understand this clearly: today I have given you solemn warning. You were playing with your own lives when you made me your envoy to Yahweh your God and said, "Intercede for us with Yahweh our God; tell us what Yahweh our God orders and we will do it". •And now that I have told you, you have not obeyed the voice of Yahweh your God today, or any part of the message he gave me for you. •So understand this clearly: you are going to die by sword, famine and plague in the place where you have been wanting to go and settle.'

43 Despite this, Johanan son of Kareah and all the army leaders and all the people would not obey the voice of Yahweh and stay in the land of Judah. •Johanan son of Kareah and all the army leaders led off the entire remnant of Judah, these who had come back from all the nations into which they had been dispersed, to live in the land of Judah: •men, women, children, the royal princesses too, and every single person entrusted to Gedaliah son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, by Nebuzaradan, commander of the guard; they also led off the prophet Jeremiah and Baruch son of Neriah. •And so, disregarding the voice of Yahweh, they reached the land of Egypt and arrived at Tahpanhes.'

Jeremiah foretells the invasion of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar

(LXX 50:8-13)

At Tahpanhes the word of Yahweh was addressed to Jeremiah, •'Take some large stones and bury them in the presence of the men of Judah in the cement on the square^d outside the entrance of Pharaoh's palace in Tahpanhes. Then say to them, "Yahweh, the God of Israel, says this: I am sending for Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, my servant; he^e will place his throne over these stones that I have buried, and spread his canopy above them. •He is coming to strike the land of Egypt:

Those for the plague, to the plague;
those for captivity, into captivity;
those for the sword, to the sword!

He^f will set fire to the temples of the gods of Egypt; he will burn these gods or carry them off; as a shepherd picks his cloak clean of vermin, so will he pick Egypt clean and leave without interference.^g •He will break the obelisks of the temple of the Sun at On^h and burn down the temples of the gods of Egypt."

The last episode of Jeremiah's ministry: the Jews and the Queen of Heaven

44 The word that was addressed to Jeremiah for all the Jews living in the land of Egypt with homes in Migdol, Tahpanhes, Noph and the land of Pathros,^a

'Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this: You have seen all the misery I have brought down on Jerusalem and the towns of Judah; today they lie in ruins and uninhabited. •This was because of the wicked deeds which they committed to provoke me, offering incense and serving alien gods which neither they, nor you, nor your ancestors ever knew. •I persistently sent you all my servants the prophets; I sent them to say, "Do not commit this abomination that I find so hateful". •But they would not listen, would not pay attention and so turn from their wicked deeds and no longer offer incense to alien gods. And so my fury and my anger overflowed, burning down the towns of Judah and the streets of Jerusalem, which were reduced to ruins and wasteland, as they still are today. •And now, Yahweh, the God of Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this: Why bring the same disaster on yourselves? Do you want to destroy all the men, women, children and babes in arms, out of Judah,^b and leave yourselves no remnant, •by provoking me with the work of your own hands, offering incense to alien gods in the land of Egypt where you have come to settle, thus working for your own destruction, to become a curse and a

- 9 laughing-stock for all the nations of the earth? •Have you forgotten the 42:18 crimes of your ancestors, of the kings of Judah and of their wives,^c your own crimes, the crimes of your own wives, committed in the land of Judah and 10 in the streets of Jerusalem? •To this day they have felt neither contrition nor 26:4
fear; they have not observed my Law nor the statutes I proclaimed before you, 11 as before your ancestors. •Therefore—Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this: Now I mean to turn my face against you to bring disaster, and exterminate 12 the whole of Judah. •The remnant of Judah who resolved to come to the land of Egypt and to settle there, I will remove: they will all perish in the land of Egypt; they will fall to the sword or perish of famine, from least to greatest; by sword and famine they will die; they will be an object of execration and horror, 24:9 13 a curse, a laughing-stock. •I will deal as severely with these who have made their home in the land of Egypt, as I dealt with Jerusalem, with sword, famine 14 and plague. •Of the remnant of Judah settled in the land of Egypt, not one survivor is going to escape to return to the land of Judah where they long to live once again. For none of them are going to return, except for a few refugees.’
15 At this, all the men who knew that their wives offered incense to alien gods, and all the women who were standing there, a large assembly (with all the people living in Pathros in the land of Egypt), answered Jeremiah as follows, 16 ‘We have no intention of listening to this word you have spoken to us in Yahweh’s
17 name, •but intend to go on doing all we have vowed to do: offering incense 7:18+ to the Queen of Heaven^d and pouring libations in her honour, as we used to do, we and our fathers, our kings and our leaders, in the towns of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem: we had food in plenty then, we lived well, we suffered no 18 disasters. •But since we gave up offering incense to the Queen of Heaven and pouring libations in her honour, we have been destitute and have perished 19 either by sword or by famine.’ •The women added,^e ‘When we offer incense to the Queen of Heaven and pour libations in her honour, do you think we make cakes for her with her features on them, and pour libations to her, without our husbands’ knowledge?’
20 To all the people, men and women, all those who had made this answer, 21 Jeremiah retorted, •‘The incense you offered in the towns of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem, you, your fathers, your kings, your leaders, and the people 19:6 of the country—is not this what Yahweh remembered, what came to his mind?
22 Yahweh could no longer endure your misdeeds and your detestable practices;
this is why your country has today become a desert, an object of horror and 23 a curse, uninhabited. •And this has happened because you offered incense, because you sinned against Yahweh, refusing to listen to the voice of Yahweh, 26:4 or to observe his Law, his statutes and his decrees; this is the cause of the disaster that has overtaken you—as is the case today.’
24 Then Jeremiah spoke to all the people, and particularly to all the women, 25 ‘Listen to the word of Yahweh:^f •Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this, “You women, what your mouth promises, your hands should certainly perform! You have said: We will perform the vows we have made without fail and offer incense to the Queen of Heaven and pour libations in her honour. Very well, 26 keep your vows, make your libations!^g •But listen to the word of Yahweh,

To your ranks! On with your helmets!

Sharpen your spears,

What do I see?

They are panic-stricken,
in full retreat!

Their heroes, beaten back,
are fleeing headlong
with not a look behind.

Terror from every side!

—it is Yahweh who speaks.

The fastest cannot escape,

nor the bravest save himself:

there in the north, there by the river Euphrates,
they have collapsed, have fallen.

Who was it rose like the Nile,
its waters foaming like a torrent?

Why, Egypt rose like the Nile,
its waters foaming like a torrent.

'I will rise,' he said 'and drown the earth;
sweep towns and their inhabitants away!

Charge, horses!

Crash on, chariots!

Advance, warriors,

you men from Cush and Put with shield in hand,

you men from Lud who bend the bow!^c

Now, this is the day of the Lord Yahweh,^d a day of vengeance for his revenge on his enemies:

his sword^e will eat them up and have its fill,

i. The bull, sacred to the god Ptah, tutelary deity of Memphis.

Has your Strong One not stood firm?^j
 Yes, Yahweh has knocked him •flat!
 He tottered, and now he has fallen down!^k
 Then they said to each other,
 'Up! Let us go back to our own people, to the country where we were born, far from the destroying sword!'
 16

Give this name to Pharaoh:^l
 'Much-noise-but-he-lets-the-chance-slip-by'!
 As I live—it is the King who speaks whose name is Yahweh Sabaoth—
 someone will come, a Tabor among mountains,
 a Carmel high above the sea.

Get your bundle ready for exile, daughter of Egypt, so safe in your home!
 Noph will be reduced to a desert,
 desolate, uninhabited.
 Egypt was a splendid heifer,
 but a gad-fly from the North has settled on her.^m

The mercenaries she had with her, these too were as sleek as fattened calves:
 but they too have taken to their heels,
 they all run at once and cannot hold their ground.
 For on them comes the day of their disaster,
 their time of reckoning.
 21

Listen: a sound like a serpent hissing!ⁿ
 Yes, they are coming in force to fall on her with their axes,
 like woodcutters,
 they will fell her forest—it is Yahweh who speaks.
 Yes, they are^o past counting,
 outnumbering the locusts,
 innumerable.
 22
23

The daughter of Egypt is put to shame, handed over to a people from the North.
 24

Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, has said: Now I mean to punish Amon of No,^p with Pharaoh and those who put their trust in him. •I will hand him over to those who are determined to kill him, over to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, over to his servants. But in later days, Egypt will be inhabited again as in the past—it is Yahweh who speaks.^q

But do not be afraid, my servant Jacob, Israel, do not be alarmed:^r look, I will rescue you from distant countries and your descendants from the country where they are captive.
 Jacob will have quiet again
 and live at ease, with no one to trouble him.
 Do not be afraid, my servant Jacob
 —it is Yahweh who speaks—for I am with you:
 I will make an end of all the nations
 where I have scattered you;
 I will not make an end of you,
 only discipline you in moderation,
 so as not to let you go entirely unpunished.

Oracle against the Philistines

(LXX 29:1-7) Jos 13:2+
Ezk 25:15-17
Am 1:6-8
Zp 2:4-7

- 1 47 The word of Yahweh that was addressed to Jeremiah against the 2 Philistines before Pharaoh took Gaza by storm.^a •Yahweh says this:

See how the waters rise from the North,
 and become an overflowing torrent, overflowing the country and all it contains,
 the towns and their inhabitants!
 Men shout aloud, and there is wailing from all the inhabitants of the country, at the thunder of his stallions' hoofs,
 the crash of his chariots, the grinding of his wheels.
 Fathers forget about their children,
 their hands fall limp
 because the day has come on which all the Philistines are to be destroyed, on which Tyre and Sidon are to be stripped to the last of their auxiliaries.
 Yes, Yahweh is destroying the Philistines,
 the remnant from the Isle of Caphtor.
 A shaven scalp for Gaza!
 Silence over Ashkelon!
 Ashdod,^b all that is left of the Anakim, how long will you gash yourselves?^c Oh, sword of Yahweh,
 how long before you rest?
 Back into your scabbard,
 stop, keep still!
 Yet how can it rest
 when Yahweh has given it an order?
 Ashkelon and the sea coast,
 these are the targets assigned to it.

q. For similar prophecies of recovery for nations punished by Yahweh, see 48:47; 49:6,39.

r. The prophecy of recovery for Egypt in v. 26 is matched by the promise to Israel in vv. 27-28. These last verses repeat 30:10-11, but now 'Jacob' and 'Israel' indicate not only the Northern Kingdom but, in the spirit of the second part of Is, the whole people of Yahweh.

47 a. According to Herodotus, Hophra attacked Tyre and Sidon; his attack on their allies, the Philistines, perhaps occurred at the same time.

b. 'Ashdod' inserted conjecturally.

48 a. It is difficult to identify the original nucleus of this oracle, the text of which incorporates several biblical passages of earlier date: Is 15-16; Nb 21:27-30; 24:17. It may have been delivered shortly after 605, cf. Jr 25:21, or 593, cf. 27:3, or 587, cf. Ezk 25:8-11.

b. Hebr. adds 'is put to shame', absent from Greek.

c. Where the enemy has set up his headquarters. The Hebr. plays on the words Heshbon and hashbab (to plot), as also on Madmen and iddomi (to be subdued).

'Come on! Let us blot her out from the nations!'

The destroyer of Moab has advanced on him:ⁿ 15

Moab's ruin is coming soon, 16

Grieve for him, all you living near him, 17
all you who knew his name.
22:18+ Say, 'Imagine it being broken, that mighty rod,

Come down from your glory, sit in the dung,^p 18

the destroyer of Moab has advanced on you,
he has stormed your strongholds.
Stand by the roadside, keep watch, 19 inhabitants of Aroer.

Question fugitive and runaway,
ask, 'What has happened?'^a Moab is shattered and shamed.

who will spread his wings over Moab.)

The towns will be captured, 41
the strongholds seized.

(And the heart of Moab's warriors that day will be like the heart of a woman their faces will turn in that direction:

'Come,' they say 'let us bind ourselves^f to Yahweh
by an everlasting covenant never to be forgotten!'

Lost sheep, such were my people;

their shepherds led them astray, left them wandering in the mountains;
from mountain to hill they went,
forgetful of their fold.

Whoever came across them devoured them,

7

their enemies said, 'No blame to us;

it is because they have sinned against Yahweh their true fold and the hope of their fathers'.^g

Escape out of Babylon,

First, the king of Assyria devoured him; next, Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon
18 crunched his bones. •Therefore—Yahweh, the God of Israel, says this: Now I will punish the king of Babylon and his country as I punished the king of Assyria.

and on the highlands of Ephraim and in Gilead to eat his fill.

for Judah's sins, you will not find them.
For I will pardon the remnant that I leave.

The fall of Babylon proclaimed to Jerusalem

(LXX 27:21-28)

March up to the land of Merathaim; 21 march against it and against the inhabitants of Pekod;
 follow them;
 brandish the sword, let their destruction be complete,
 it is Yahweh who speaks.
 Do everything I have ordered!^a
 The din of battle fills the country, 22 immense destruction.

 What! Babylon become a thing of horror, throughout the nations?

 You have been found out and overpowered,
 because you defied Yahweh.

Jos 6:17+

Yahweh has opened his armoury 25
 and taken out the weapons of his fury.
 For the Lord Yahweh^r has work to do in the country of the Chaldaeans.
 Fall on her, one and all,^s 26
 break her granaries open, pile the plunder up like heaps of grain, put her under the ban until nothing is left of her.
 Slaughter all her bulls, 27
 down to the slaughter-house with them!
 Woe to them, their day has come,
 their time of reckoning.
 Listen! Fugitives and runaways come 28 from the land of Babylon to proclaim in Zion
 the vengeance of Yahweh our God.^t

The sin of arrogance

(LXX 27:29-32)

Call up the archers against Babylon! 29
 All you who bend the bow,
 encamp round her:
 leave her no way of escape.
 Repay her as her deeds deserve;
 treat her as she has treated others,
 to repay her arrogance against Yahweh,
 against the Holy One of Israel.

Yahweh the redeemer of Israel

(LXX 27:33-40)

- 33 Yahweh Sabaoth says this:
The sons of Israel are oppressed,^u
all those who have taken them captive hold them fast, they will not let them go.

he will bring peacefulness to the world

within her: may they be like women!
A sword for her treasures: may they be plundered! 51:13
- 38 A sword^x for her waters: may they dry up! 51:36
For it is a country of idols: they are mad, they and their bogies.
- 39 Hence wild cats and jackals will live there, 51:37
and ostriches make their home there. ^r Rv 18:2
She will never be inhabited again, but remain uninhabited age after age.

no man will make his home there ever again.

The enemy from the north and the lion of Jordan^y

(LXX 27:41-46)

- 41 Now a people is coming from the North, =6:23-24
a mighty nation;
from the far ends of the earth
great kings are stirring:
they fight with bow and spear, 42 they are cruel and pitiless;
their noise is like the roaring of the sea;
they ride horses,
each man equipped for war
on you, daughter of Babylon.
- 43 But the king of Babylon has heard the news of them,
his hands fall limp,
anguish has seized him,
pain like that of a woman in labour. 4:31

See how the lion climbs from the thickets of the Jordan
to a perennial pasture!
So shall I chase them suddenly away,
and place there whom I please.
For who is there like me?
Who can hale me into court?
Name me the shepherd
who can stand up to me.
So now hear the plan
that Yahweh has made for Babylon,
the schemes he has in mind
for the country of the Chaldaeans:
yes, even the weakest of the flock will be dragged away.
At such a sight their pastures will shudder with dread.
Earth trembles at the sound of the capture of Babylon,
the dirge for her is heard throughout the nations.

The written oracle thrown into the Euphrates^x

(LXX 28:59-64)

- 59 This is the order that the prophet Jeremiah gave to Seraiah son of Mahseiah when the latter left for Babylon at the command of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the fourth year of his reign. •Now Jeremiah had written down the entire disaster that was to befall Babylon in a special book, all these words recorded here as regards Babylon. •Jeremiah then said to Seraiah, 'When you reach Babylon, make a point of reading out every one of these words. •Then say, "Yahweh, you yourself have proclaimed that this place will be destroyed, that no one will live here ever again, neither man nor beast, but that it will remain desolate for ever". •When you have finished reading this book, tie a stone to it and throw it into the middle of the Euphrates, •with the words, "So shall Babylon sink, never to rise again from the disaster with which I am going to overwhelm her".' ^{51:26}

The destruction of Jerusalem and the pardon of Jehoiachin

||2 K 24:18-25:30

- 1 52 Zedekiah was twenty-one years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned for eleven years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Hamital, daughter of Jeremiah, from Libnah. •He did what is displeasing to Yahweh, just as Jehoiakim had done. •That this happened in Jerusalem and Judah was due to the anger of Yahweh, with the result that in the end he cast them away from him.
- 4 Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon. •In the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month,^b on the tenth day of the month, Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came with his whole army to attack Jerusalem; he pitched camp in front of the city and threw up earthworks round it. •The city lay under siege till the eleventh year of King Zedekiah. •In the fourth month,^c on the ninth day of the month, when famine was raging in the city and there was no food for the populace, •a breach was made in the city wall. Seeing this, the king^d fled under cover of dark, with all the fighting men, leaving the city by way of the gate between the two walls, which is near the king's garden—the Chaldaeans had surrounded the city—and making his way towards the Arabah. •The Chaldaean troops pursued the king and caught up with Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho, where all his troops deserted. •The Chaldaeans captured the king and took him to the king of Babylon at Riblah in the land of Hamath, who passed sentence on him. •He had the sons of Zedekiah slaughtered before his eyes; he also had all the leading men of Judah put to death at Riblah. •He then put out Zedekiah's eyes. Loading him with chains, the king of Babylon carried him off to Babylon where he kept him prisoner until his dying day. ^{=39:1-10}

Chaldaean troops who accompanied the commander of the guard demolished all the walls surrounding Jerusalem.

Nebuzaradan, commander of the guard, deported^g the remainder of the population left behind in the city, the deserters who had gone over to the king of Babylon, and the remainder of the artisans.^h •Nebuzaradan, commander of the guard, left some of the humbler country people as vineyard workers and ploughmen.

The Chaldaeans broke up the bronze pillars from the Temple of Yahweh, the wheeled stands and the bronze Sea that were in the Temple of Yahweh, and took all the bronze away to Babylon. •They also took the ash containers, the scoops, the knives, the sprinkling bowls, the incense boats, and all the bronze furnishings used in worship. •The commander of the guard also took the bowls, the censers, the sprinkling bowls, the ash containers, the lamp-stands, the goblets and the saucers: everything that was made of gold and everything made of silver. •As regards the two pillars, the one Sea and the twelve bronze oxen supporting the Sea,ⁱ and the wheeled stands, which King Solomon had made for the Temple of Yahweh, there was no reckoning the weight of bronze in all these objects. •As regards the pillars, the height of one pillar was eighteen cubits, its circumference was twelve cubits, it was four fingers thick, and hollow inside; •on it stood a capital of bronze, the height of the capital being five cubits; round the capital were filigree and pomegranates, all in bronze. So also for the second pillar.^j •There were ninety-six pomegranates which hung down, making a hundred pomegranates round the filigree in all.

The commander of the guard took prisoner Seraiah the chief priest, Zephaniah the priest next in rank, and the three guardians of the threshold. •In the city he took prisoner a eunuch who was in command of the fighting men, seven of the king's personal friends who were discovered in the city, the secretary of the army commander, responsible for military conscription, and sixty men of distinction discovered in the city. •Nebuzaradan, commander of the guard, took these men and brought them to the king of Babylon at Riblah, •and at Riblah, in the land of Hamath, the king of Babylon had them put to death.

Thus Judah was deported from its land. •The number of people deported by Nebuchadnezzar was as follows.^k In the seventh year: three thousand and twenty-three Judaeans; •in the eighteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar, eight hundred and thirty-two persons were deported from Jerusalem; •in the twenty-third year^l of Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuzaradan, commander of the guard, deported seven hundred and forty-five Judaeans. In all: four thousand six hundred persons.

But in the thirty-seventh year of the exile of Jehoiachin king of Judah, in the twelfth month, on the twenty-fifth day of the month, Evil-merodach king of Babylon, in the year he came to the throne,^m pardoned Jehoiachin king of Judah and released him from prison. •He treated him kindly and allotted him a seat above those of the other kings who were with him in Babylon. •So Jehoiachin laid aside his prisoner's garb, and for the rest of his life always ate at the king's table. •And his upkeep was permanently ensured by the king for the rest of his life day after day until his dying day.

ed from a Babylonian source: the years of Nebuchadnezzar's reign are calculated in the Babylonian fashion which does not count the incomplete year of accession.

is now reduced to vassalage.
- 2 Beth She passes her nights weeping;
the tears run down her cheeks.
Not one of all her lovers^b remains to comfort her.
Her friends have all betrayed her and become her enemies.
- 3 Ghimel Judah is exiled after her downfall
and harsh enslavement.
She dwells among the nations now,
but finds no relief there.
Her pursuers all overtake her in places where there is no way out.
- 4 Daleth The roads to Zion are in mourning;
no one comes to her festivals now.
Her gateways are all deserted;
her priests groan;
her virgins are grief-stricken;
she suffers bitterly.
- 5 He Her oppressors now have the upper hand,
her enemies enjoy prosperity;
Yahweh himself has made her suffer
for her many, many sins;
her little children have left her as prisoners driven in front of the oppressor.
- 6 Waw From the daughter of Zion
all her glory has departed.
Her leaders were like rams^c that find no pasture.

1 a. The poet describes the pitiable plight of Jerusalem. Personified Zion speaks in v. 9 and v. 11, to utter a complaint, vv. 12-16, then a prayer, vv. 18f, which is simultaneously a confession, an aspiration and an imprecation. Greek and Vulg. here insert the introduction 'When Israel had been taken into captivity and Jerusalem had become a wilderness, it happened that the prophet Jeremiah sat down in tears: he uttered this lamentation over Jerusalem, he said...' b. The former allies of Judah. c. 'rams' Greek, Vulg.; 'stags' Hebr.

Listlessly they took the road,
driven by the drover.

Zain Jerusalem remembers 7
her days of misery and distress,^d when her people fell before the enemy and no one came to help her.
Her oppressors looked at her and laughed at her downfall.

Heth Jerusalem has sinned grievously 8
and she has^e become a thing unclean.
All those who used to honour her despise her;
they have seen her nakedness.
While she herself groans and turns her face away.

Is 47:3

Teth Her filth clings to the hem of her clothes. 9
She had never thought of ending like this,
sinking as low as this.
She has no one to comfort her.

SECOND LAMENTATION^a

- Aleph* Oh, how Yahweh in his wrath 1
has brought darkness on the daughter of Zion!
He has flung the glory of Israel from heaven to the ground, no more remembering his footstool^b
on the day of his wrath.
- Beth* The Lord has pitilessly destroyed 2
all the homes of Jacob;
in his displeasure he has shattered
the strongholds of the daughter of Judah;
he has thrown to the ground, he has left accursed
the kingdom and its rulers.
- Ghimel* In his burning anger 3
he has broken every horn in Israel, withdrawn the strength of his right hand
at the coming of the enemy, and kindled in Jacob a fire that burns up everything near it.
- Daleth* Like an enemy he has bent his bow, 4 holding his right hand steady;
like a foe, he has slaughtered
everything that delights the eye;
on the tent of the daughter of Zion
he has poured his anger out like fire.
- He* The Lord has been like an enemy; 5
he has destroyed Israel;
he has destroyed every one of her palaces,
laid low her strongholds,
and for the daughters of Judah has multiplied wailing on wailing.
- Waw* He has wrecked his own domain like a garden, 6 shattered his own gathering place;
Yahweh has wiped out the memory of festivals and sabbaths in Zion;
in the heat of his wrath he has repudiated
king and priest.
- Zain* The Lord has grown weary of his altar, 7
has come to loathe his sanctuary, and handed her palace walls
over to the enemy;
from the uproar in the Temple of Yahweh^c it might have been a day of festival.
- Heth* Yahweh resolved to ruin 8
the city wall of the daughter of Zion;
with a line he measured it, and did not withdraw his hand
until he had completely overthrown it, bringing mourning on city wall and rampart;
now they are crumbling down together.

FIFTH LAMENTATION^a

Ne 9:32

1 5 Yahweh, remember what has happened to us;
look on us and see our degradation.

2 Our inheritance has passed to aliens,
our homes to barbarians.

3 We are orphans, we are fatherless;
our mothers are like widows.

	Slaves ^e rule us; no one rescues us from them.	8
	At peril of our lives we earn our bread, by risking the sword of the desert.	9
	Our skin is as hot as the oven, such is the fever of famine.	10
2 Ch 36:17	They have raped the women in Zion, the virgins in the towns of Judah.	11
	Princes have been hanged at their hands; the face of the old has not been respected.	12
	Youths have toiled at the mill; boys have collapsed under loads of wood.	13
Ps 137:2	The elders have deserted the gateway; the young men have given up their music.	14
	Joy has vanished from our hearts; our dancing has been turned to mourning.	15
	The garland has fallen from our heads. Woe to us, because we have sinned!	16

THE BOOK OF BARUCH

I. INTRODUCTION

Baruch and the Jews in Babylon^a

¹ 1 These are the words of the book written in Babylon by Baruch son of Neraiah, ^{Jr 32:12; 36:4}
² son of Mahseiah, son of Zedekiah, son of Hasadiah, son of Hilkiah, •in the fifth year,^b on the seventh day of the month, at the time when the Chaldeans captured Jerusalem and burned it down.

³ Baruch read the words of this book aloud to Jeconiah^c son of Jehoiakim, ^{2 K 24:8-17 Jr 22:24-30}
⁴ king of Judah, and to all the people who had come to hear the reading, •to the nobles and the sons of the king,^d and to the elders; to the whole people, that is, least no less than greatest, to all who lived in Babylon beside the river Sud.
⁵ On hearing it they wept, fasted and prayed before the Lord; •and they collected
⁶ as much money as each could afford •and sent it to Jerusalem for the priest Jehoiakim^e son of Hilkiah, son of Shallum, and the other priests, and for as ⁸ many of the people as were with him in Jerusalem. •It was Baruch who on the tenth day of Sivan had recovered the utensils of the house of the Lord, which had been removed from the Temple, to take them back^f to the land of Judah: these were silver utensils which Zedekiah son of Josiah, king of Judah, had had

¹⁰ With this—they wrote—we are sending you money with which to pay for holocausts, offerings for sin, and incense; prepare oblations, and offer them on the altar
¹¹ of the Lord our God. •Pray for the long life of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, ^{Jr 29:7 1 Tm 2:1-2} and of his son Belshazzar, and that their days on earth may endure as the
¹² heavens; •pray that the Lord may give us strength and clear understanding so that we may lead our lives under the protection of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon and of his son Belshazzar, and by our long service win their favour. ^{Dn 5:2,13}
¹³ Also pray to the Lord our God for us, because we have sinned against him, and the anger, the fury of the Lord, has still not yet been turned away from us.
¹⁴ Lastly, you are to read the book aloud which we send you with this and so make public confession in the house of the Lord on the feastday^h and on days
¹⁵ of solemn assembly. •You are to say:

1 a. On the elements of which Ba is composed, see Introduction to the Prophets.

b. The year 582, probably in the 5th month, anniversary of the fall of Jerusalem which was doubtless commemorated among the exiles as it was in Palestine, cf. Zc 7:3; hence the gathering referred to in vv. 3-4.

c. Called also Jehoiachin.

d. Or 'king's men', court officials.

e. Next in rank, apparently, to the high priest, cf. 2 K 25:18. He lived in Jerusalem beside what was left of the Temple; the high priest Jehozadak had been exiled to Babylon, 1 Ch 5:41.

f. The historical books speak only of a return of the sacred vessels under Cyrus, Ezr 1:7-11.

g. 'metalworkers', following Jr 24:1; 'captives' Greek.

h. The feast of Tabernacles, cf. Ex 23:14+. The 'solemn assembly' took place on the 1st and 8th days of the feast, Lv 23:35-36.

II. THE PRAYER OF THE EXILES

Confession of sins

Integrity belongs to the Lord our God; to us the look of shame we wear today, to us, the people of Judah and the citizens of Jerusalem, •to our kings and princes, our priests, our prophets, as to our ancestors, •because we have sinned in the sight of the Lord, •have disobeyed him, and have not listened to the voice of the Lord our God telling us to follow the commandments which the Lord had ordained for us. •From the day when the Lord brought our ancestors out of the land of Egypt until today we have been disobedient to the Lord our God, we have been disloyal,ⁱ refusing to listen to his voice. •And so the disasters, and the curse which the Lord pronounced through his servant Moses the day he brought our fathers out of Egypt to give us a land where milk and honey flow, have seized on us, disasters we experience today. •Despite all the words of those prophets whom he sent us, we have not listened to the voice of the Lord our God, •but, each following the dictates of his evil heart, we have taken to serving alien gods, and doing what is displeasing to the Lord our God.

2 And so the Lord has carried out the sentence which he passed on us, on our judges who governed Israel, on our kings and leaders, on the men of Israel and of Judah; •what he did to Jerusalem has never been paralleled under the wide heavens—all this in conformity with what was written in the Law of Moses; •we were all reduced to eating the flesh of our own sons and daughters. Furthermore, he has handed them over into the power of all the kingdoms that surround us, to be loathed and avoided by all the neighbouring nations among whom he scattered them. •Instead of being masters, they found themselves enslaved, because we had sinned against the Lord our God by not listening to his voice.

Integrity belongs to the Lord our God; to us the look of shame we wear today, to us, as to our ancestors. •All those disasters which the Lord pronounced against us have now happened to us. •And yet we have not tried to win the favour of the Lord by each one of us renouncing the dictates of his own wicked heart; •and so the Lord has watched for the right moment to bring disaster on us, since the Lord gives a just return for what we do of all that he has ordered us to do, •and we have not listened to his voice telling us to follow the commandments which the Lord had ordained for us.

The prayer

And now, Lord, God of Israel, who brought your people out of the land of Egypt with a mighty hand, with signs and wonders, with great power and with outstretched arm, to win yourself a name renowned today, •we have sinned, we have been irreligious; Lord our God, we have broken all your commandments. •Let your anger turn from us since we are no more than a poor remnant among the nations where you have dispersed us. •Listen, Lord, to our prayer, to our entreaty; deliver us for the sake of your honour and grant us your favour for all our captors to see it, •so that the whole world may know that you are the Lord our God, since Israel and his descendants bear your name. •Look down, Lord, from your holy dwelling place and give a thought to us, take heed of us and listen, •look at us, Lord, and consider; the dead down in Sheol, whose breath has been taken from their bodies, are not the ones to give glory and due observance to the Lord; •the person overcome with affliction, who goes his way bowed down and frail, with failing eyes and hungering soul,^a he is the one to give you glory, Lord, and due observance.

We do not rely on the merits of our ancestors and of our kings to offer you our humble plea, Lord our God. •No. You have sent down your anger and your fury on us, as you promised through your servants the prophets when they said,

21 'The Lord says this: Bend your necks and submit to the king of Babylon, and you Jr 27:12
 22 will remain in the land which I gave your ancestors. •But if you do not listen to 23 the voice of the Lord and submit to the king of Babylon, •then I will silence the Jr 7:34 shouts of rejoicing and mirth and the voices of bridegroom and bride in the towns of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem, and the whole land will be reduced to desert, 24 without inhabitants. •But we did not listen to your voice and submit to the king of Babylon, and so you carried out what you had promised through your servants the prophets: that the bones of our kings and of our ancestors would be dragged Jr 8:1-2 25 from their resting places. •They were indeed tossed out to the heat of the day Jr 36:30 and the frost of the night. And people died in dreadful agony, from famine, Jr 14:12 26 sword and plague. •And so, because of the wickedness of the House of Israel and the House of Judah, you have made this House, that bears your name, what it is today.

27 And yet, Lord our God, you have treated us in a way worthy of all 28 your goodness and boundless tenderness, •just as you had promised through your servant Moses, the day you told him to write your Law in the presence of the 29 sons of Israel, and said this, •'If you do not listen to my voice, this great and Lv 26:39 innumerable multitude will certainly be reduced to a tiny few among the nations 30 among which I shall disperse them, •and I know very well that this people will not listen, it is so stubborn. But in the country of their exile they will take 31 all this to heart •and acknowledge that I am the Lord their God. I will give Lv 26:44f
 32 them a heart and an attentive ear. •They will sing my praises in the country Jr 4:4+ 33 of their exile, they will remember my name; •they will not be stubborn any Ezk 36:26+ more, but, remembering what became of their ancestors who sinned in the sight Dt 30:1,9f 34 of the Lord, will turn from their evil deeds. •Then I will bring them back to the land I promised on oath to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and make them 35 masters in it. I will increase their number: they shall not dwindle. •And I will Jr 31:31 make an everlasting covenant with them; I will be their God and they shall be my people. And I will never again drive my people Israel out of the land that I have given them.'

1 3 Almighty Lord, God of Israel, a soul in anguish, a troubled heart now cries 2:18
 2 to you: •Listen and have pity, Lord, for we have sinned in your sight. •You
 3 sit enthroned for ever, while we perish continually. •Almighty Lord, God of Ps 29:10;
 4 Israel, hear the prayer of the dead of Israel,^a of the sons of those who have 44:22 sinned against you and have not listened to the voice of the Lord their God, Lm 5:19
 5 hence the disasters that have seized on us. •Do not call to mind the misdeeds
 6 of our ancestors, but remember instead your power and your name. •You are 7 indeed the Lord our God and we long to praise you, Lord, •since you have Jr 31:33 put respect for you in our hearts to encourage us to call on your name. We long to praise you in our exile, for we have emptied our hearts of the evil inclin-8 ations of our ancestors who sinned against you. •Look on us today, still in exile where you have dispersed us as something execrable, accursed, condemned, in 2:4 punishment for all the misdeeds of our ancestors who had abandoned the Lord Tb 3:4
 our God.

IV. THE COMPLAINTS AND HOPES OF JERUSALEM^a

- 5 Take courage, my people, constant reminder of Israel.^b 6 You were sold to the nations, Is 50:1; 52:3
 but not for extermination.
 You provoked God;
 and so were delivered to your enemies,
 7 since you had angered your creator
 by offering sacrifices to demons, not to God.
 8 You had forgotten the eternal God who reared you.
 You had also grieved Jerusalem who nursed you, 9 for when she saw the anger fall on you from God, she said:
 Listen, you neighbours of Zion:
 God has sent me great sorrow.
 10 I have seen my sons and daughters taken into captivity,
 to which they have been sentenced by the Eternal.
 11 I had reared them joyfully;
 in tears, in sorrow, I watched them go away.
 12 Do not, any of you, exult over me,
 a widow, deserted by so many;
 I suffer loneliness because of the sins of my own children, who turned away from the Law of God, Lm 1:1-2

b. As in Jb 28:13-28, this question is first answered negatively: man cannot achieve wisdom of himself, 3:16-31; the positive answer follows: wisdom is God's possession, he has enriched Israel with it by his gift of the Law, 3:32-4:4.

c. 'her way' Syr.; 'their way' Greek.

d. 'Midian' corr.; 'Merran' Greek.

e. The universe.

4 a. After the introductory verses, 5-9a, personified Jerusalem addresses the neighbouring towns and her own scattered children, vv. 9b-29; the poet then replies with a promise of recovery in messianic days, 4:30-5:9.

b. The race in which Jacob's God-given name is perpetuated.

who did not want to know his injunctions, 13
 and would not follow the ways of his precepts, or tread the paths of discipline as his justice directed.
 Let them come here, those neighbours of Zion. 14
 Let me remind you of the captivity of my sons and daughters
 to which they have been sentenced by the Eternal:
 how he brought a distant nation down on them, 15
 a ruthless nation speaking a foreign language, having neither respect for the aged,
 nor pity for the child;
 they carried off the widow's cherished sons, 16
 they left her quite alone, bereft of her daughters.
 For my part, how can I help you? 17
 He who brought those disasters down on you, 18
 he is the one to deliver you from the hands of your enemies.
 Go, my children, go your way! 19
 I must stay bereft and lonely;
 I have taken off the clothes of peacetime, 20
 and put on the sackcloth of entreaty;
 I will cry to the Eternal all my life.
 Take courage, my children, call on God: 21
 he will deliver you from tyranny, from the hands of your enemies;
 for I look to the Eternal for your rescue, 22 and joy has come to me from the Holy One at the mercy soon to reach you from your saviour, the Eternal.
 In sorrow and tears I watched you go away, 23
 but God will give you back to me in joy and gladness for ever.
 As the neighbours of Zion now witness your captivity, 24
 so will they soon see you rescued by God, who will intervene, in the great glory and splendour of the Eternal.
 My children, patiently bear the anger brought on you by God. 25
 Your enemy has persecuted you, but soon you will witness his destruction and set your foot on his neck.
 My favourite children have travelled by rough roads, 26 carried off like a flock by a marauding enemy.
 Take courage, my children, call on God: 27
 he who brought disaster on you will remember you.
 As by your will you first strayed away from God, 28
 so now turn back and search for him ten times as hard;
 for as he brought down those disasters on you, 29
 so will he rescue you and give you eternal joy.
 Take courage, Jerusalem: 30
 he who gave you that name^e will console you.
 Trouble will come to all who have ill-treated you 31
 and gloated over your fall.
 Trouble will come to the cities where your children were slaves; 32 trouble will come to the city which received your sons, for just as she rejoiced at your fall 33
 and was happy to see you ruined,
 so shall she grieve over her own desolation.
 I will deprive her of that joy known to populous cities, 34 her boasting shall be turned into mourning, fire from the Eternal will burn in her for many a day 35

V. THE LETTER OF JEREMIAH

A copy of the letter which Jeremiah sent to those about to be led captive to Babylon by the king of the Babylonians, to inform them of the instructions which God had given him.

Jr 29:1

Because of the sins you have committed before God you are to be deported to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar king of the Babylonians. •Once you have reached Babylon you will stay there for many years, as long as seven generations; after which I shall bring you home in peace. •Now in Babylon you will see gods made of silver, of gold, of wood, being carried shoulder-high,^a and filling the pagans with fear. •Be on your guard. Do not imitate the foreigners, do not have any fear of their gods •as you watch their worshippers flocking before and behind them. Instead, say in your hearts, 'Master, it is you that we have to worship'. •For my angel is with you; your lives will be in his care.

Is 40:20+

Ex 23:20+

Plated with gold and silver, their tongues polished smooth by a craftsman, they are counterfeit and have no power to speak. •As though for a girl fond of finery, these pagans take gold and make crowns for the heads of their gods. Sometimes, the priests actually filch gold and silver from their gods to spend themselves, even using it on presents for the temple prostitutes.^b •They dress up these gods of silver, gold and wood, in clothes, like human beings, although they cannot protect themselves either from tarnish or woodworm, in spite of the purple cloaks they drape them in. Their faces even have to be dusted, owing to the dust of the temple which settles thick on them. •One holds a sceptre like the governor of a province, yet is powerless to put anyone who offends him to death; •another holds sword and axe in his right hand, yet is powerless to defend himself against war or thieves. •From this it is evident that they are not gods; do not be afraid of them.

Just as a pot in common use becomes useless once it is broken, so are these gods enshrined inside their temples. •Their eyes are full of dust raised by the feet of those who enter. •Just as the doors are locked on all sides on the man who has offended the king and is under sentence of death, so the priests secure the temples of these gods with gates and bolts and bars for fear of burglary. They light more lamps than for themselves, and the gods cannot see one of them. They are like one of the temple beams, gnawed away from within, so they say, by termites which creep out of the ground and eat them, and their fine clothes too. They are unaware •that their faces are blackened by the smoke that rises from the temple. •Bats, swallows, birds of every kind flutter over their bodies and heads, and cats prowl there. •From all this you can see for yourselves that they are not gods: do not be afraid of them.

The gold with which they are plated is fine enough to look at, but if someone does not rub off the tarnish, these gods will not do much shining on their own. They felt nothing while they were being cast. •However much was paid for them, there is still no breath of life in them. •Being unable to walk, they have to be carried on men's shoulders, which shows how futile they are. It is humiliating for their worshippers, too, who have to stand them up again if they fall over. •Once they have been stood up, they cannot move on their own; if they tilt askew, they cannot right themselves; offerings made to them might as well be made to dead men. •Whatever is sacrificed to them, the priests re-sell and pocket the profit; while their wives salt down part of it, but give nothing to the poor or to the helpless. As to the sacrifices themselves, why, women during their periods and women in childbed are not afraid to touch them! •As you can see from these examples that they are not gods, do not be afraid of them.

Indeed, how can they even be called gods, when women do the offering to these gods of silver, gold and wood? •In their temples, the priests stay sitting down, their garments torn, heads and beard shaved and with heads uncovered; they roar and shriek before their gods as people do at funeral feasts.^a •The priests take the robes of the gods to clothe their own wives and children. •Whether these gods are treated badly or well, they are incapable of paying back either treatment; as incapable too of making or unmaking kings, •equally incapable of distributing wealth or money. If anyone fails to honour a vow he has made to them, they cannot call him to account. •They can neither save a man from death nor rescue the weak from the strong, •nor restore sight to the blind, nor save someone in trouble, •nor take pity on a widow, nor be generous to an orphan. •These wooden gods plated with gold and silver are about as much use as rocks cut out of the mountain side. Humiliation awaits their worshippers. So how can anyone think or say that they are gods?

The Chaldaeans themselves do them no honour; if they find someone who is dumb and cannot speak, they present him to Bel, entreating him for the gift of speech, as if he could hear them! •And they are incapable of drawing the conclusion and abandoning those gods—such is their lack of commonsense. Women with strings round their waists sit in the streets, burning bran like incense; when one of these has been picked up by a passer-by and been to bed with him, she then twits her neighbour for not being singled out and for not having her string broken.^e •Everything going on anywhere near^f these gods is spurious. So how can anyone think or say that they are gods?

45 Made by woodworkers and goldsmiths, they are only what those workmen
 46 decide to make them. •The makers have not long to live themselves, so how can 47 the things they make be gods? •Their legacy to their descendants is nothing but 48 illusion and disappointment. •If war or disasters occur, the priests discuss where 49 best to hide themselves and these gods; •how can anyone fail to realise that they are not gods, if they cannot save themselves from war or from disasters?
 50 And since in any case they are only made of wood plated with gold or silver, it must be obvious from all this that they are spurious; and plain to everyone, to nations as to kings, that they are not gods but the work of human hands, and 51 that there is no divine activity in them. •Can there be anyone still unconvinced^g that they are not gods?

52 They can neither appoint a king over a country, nor give rain to mankind, 53 nor regulate their own affairs, nor rescue anyone who suffers a wrong; they are 54 as helpless as crows between sky and ground. •If fire falls on the temple of these wooden gods plated with gold or silver, their priests fly to safety while they for 55 their part stay there like beams, to be burnt. •They cannot put up any resistance 56 to a king or to enemies. •So how can anyone think or say that they are gods?

57 These wooden gods plated with gold or silver cannot evade thieves or marauders; violent men may rob them of their gold and silver and make off with the robes they are dressed in; yet they are powerless to help even themselves.
 58 Better to be a king displaying his prowess, a household pot of use to its owner, than to be these false gods; or merely the door of a house, protecting what is inside, than these false gods; or a wooden pillar in a palace than these false gods.
 59 The sun, the moon and the stars, which shine and have been given work to do,
 60 are obedient; •similarly, the lightning, as it flashes, is a fine sight; in the same 61 way, the wind blows across every country, •the clouds execute the order God gives them to pass over the whole earth, and the fire, sent from above to consume 62 mountain and forest, carries out its orders. •Now these gods are not their 63 equal, either in beauty or in power. •So, no one can think or say that they are gods, powerless as they are to administer justice or to do men any good.
 64 Therefore, knowing that they are not gods, do not be afraid of them.

⁶⁵ ⁶⁶ They can neither curse nor bless kings, •nor produce signs in heaven for the 67 nations, nor shine like the sun, nor shed light like the moon. •The animals are better off than they are, being able to make for cover and look after themselves.
 68 There is not the slightest shred of evidence that they are gods; do not be afraid of them!

69 Their wooden gods plated with gold and silver are like a scarecrow in a melon 70 patch—protecting nothing. •Again, their wooden gods plated with gold and silver are like a thornbush in a garden—any bird may perch on it—or like 71 a corpse thrown into the dark. •From the purple and fine linen^h rotting on their backs you will recognise that they are not gods; and in the end, eaten away 72 themselves, they will be a disgrace to the country. •Better, then, a virtuous man who has no idols; disgrace will never come near him.

6 c. This was forbidden by Jewish Law.

d. Referring to the worship of gods that die and rise again.

e. This custom was associated with sacred prostitution.

f. 'anywhere near' Codex Alex.

g. Lit. 'To whom will it not be clear'; variant reading: '...will it be'.

h. 'fine linen' corr.; 'marble' Greek.

EZEKIEL

INTRODUCTION

^{43:3}
^{Dn 10:5} 1 In the thirtieth year, on the fifth day of the fourth month, as I was among ¹ the exiles on the bank of the river Chebar, heaven opened and I saw visions from God. •On the fifth of the month—it was the fifth year of exile for ²
^{8:1}
^{1 K 18:46}
^{Si 49:8} King Jehoiachin— •the word of Yahweh was addressed to the priest Ezekiel ³ son of Buzi, in the land of the Chaldaeans, on the bank of the river Chebar.^a

¹⁰ ^{Rv 4} The vision of the ‘Chariot of Yahweh’^b

There the hand of Yahweh came on me.^c •I looked; a stormy wind blew ⁴ from the north, a great cloud with light around it, a fire from which flashes of lightning darted, and in the centre a sheen like bronze at the heart of the fire. •In ⁵
^{10:8-22}
^{Ex 25:18+}
^{✓ Rv 4:6-8} the centre I saw what seemed four animals. They looked like this. They were of human form. •Each had four faces, each had four wings. •Their legs were straight; ⁶
⁷ they had hooves like oxen, glittering like polished brass. •Human hands showed ⁸ under their wings; the faces of all four were turned to the four quarters.^d •Their ⁹ wings touched each other; they did not turn as they moved; each one went straight forward. •As to what they looked like, they had human faces, and all ¹⁰ four had a lion’s face to the right, and all four had a bull’s face to the left, and ¹¹ ^{Is 6:2} all four had an eagle’s face.^e •Their wings^f were spread upwards; each had two ¹² wings that touched, and two wings that covered his body; •and they all went ¹³ straight forward; they went where the spirit urged them; they did not turn as they moved.

Between these animals something could be seen^g like flaming brands or ¹³
^{Ex 19:18} torches, darting between the animals; the fire flashed light, and lightning
^{Ps 104:4} streaked from the fire. •And the creatures ran to and fro^h like thunderbolts. ¹⁴

^{10:9-13} I looked at the animals; there was a wheel on the ground by each of them, one ¹⁵ beside each of the four.ⁱ •The wheels^j glittered as if made of chrysolite. All four ¹⁶ looked alike, and seemed to be made one inside the other. •They went forward four ¹⁷ ways^k and kept their course unswervingly. •Their rims seemed enormous when ¹⁸
^{Zc 4:10}
^{✓ Rv 4:8} I looked at them and all four rims had eyes^l all the way round. •When the animals ¹⁹ went forward, the wheels went forward beside them; and when the animals ²⁰ ^{10:16} left the ground, the wheels too left the ground. •Where the spirit urged them, ²¹
there the wheels went,^m since the spirit of the animal was in the wheels. •When ²²
the animals moved on, they moved on; when the former halted, the latter ²³ halted; when the former left the ground, the wheels too left the ground, since ²⁴
^{10:1} the spirit of the animal was in the wheels. •Over the heads of the animals a sort ²⁵
^{Ex 24:10}
^{✓ Rv 4:6} of vault, gleaming like crystal,ⁿ arched above their heads;^o •under this vault ²⁶
their wings stretched out to one another, and each had two covering his body.^p ^{10:5} I heard the noise of their wings as they moved; it sounded like rushing water, ²⁷
^{Gn 17:1+} like the voice of Shaddai, a noise like a storm, like the noise of a camp; when ²⁸
they halted, they folded their wings, •and there was a noise.^q

26 Above the vault over their heads was something that looked like a sapphire; it was shaped like a throne and high up on this throne was a being that looked
 27 like a man. •I saw him shine like bronze, and close to and all around him from what seemed his loins upwards was what looked like fire; and from what seemed 28 his loins downwards I saw what looked like fire, and a light all round •like a bow in the clouds on rainy days; that is how the surrounding light appeared. It was something that looked like the glory of Yahweh.^r I looked, and prostrated myself, and I heard a voice speaking.

The vision of the scroll^a

¹ 2 It said, 'Son of man,^b stand up; I am going to speak to you'. •As he said these words the spirit came into me and made me stand up, and I heard him
 3 speaking to me. •He said, 'Son of man, I am sending you to the Israelites, to the rebels^c who have turned against me. Till now they and their ancestors have 4 been in revolt against me. •The sons are defiant and obstinate; I am sending 5 you to them, to say, "The Lord Yahweh says this". •Whether they listen or 6 not, this set of rebels shall know there is a prophet among them. •And you, son of man, do not be afraid of them, do not be afraid when they say, "There are thorns all round you^d and scorpions under you". There is no need to be afraid either of their words or of their looks, for they are a set of rebels.
 7 You must deliver my words to them whether they listen or not, for they are a set of rebels.^e
 8 'You, son of man, listen to the words I say; do not be a rebel like that rebellious set. Open your mouth and eat what I am about to give you.'
⁹ I looked. A hand was there, stretching out to me and holding a scroll. •He unrolled it in front of me; it was written on back and front; on it was written^f 'lamentations, wailings, moanings'. 3 He said, 'Son of man, eat what is given to you; eat this
 2 scroll, then go and speak to the House of Israel'. •I opened my mouth; he gave
 3 me the scroll to eat •and said, 'Son of man, feed and be satisfied by the scroll I am giving you'. I ate it, and it tasted sweet as honey.^g

1 a. Vv. 1-3 appear to juxtapose two distinct introductions. One, vv. 2-3a, speaks of Ezekiel in the third person and serves as introduction to the whole book, dating the prophet's first vision to the 5th year of Jehoiachin's exile, 593-592. The other, v. 1, may have introduced the vision of the 'chariot of Yahweh' before this occupied its present position, cf. Introduction to the Prophets. If so, the date (the thirtieth year) is difficult to interpret, unless we amend it to 'thirteenth year' (of Jehoiachin's exile), i.e. summer of 585.

b. Though some details are obscure, the substantial meaning of the vision is clear, namely Yahweh's transcendence of place: he is not tied to the Temple of Jerusalem but can follow his people into exile if he wishes.

c. 'on me' versions; 'on him' Hebr. A phrase commonly used by Ezekiel to indicate ecstasy, cf. 3:22; 8:1; 33:22; 37:1; 40:1.

d. 'the faces... four quarters' corr.; 'towards the four sides, and their faces, and their wings' Hebr.

e. These strange animals are reminiscent of the Assyrian Karibu (a name akin to that of the cherubs over the ark, cf. Ex 25:18+), creatures with the head of a man, the body of a lion, the hooves of a bull and the wings of an eagle; their effigies stood guard outside the palaces of Babylon. These servants of the pagan gods are here shown harnessed to the chariot of the God of Israel, a vivid illustration of Yahweh's transcendence. The characteristics of these creatures were later used to describe the 'four living beings' in Rv (4:7-8 etc.). In Christian tradition they have become symbolic of the four evangelists.

f. 'Their wings' Greek.

g. 'Between' versions; 'the likeness of' Hebr. 'could be seen' Greek; 'their appearance' Hebr.

h. Lit. 'went' following Vulg.; Hebr. incomprehensible.

i. 'each of the four' corr. following versions

j. Hebr. adds 'and their construction'.

k. 'four ways' versions. Hebr. inserts 'going'.

l. Text obscure; translation uncertain.

m. Hebr. adds 'the spirit to go'.

n. Hebr. 'like terrible crystal'.

o. The throne of Yahweh is therefore supported, rather than drawn along, by these animals. Compare the ark of the covenant, Ex 25:10+; there Yahweh is 'seated on the cherubs', 1 S 4:4, etc.

p. Hebr. repeats 'each had two covering him'.

q. Hebr. adds 'above the vault over their heads, when they halted they folded their wings'.

r. The 'glory of Yahweh', Ex 24:16+, is normally described as a bright cloud, Ex 16:10; Ezk 43:1-5; here the cloud is accompanied by a brilliant, luminous silhouette in human shape.

2 a. The vision of the chariot of Yahweh is continued later, 3:12. It is here interrupted by the vision of the book, which was probably Ezekiel's first vision (in 593) in which he received his prophetic call, cf. Introduction to the Prophets.

b. The expression 'son of man' used by God of his prophet is peculiar to Ezk (Dn 8:17 excepted). It emphasises the distance between God and man. In Dn 7:13 the same expression becomes a messianic title which is later adopted by Jesus, cf. Mt 8:20+.

c. 'to the rebels' Greek

d. 'There are thorns all round you' corr. following Greek.

e. 'set (lit. house) of rebels' Greek.

f. 'on it (was written)' corr.

3 a. The mouth of Isaiah had been touched by a seraph, Is 6:5-7, that of Jeremiah by Yahweh himself who 'put his words into the prophet's mouth', Jr 1:9, an idea which Ezekiel expresses even more realistically.

Then he said, 'Son of man, go to the House of Israel and tell them what I have said. •You are not being sent to a nation that speaks a difficult foreign language; you are being sent to the House of Israel. •Not to big nations that speak difficult foreign languages, and whose words you would not understand— if I sent you to them, they would listen to you; •but the House of Israel will not listen to you because it will not listen to me. The whole House of Israel is stubborn and obstinate. •But now, I will make you as defiant as they are, and as obstinate as they are; •I am going to make your resolution as hard as a diamond and diamond is harder than flint. So do not be afraid of them, do not be overawed by them for they are a set of rebels.'

Then he said, 'Son of man, remember everything I say to you, listen closely, and go to your exiled countrymen and talk to them. Tell them, "The Lord Yahweh says this", whether they listen or not.'

The spirit lifted me up, and behind me I could hear a tumultuous shouting, 'Blessed be the glory of Yahweh in his dwelling place'. •This was the sound of the animals' wings beating against each other, and the sound of the wheels beside them; a tumultuous shouting. •The spirit lifted me up and took me; my heart, as I went, overflowed with bitterness and anger, and the hand of Yahweh lay heavy on me. •I came to Tel Abib, to the exiles beside the river Chebar where they were then living; and I stayed with them for seven days like a man stunned.

The prophet as sentry^b

After seven days the word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, 'Son of man, I have appointed you as sentry to the House of Israel. Whenever you hear a word from me, warn them in my Name. •If I say to a wicked man: You are to die, and you do not warn him; if you do not speak and warn him to renounce his evil ways and so live, then he shall die for his sin, but I will hold you responsible for his death. •If, however, you do warn a wicked man and he does not renounce his wickedness and his evil ways, then he shall die for his sin, but you yourself will have saved your life. •When the upright man renounces his integrity to do evil and I set a trap for him, he too shall die; since you failed to warn him, he shall die for his sin and the integrity he practised will no longer be remembered; but I will hold you responsible for his death. •If, however, you warn the upright man not to sin and he abstains from sinning, he shall live, thanks to your warning, and you too will have saved your life.'

I. BEFORE THE SIEGE OF JERUSALEM

Ezekiel is struck dumb

While I was there the hand of Yahweh came on me; he said, 'Get up, go out into the valley; I am going to speak to you'. •I got up and went out into the valley; the glory of Yahweh was resting there, like the glory I had seen by the river Chebar, and I prostrated myself. •The spirit of Yahweh then entered me, and made me stand up, and spoke to me.

He said, 'Go and shut yourself in your house. •Son of man, bonds are now about to be laid on you; you will be bound with them and not be able to mix with others. •I am going to make your tongue stick to the roof of your mouth; you will be dumb; you will stop warning them, for they are a set of rebels. •When I speak to you, I shall open your mouth and you will tell them, "The Lord Yahweh says this". Whoever will listen, let him listen; whoever will not, let him not; for they are a set of rebels.'

The siege of Jerusalem foretold

4 'Son of man, take a brick and lay it in front of you; on it scratch a city, Jerusalem. •You are then to besiege it,^a trench round it, build earthworks, pitch 2

3 camps and bring up battering-rams all round. •Then take an iron pan and place it as if it were an iron wall between you and the city. Then turn to it; it is being besieged and you are besieging it. This is a sign for the House of Israel. 21:27

4 'Lie down on your left side and take the sin of the House of Israel on yourself.^b I am making you bear their sin for as many days as you lie there. •I myself have set the years they will sin at a hundred and ninety days;^c during these you are to bear the sin of the House of Israel. •And at the end of these days, you are to lie down again on your right side and bear the sin of the House of Judah for forty days.^d I have set the length for you as one day for one year. •And you are to turn towards the siege of Jerusalem, lift your bare arm and prophesy against it. I have laid bonds on you, and you must not turn over until the period of your seclusion is finished. 3:25

9 'You must then take wheat, barley, beans, lentils, millet and spelt; put them all in the same pot and make yourself some bread. You are to eat it for as many days as you have been lying on your side, a hundred and ninety days.^e •As regards this food you are to measure out a daily portion of twenty shekels and make it last the whole day. •And you are to drink water sparingly; your drink is to be the sixth of a hin and to last the whole day. •Take this food in the shape of a barley cake baked where they can see you, over human dung. •And say, "Yahweh, the God of Israel, says this:^f This is the way the Israelites will have to eat their defiled food, wherever I disperse them among the nations". •I then said, 'Lord Yahweh, my soul is not defiled. From my childhood until now, I have never eaten an animal that has died a natural death or been savaged; no unclean flesh has ever entered my mouth.' •'Very well,' he said 'I grant you cow's dung'^g instead of human dung; you are to bake your bread on that.' •He then said, 'Son of man, I mean to destroy the stock of bread^h in Jerusalem; in their distress they will eat bread strictly weighed; in terror they will drink water grudgingly measured, •since bread and water will be scarce; they will all pine and waste away as a result of their sins. 1 5 'Son of man, take a sharp blade, sharp as a barber's razor; take it and use it on your head and beard. Then take scales and divide the hair you have cut off. •You are to set fire to a third in the centre of the city, while the time of the siege is working itself out. Then take another third and toss it by swordpoint all round the city. The last third you are to scatter to the wind, while I unsheathe the sword behind them.^a •Then take a few hairs^b and wrap them in the folds of your cloak; •and of these again take a few, and throw them on the fire and burn them. From them will issue fire,^c and you are to say to the entire House of Israel,^d •"The Lord Yahweh says this: This is Jerusalem, which I have placed in the middle of the nations, surrounded with foreign countries. •She is so perverse that she has rebelled more against my observances than the nations, 38:12

b. In 33:1-9 the same theme is developed more coherently; it may have been reproduced, barely modified, here, since it outlines the programme of the prophet's future career. Ezekiel stresses the individual responsibility of his hearers, cf. 14:12+.

c. By 'bonds' some understand a paralysis of some kind, cf. 4:4f, and that this physical ordeal acquires, by revelation, a symbolic meaning incorporating it into the prophetic message, cf. Jr 18:1+.

4 a. Ezekiel is commanded to mime the forthcoming siege of Jerusalem (the brick 'besieged', the motionless prophet, the poor food and its meagre ration, the hair burnt or scattered to the winds). For these symbolic gestures, particularly elaborate with Ezekiel, cf. Jr 18:1+.

b. 'on yourself' corr.

c. 'the years they will sin' corr.; 'the two sins' Hebr. 'a hundred and ninety' Greek; 'three hundred and ninety' Hebr.

d. Unsuccessful attempts have been made to put a strict interpretation on these figures as prophecies of the duration of the respective exiles of Israel and Judah. Presumably they are only to be taken as the prophecy of a siege, the duration of which has not been revealed, designed as punishment for the protracted infidelity of the two kingdoms.

e. 'a hundred and ninety' Greek; 'three hundred and ninety' Hebr.

f. 'say... God of Israel' Greek.

g. Dried dung is used as fuel in the East.

h. Lit. 'the staff of bread' (loaves were long and thin), cf. 5:16; 14:13.

5 a. The siege will end in massacre; the meaning of the prophet's mime is unmistakable.

b. The 'remnant' that is spared and, after further ordeal, saved, cf. Is 4:3+.

c. Meaning obscure. Possibly a gloss suggested by 19:14.

d. 'fire. And you will say to the entire' Greek; 'fire for the entire' Hebr.

Against the mountains of Israel

6 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •“Son of man, turn 1 2 towards the mountains of Israel and prophesy against them. •Say, “Mountains 3 of Israel, hear the word of the Lord Yahweh. The Lord Yahweh says this to mountains and hills and ravines and valleys: Listen; I am going to summon 4

Jr 10:14-15 abolition of your idols, the smashing of your incense burners and the utter Mt 1:7 destruction of all your works. •Among you men will fall, and be cut to pieces; 7 and so you will learn that I am Yahweh.^b

But I shall spare some of you; they will escape the sword and be dispersed 8

16:23 practices, •and so they will learn that I am Yahweh; I have said, and I have Ps 51:3 meant it, that I am going to inflict all these disasters on them.

The sins of Israel

22:13 The Lord Yahweh says this: Clap your hands, stamp your feet, and say: 11
Ps 59:13 Alas! for all the abominable sins of the House of Israel, which is about to 12 perish by sword, famine and plague. •Far off, they will die by plague; near at hand they will fall by the sword; those who are spared and besieged will die of 13 hunger, since I mean to satisfy my fury against them. •You will know that I am Yahweh when their corpses, cut to pieces, lie there among their idols, all round their altars, on every high hill, on every mountain top, under every spreading tree, under every leafy oak, in fact wherever they offer an appeasing fragrance to all their idols. •I mean to stretch out my hand against them and reduce the country to an empty wasteland from the desert to Riblah,^d the length and breadth of the country; and so they will learn that I am Yahweh.”^e

¹ 7 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, ‘Son of man, say,^a The Lord Yahweh says this to the land of Israel: Finished! The end is coming for the four quarters of the land. •Now all is over with you; I mean to unleash my anger on you, and judge you as your conduct deserves and force you to answer for all your filthy practices. •I mean to show you no pity, I will not spare you; I am going to call you to account for your conduct and for the filthy practices that you parade; and so you will learn that I am Yahweh. The Lord Yahweh says this: Now disaster is going to follow on disaster.^b The end is coming, the end is coming for you;^c it is coming now. •Now it is your turn,^d you who live in this country. The time has come, the day is near;^e no joy now, only tumult, on the mountains. •Soon I am going to pour out my fury on you and exhaust my anger at you; I will judge you as your conduct deserves and call you to account for all your filthy practices. •I mean to show you neither pity nor mercy, since I am going to call you to account for^f your conduct and for the filthy practices which you parade; and so you will learn that I am Yahweh, and that I strike.

e. The ‘day of Yahweh’, cf. Am 5:18+.

f. ‘since I am going to call you to account for’ corr.; ‘I am going to judge you according to’ Hebr.

g. Text very obscure. We have tried to give a translation consistent with v. 7. Literally, the Hebr. would give ‘the crown has come out, the sceptre (or: rod) has blossomed’.

h. The end of this verse is unintelligible. Lit. ‘not (coming) from them, nor from their tumult or their multitude, and they are worthless’. The Greek interprets the whole verse ‘He will break the prop of the wicked, without tumult, without haste’.

i. Lit. ‘against all its (Jerusalem’s?) multitude’. So also in v. 14.

j. This passage is the sequel of 6:11-14.

k. ‘I shall slaughter them all’ Greek; ‘all moaning’ Hebr.

l. Sign of disgrace.

m. Hebr. adds ‘Neither their silver nor their gold will be able to rescue them on the day of the wrath of Yahweh’, cf. Zp 1:18.

never again will they fill their bellies, since this has been the cause of their crimes. They used to pride themselves on the beauty of their jewellery, out of which they made their loathsome images and idols. That is why I mean to make it an object of horror to them. •I intend to hand it over to be the plunder of foreigners and loot for local brigands, who will profane it. •I shall turn my face from them; my treasuryⁿ will be profaned; barbarians will force their way in and profane it.

Lm 4:13 Forge yourself a chain;^o for the country is filled with bloody murders, the city is full of violent crime. •I am going to summon the cruellest of the nations to seize their houses. I will break the pride of their grandees; their sanctuaries will be profaned. •Anguish is on its way: they will look for peace and there will be none. •Disaster will follow on disaster, rumour on rumour; they will pester the prophet for a vision; the priest will be at a loss over the law and the elders on how to advise. •The king will go into mourning,^p the prince be plunged in grief, the hands of the country people tremble. I mean to treat them as their conduct deserves, and judge them as their own verdicts merit; and so they will learn that I am Yahweh.”

A vision of the sins of Jerusalem

4:1: 20:1 8 In the sixth year, on the fifth day of the sixth month,^a I was sitting at home and the elders of Judah were sitting with me, when the hand of the Lord Yahweh fell on me.

1:26-28 I looked and saw something that looked like a man.^b Downwards from what seemed to be his loins he was fire; and upwards from his loins he seemed to shine like polished bronze.^c •He stretched out what seemed to be a hand and took me by the hair; and the spirit lifted me into the air and, in visions from God,^d took me to Jerusalem, to the entrance of the inner north gate, where the idol of Jealousy stands, provoking jealousy.^e •There I saw the glory of the God of Israel, as I had seen it in the valley. •He said, ‘Son of man, raise your eyes to the north’. I raised my eyes to the north, and there, to the north of the altar gate, stood this statue of Jealousy at the entrance. •He said, ‘Son of man, do you see what they are doing? Do you see all the filth practised here by the House of Israel, to drive me out of my sanctuary? You will see filthier practices yet.’

He next took me to the entrance to the court. I looked; there was a hole in the wall. •He said, ‘Son of man, break through the wall’. I broke through the wall; there was a door. •He said, ‘Go in and look at the filthy things they are doing inside’. •I went in and looked: all sorts of images of snakes and repulsive animals and all the idols of the House of Israel drawn on the wall all round. Seventy elders of the House of Israel were standing in front of the idols, among them Jaazaniah son of Shaphan, each one, censer in hand; the fragrance of incense was rising. •He said, ‘Son of man, have you seen what the elders of the House of Israel do in the dark, each in his painted room? They say, “Yahweh cannot see us; Yahweh has abandoned the country”.’ •He said, ‘You will see them at filthier practices still’.

He next took me to the entrance of the north gate of the Temple of Yahweh where women were sitting, weeping for Tammuz.^f •He said, ‘Son of man, do you see that? You will see even filthier things than that.’

He then led me to the inner court of the Temple of Yahweh. And there, at the entrance to the sanctuary of Yahweh, between the porch and the altar, there were about twenty-five men, with their backs to the sanctuary of Yahweh and their faces turned to the east. They were bowing to the east, towards the sun. He said to me, ‘Son of man, do you see that? Is it not bad enough for the House of Judah to do the filthy things that they are doing here? But they fill the country with violence and provoke my anger further; look at them now putting that branch to their nostrils.^g •My anger forces me to it; I will show neither pity nor mercy. They may shout as loud as they like; I will not listen to them.’

The punishment^a

9 Then as I listened he shouted, 'Come here, you scourges of the city, and bring your weapons of destruction'. •Immediately six men advanced from the upper north gate, each holding a deadly weapon. In the middle of them was a man in white, with a scribe's ink horn in his belt. They came in and halted in front of the bronze altar. •The glory of the God of Israel rose off the cherubs where it had been and went up to the threshold of the Temple. He called the man in white with a scribe's ink horn in his belt •and said, ^b 'Go all through the city, all through Jerusalem, and mark a cross^c on the foreheads of all who deplore and disapprove of all the filth practised in it'. •I heard him say to the others, 'Follow him through the city, and strike. Show neither pity nor mercy; old men, young men, virgins, children, women, kill and exterminate them all. But do not touch anyone with a cross on his forehead. Begin at my sanctuary.' So they began with the old men in front of the Temple. •He said to them, 'Defile the Temple; fill the courts with corpses, and go'. They went out and hacked their way through the city.

They paused at the entrance to the east gate^f of the Temple of Yahweh, and the glory of the God of Israel hovered over them. •This was the creature that I had seen supporting the God of Israel beside the river Chebar, and I was now certain that these were cherubs. •Each had four faces and four wings and what seemed to be human hands under their wings. •Their faces were just as I had seen them beside the river Chebar.^g Each moved straight forward.

3:12 11 The spirit lifted me up and carried me to the east gate of the Temple of Yahweh, the gate that looks eastwards. There at the entrance to the gate stood twenty-five men, among whom I saw Jaazaniah son of Azzur and Pelatiah son of Benaiah, leaders of the people. •Yahweh^b said, ‘Son of man, these are the wicked schemers who are spreading their bad advice through this city. •They say, “Shall we not soon^c be building houses? Here is the cooking pot and we are the meat.”^d •Therefore prophesy against them, prophesy, son of man.’ •The spirit of Yahweh fell on me, and he said to me, ‘Say, “Yahweh says this: I know what you are saying, House of Israel, I know how insolent you are. •You have filled this city with more and more corpses of murdered men, you have strewn its streets with your victims. •And so, the Lord Yahweh says this: The corpses you have thrown into it are the meat, and the city is the cooking pot; but I mean to drive you out.^e •You are afraid of the sword and I will summon it against you—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks. •I shall drive you from the city and hand you over to foreigners, and I shall carry out my sentence on you; •you will fall by the sword on the soil of Israel; I shall execute justice on you; and so you will learn that I am Yahweh. •This city will be no cooking pot for you, and you will never be the meat inside; I am going to execute justice on you on the soil of Israel; •and so you will learn that I am Yahweh, whose laws you have not obeyed and whose observances you have not kept; instead, you have adopted the manners of the nations round you.”’

Now as I was prophesying, Pelatiah son of Benaiah dropped dead. I prostrated myself and cried aloud, ‘Ah, Lord Yahweh, are you going to wipe out all that is left of Israel?’

Jr 24 The new covenant promised to the exiles

The word of Yahweh was then addressed to me as follows, •‘Son of man, your brothers, your kinsmen, the whole House of Israel, these are told by the citizens of Jerusalem, “You have been sent away from Yahweh; it is to us that the land was given as our domain”.^f •Say therefore, “The Lord Yahweh says this: 14 15 16

Yes, I have sent them far away among the nations and I have dispersed them to foreign countries; and for a while I have been a sanctuary for them in the country to which they have gone". •Then say, "The Lord Yahweh says this: I will gather you together from the peoples, I will bring you all back from the countries where you have been scattered and I will give you the land of Israel. They will come and will purge it of all the horrors and the filthy practices. •I will give them a single heart^g and I will put a new spirit in them;^h •I will remove the heart of stone from their bodies and give them a heart of flesh instead, •so that they will keep my laws and respect my observances and put them into practice. Then they shall be my people and I will be their God. •But those whoseⁱ hearts are set on their idols and their filthy practices I will call to account for their conduct—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks."'

The cherubs then spread their wings and the wheels began to move with them, while the glory of the God of Israel hovered over them. •And the glory of Yahweh rose to leave the city and paused on the mountain to the east of the city. c. 'Shall we (lit. 'they') not soon' Greek.

d. A proverb. The citizens of Jerusalem believe themselves safe, protected by their ramparts as the pot stands between the meat in it and the fire. Ezekiel turns the proverb: the city is indeed a pot—full of men foully murdered. Yahweh will drive out those who think to shelter there. Later the prophet offers, and mimes, another interpretation of the proverb, 24:1-14.

Ezekiel adds that possession of the Temple is of little importance since Yahweh can be a 'sanctuary' for his people in a foreign country, cf. 1:13+.

Popular proverbs

What I say is said and will soon come true; since what I pronounce I will fulfil in your own lifetime, you set of rebels—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks.ⁱ

Do people use its wood to carve it into something? ³
Do they make a peg out of it, and hang things on it? ⁴
There it is, thrown on the fire for fuel.
The fire burns off both ends;
the middle is charred; is it fit for carving now?^g

While it was intact, it was impossible to carve;
burned and charred, will it be now fit for carving?
Therefore, the Lord Yahweh says this:
As the wood of the vine among the forest trees,
which I have thrown on the fire for fuel,
so have I treated the citizens of Jerusalem.
I have turned my face against them.
They have escaped the fire, but the fire will devour them yet.
And you will learn that I am Yahweh, when I turn my face against them.
I mean to reduce the country to desert, to punish their faithlessness to me
—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks.'

An allegorical history of Israel^a

16 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, 'Son of man, confront Jerusalem with her filthy crimes. Say, "The Lord Yahweh says this: By origin and birth you belong to the land of Canaan. Your father was an Amorite and your mother a Hittite. At birth, the very day you were born, there was no one to cut your navel-string, or wash you in cleansing water, or rub you with salt, or wrap you in napkins. No one leaned kindly over you to do anything like that for you. You were exposed in the open fields; you were as unloved as that on the day you were born.'

I saw you struggling in your blood as I was passing, and I said to you as you lay in your blood:^b Live, and grow like the grass of the fields. You developed, you grew, you reached marriageable age.^c Your breasts and your hair both grew, but you were quite naked. Then I saw you as I was passing. Your time had come, 14 a. In the legislation of Ezk, the foreigner settling in Israel, cf. Ex 12:48+, has the same legal status as an Israelite, Ezk 47:22.

b. Yahweh refuses to give an answer through his prophet when the apostate Israelites consult him. He will answer them himself by punishing them.

c. I.e. if the prophet allows himself to be led astray, I myself shall have permitted him to be led astray, because I have decided to destroy him.

d. With ch. 18 and 33:10-20, this text marks a decisive advance in the development of moral teaching in the O.T. Early texts were mainly concerned with the individual as an integral part of family, tribe and, later, nation. Not only Noah but his relations too are saved, Gn 6:18; Abraham is called by God but his whole clan accompanies him to Canaan, Gn 12. This outlook also conditioned concepts of responsibility and of retribution. When Abraham intercedes for Sodom, Gn 18:22-23, he is asking not that the good be isolated and spared but that, by virtue of a solidarity that can work both ways, the good should earn immunity for the wicked. It had been taken for granted that a city or a nation would be punished as one entity, virtuous and sinner alike, and also that the fate of the children would correspond to the behaviour of their fathers, Ex 20:5; Dt 5:9, cf. Jr 31:29=Ezk 18:2. But the prophets were later to lay stress on the individual and thus correct the emphasis of the earlier teaching. Jeremiah may see as something still to come the break with this solidarity in sin and punishment between the generations, Jr 31:29-30, but the Deuteronomist has already protested against the punishment of the children for the sins of the fathers, Dt 24:16, cf. 2 K 14:6. Ezekiel, convinced by the vision of ch. 8-10 that the imminent punishment of Jerusalem is due to her present sins, becomes the champion and exponent of the principle of individual responsibility. A man's salvation or ruin does not depend on ancestor or associates; not even on his own past life. Yahweh is concerned only with his present dispositions. These radical assertions of individualism will in their turn be qualified by the principle of solidarity as expressed in the fourth song of the servant of Yahweh, Is 52:13-53:12, cf. Is 42:1+. In any case, these assertions, if strictly and exclusively applied to human life in this world, are contradicted by everyday experience (cf. Job), and this contradiction calls for further doctrinal development, effected by the revelation of sanctions beyond the grave (cf. Introduction to Wisdom Books). In the end, the N.T. (and especially St Paul) resolves the tension between the individualism of Ezekiel and the principle of collective solidarity by showing how Christian hope is based on faith in the risen Christ in union with whom mankind, mankind created and saved by God, is united in redemption as it was previously in sin.

e. Israelite tradition was evidently familiar with the Danel celebrated in the Ras-Shamra texts for his wisdom and virtue.

f. 'contrive the escape of' versions.

g. The wicked deeds which will convince the exiles that Yahweh has been fully justified in inflicting such treatment on Jerusalem.

15 a. If the comparison is to be urged, Israel has been deprived of the territory of Samaria in 720 and of Judah in 597. Jerusalem itself (the 'middle') is no longer 'intact' since it has already suffered siege and deportation.

16 a. Israel, faithless wife of Yahweh, 'whore' of alien gods: a familiar image in prophetic literature from Ho onwards, cf. Ho 1:2+. Ezekiel develops it in a long allegory (resumed in another form in ch. 23) surveying the whole history of Israel (ch. 20, cf. 22, is a direct account of the same events). As in Ho, this allegory ends, vv. 60-63, with a free pardon from the husband who establishes a new covenant, thus prefiguring the marriage of God with his people in messianic days, a theme which is taken up in the N.T.

b. Hebr. repeats 'And I said to you: Live in your blood'. The child remains polluted with blood and grows like a wild plant until the covenant of Sinai, represented here as a wedding, vv. 8f.

c. 'grow like' following Syr.; Hebr. inserts 'I shall make you'. 'of marriageable age' corr.; 'with the finest jewels' Hebr.

Dt 23:1+ the time for love. I spread part of my cloak over you and covered your nakedness;
 Ex 19:1+ I bound myself by oath, I made a covenant with you—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks—and you became mine. •I bathed you in water, I washed the blood Ps 45:14-15 off you, I anointed you with oil. •I gave you embroidered dresses, fine leather shoes, a linen headband and a cloak of silk. •I loaded you with jewels, gave you 1 Th 2:19 bracelets for your wrists and a necklace for your throat. •I gave you nose-ring and earrings; I put a beautiful diadem on your head. •You were loaded with gold and silver, and dressed in fine linen and embroidered silks. Your food was Dt 32:13 the finest flour, honey and oil. You grew more and more beautiful; and you rose to be queen. •The fame of your beauty spread through the nations, since it was perfect, because I had clothed you with my own splendour—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks.

Dt 31:16; You have become infatuated with your own beauty; you have used your 32:15 fame to make yourself a prostitute; you have offered your services to all
 Jdt 8:19 comers...^d •You have taken your clothes to brighten your high places^e and there
 Is 57:8
 Ex 32:2 you have played the whore...^f •You have taken my presents of gold and silver Jr 2:20 jewellery and made yourself human images to use in your whorings. •You have Ho 2:10 taken your embroidered clothes and put them on the images, and the oil and incense which are rightly mine you have offered to them. •The bread I gave you, the finest flour, oil and honey with which I used to feed you, you have now offered to them as an appeasing fragrance.

You have even—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks—•taken the sons and Lv 18:21+ daughters you bore me and sacrificed them as food to the images. Was it not enough for you just to be a whore? •You have slaughtered my children and handed them over as a burnt offering to them, •and in all your filthy practices and your whorings you have never remembered your youth or the time when you were quite naked and struggling in your own blood.

Is 1:21 To crown your wickedness—trouble for you, it is the Lord Yahweh who Dt 12:2+ speaks—•you have built yourself a mound and made a high place at every crossroads. •At the beginning of every road you have built a high place to defile your beauty there and to give your body to every comer; you have piled whoring on Is 30:31 whoring. •You have lain down for those big-membered neighbours, the Egyptians;
 you have piled whoring on whoring to provoke me, •and now I have raised my hand against you. I have rationed your food, I have handed you over to the mercy of your enemies, the daughters of the Philistines,^g who are sick of your 2 K 21:1-18 filthy ways. •Still unsatisfied, you have prostituted yourself to the Assyrians; you
 2 Ch 33:1-10 have played the whore and not been satisfied even then.^h •You have piled whor-
 17:4 ing on whoring with Canaanite and Chaldaean, and even then not been satisfied.

How easily led you wereⁱ—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks—to behave no better than a bold-faced whore! •When you built yourself a mound at the beginning of every road and made a high place at every crossroads, you were not, like the whore, out for money;^j •an adulteress welcomes strangers instead Ho 8:9+ of her husband; •a prostitute is paid. But you, in your whoring, have given your presents away to all your lovers; you have offered them gifts to attract them from everywhere. •In your whoring you have done the exact opposite from other women; no one was running after you, so you went and paid them; they did not pay you since your behaviour was so outrageous.

Well then, whore, hear the word of Yahweh. •The Lord Yahweh says this:
 For having undressed and let yourself be seen naked while whoring with your

- 40 off, take your jewels and leave you completely naked. •They will then whip up the crowd against you; you will be stoned and run through with a sword; 41 they will set your houses on fire and execute justice on you with crowds of women looking on; I will put an end to your whoring: no more paid lovers for you. 42 I will exhaust my fury against you. My jealousy will then leave you; I shall 43 be appeased and my anger will stop. •Since you have never remembered your youth, since in all this you have done nothing but provoke me, I in my turn intend to bring your conduct down on your own head—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks. Have you not been disgusting with all your filthy practices?^m
- 44 Now all the proverb-makers will make up a proverb about you: Like mother, 45 like daughter. •Yes; you are a true daughter of your mother, who hated her husband and her children; a true sister of your sisters,ⁿ who hated their husbands and their children. Your mother was a Hittite and your father an Amorite. 46 Your elder sister is Samaria, who lives on your left with her daughters. Your 47 younger sister is Sodom, who lives on your right^o with her daughters. •You have not failed to copy their behaviour;^p throughout your career you have 48 shown yourself more corrupt than they were. •As I live—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks—your sister Sodom and her daughters have not been as bad as you 49 and your daughters. •The crime of your sister Sodom was pride, gluttony, arrogance, complacency; such were the sins of Sodom and her daughters. They never 50 helped the poor and needy; •they were proud and engaged in filthy practices in 51 front of me; that is why I have swept them away as you have seen.^q •And yet Samaria never committed half the crimes that you have. Ho 2:5 + 16:3 21:1

You have done far filthier things than they did. By your filthy practices 52 you have made your sisters seem almost innocent, •and now you have to bear the shame for all those faults of which you have cleared your sisters; since the grossness of the sins for which you bear the guilt is more horrible than theirs, they now appear more virtuous than you are. Be ashamed, then; bear the shame of having put your sisters in the right.^r

- 53 I will restore them. I will restore Sodom and her daughters. I will restore Samaria and her daughters; and, after that, I will restore you along with them, 54 that you may bear your shame and be ashamed of all you have done, and so 55 console them. •Your sister Sodom and her daughters will be restored to what they were. Samaria and her daughters will be restored to what they were. You 56 and your daughters will be restored to what you were. •Did you not^s gloat 57 over your sister Sodom when you were still in your finery, •before you were stripped naked? Now the daughters of Edom and all the women around are jeering at you,^t and the daughters of the Philistines are treating you like something 58 beneath them, and so are all your neighbours. •You have brought it on yourself by your brazenness and filth—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks.

- 59 For the Lord Yahweh says this: I will treat you as you deserve, you who 60 have despised your oath even to the extent of breaking a covenant, •but I will remember the covenant that I made with you when you were a girl, and I will 61 conclude a covenant with you that shall last for ever. •And you for your part will remember your past behaviour and be covered with shame when I take^u 20:39 36:22 Lv 26:41 Jr31:3,31-34 Ho 2:16-25 36:31

The allegory of the eagle

Jg 14:12 17 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •‘Son of man, ask ¹/₂ them a riddle; propound a parable to the House of Israel. •Say, “The 3 Lord Yahweh says this:

Is 5:1	A large eagle, ^a with huge wings and a wide span, covered with speckled feathers,
Jr 22:6	came to Lebanon. He took hold of the top of the cedar, plucked off the top branch,	4
16:29	carried it off to the land of merchants, and set it down in a city of shopkeepers. Then he carried off a seedling vine, and planted it in fertile soil; by the side of a wide stream, as a border he set it. ^b	5
19:10	The seedling grew, and turned into a vine, not tall but well spread out; its branches grew up towards the eagle, its roots grew down. It turned into a vine; it sent out stems and put out sprays. There was another large eagle, ^c with huge wings and thickly feathered. And now the vine twisted its roots toward him, stretched its branches towards him away from the bed where it was planted for him to water them. It was in a fertile field, by the side of a wide stream, that the vine had been planted, to grow shoots, bear fruit and become a noble vine.” Say, “The Lord Yahweh says this: Will this vine thrive? ^d Will not the eagle break its roots, and snap up the fruit, so that all the new leaves will wither when they shoot? It will take no effort and no strong nation to pull it up by the roots. It is planted there; will it thrive? Will it not shrivel when the east wind blows? It will wither on the soil where it was growing.” ’	6 7 8 9 10

The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows:

2 K 24:10-17 ‘Say to that set of rebels, “Do you not know what this means?” Say this, 11
“Listen; the king of Babylon came to Jerusalem; he carried away the king and the 12 princes, and took them to where he lives in Babylon. •He took a member of the 13 royal family and made a treaty with him, forcing him to swear loyalty, after having already deported the chief men of the land, •so that the kingdom would remain 14 modest and without ambition and so maintain his treaty faithfully. •But the 15

- prince rebelled and sent envoys to Egypt, asking for horses and a large number of troops. Is he going to thrive? Will a man who has done this go unpunished? ^{2 K 24:20}
- 16 Can he break a treaty and go unpunished? •As I live, I swear—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks: In Babylon, in the country of the king who put him on the throne, whose oath he has ignored, whose treaty he has broken, there
- 17 will he die. •Despite the pharaoh's great army and hordes of men, he will not be able to save him^e by fighting, however many earthworks are raised, however
- 18 many trenches dug to the loss of many lives. •He has ignored the oath and broken the treaty by which he was bound. He has done all this and shall not go unpunished.
- 19 “And so, the Lord Yahweh says this: As I live, I swear: my oath which he has ignored, my treaty which he has broken, I will make them both recoil
- 20 on his own head. •I mean to throw my net over him and catch him in my mesh; I mean to take him to Babylon and punish him there for breaking his oath to me. ^{=12:13 Hab 1:14}
- 21 The pick^f of his army will fall by the sword, and the survivors be scattered to all the winds. And so you will learn that I, Yahweh, have spoken.
- 22 The Lord Yahweh says this:^g

- From the top of the cedar,^h
from the highest branch I will take a shoot and plant it myself on a very high mountain.
23 I will plant it on the high mountain of Israel.
It will sprout branches and bear fruit,
and become a noble cedar.
Every kind of bird will live beneath it, every winged creature rest in the shade of its branches. ^{✓ Mt 13:32 ✓ Lk 13:19}
- 24 And every tree of the field will learn that I, Yahweh, am the one who stunts tall trees and makes the low ones grow, ^{Ps 113:7-9 Lk 1:51-53} who withers green trees and makes the withered green.
I, Yahweh, have spoken, and I will do it.”ⁱ

Individual responsibility and the children's teeth are set on edge?

he is the one who shall die.

v. Ezekiel insists that these divine gifts are bestowed freely: Israel's repentance (which in effect takes place after the establishing of the new covenant) does not earn them; with this emphasis on God's disinterested benefits Ezekiel anticipates the revelation of the N.T., cf. 1 Jn 4:10, etc.

b. Eating (the sacred meal) on ‘high places’ was a practice in idolatrous cults.

evil, gives honest judgement between man and man, •keeps my laws and sincerely respects my observances—such a man is truly upright. It is Yahweh who speaks.

•But if anyone has a son prone to violence and bloodshed, who commits one of these misdeeds—•even though the father never has—a son who dares to eat on the mountains and to seduce his neighbour's wife, •who oppresses the poor and needy, steals, fails to return pledges, raises his eyes to idols, engages in filthy practices, •charges usury on loans and takes interest, then this son shall certainly not live;^d having committed all these appalling crimes he will have to die, and his blood be on his own head.

•But if he in turn has a son who, in spite of seeing all the sins that his father has committed, does not imitate him, •does not eat on the mountains or raise his eyes to the idols of the House of Israel, does not seduce his neighbour's wife, •oppresses no one, takes no pledges, never steals, gives his own bread to the hungry, clothes to the naked, •abstains from evil,^e does not charge usury or take interest, respects my observances and keeps my laws, he will not die for his father's sins, this son shall certainly live. •Because the father was violent, robbed others and never did good among my people,^f be sure he shall die for his sins. •But you object, "Why does the son not suffer for the sins of his father?" The son, however, has been law-abiding and honest, has kept all my laws and followed them, and so he shall certainly live. •The man who has sinned is the one who must die; a son is not to suffer for the sins of his father, nor a father for the sins of his son. To the upright man his integrity will be credited, to the wicked his wickedness.

•But if the wicked man renounces all the sins he has committed, respects my laws and is law-abiding and honest, he will certainly live; he will not die.^g •All the sins he committed will be forgotten from then on; he shall live because of the integrity he has practised. •What! Am I likely to take pleasure in the death of a wicked man—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks—and not prefer to see him renounce his wickedness and live?

•But if the upright man renounces his integrity, commits sin, copies the wicked man and practises every kind of filth, is he to live? All the integrity he has practised shall be forgotten from then on; but this is because he himself has broken faith and committed sin, and for this he shall die. •But you object, "What the Lord does is unjust". Listen, you House of Israel: is what I do unjust? Is it not what you do that is unjust? •When the upright man renounces his integrity to commit sin and dies because of this, he dies because of the evil that he himself has committed. •When the sinner renounces sin to become law-abiding and honest, he deserves to live. •He has chosen to renounce all his previous sins; he shall certainly live; he shall not die. •And yet the House of Israel objects, "What the Lord does is unjust". Is what I do unjust, you House of Israel? Is it not what you do that is unjust? •House of Israel, in future I mean to judge each of you by what he does—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks. Repent, renounce all your sins, avoid all occasions of sin! •Shake off all the sins you have committed against me, and make yourselves a new heart and a new spirit! Why are you so anxious to die, House of Israel? •I take no pleasure in the death of anyone—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks. Repent and live!

A lamentation over the rulers of Israel^a 19 'As for you, raise a dirge for the princes of Israel. •Say:

"What was your mother? A lioness surrounded by lions;
lying among the cubs
she nursed her whelps.^b
She reared one of her whelps and it grew into a young lion;

- he learnt to tear his prey;
he became a man-eater.
- 4 The nations combined^c against him;
he was caught in their pit;
they dragged him off with hooks to the land of Egypt.^d
- 5 Her expectation thwarted,
her hope dashed,
she took another of her whelps
and made a young lion of him.
- 6 He grew to prowl with other lions,
and grew into a young lion;
he learned to tear his prey;
he became a man-eater.
- 7 He stormed their palaces,^e
and sacked their cities;
the country and its inhabitants were alarmed
by the sound of his roars.
- 8 The nations marched out against him
from the surrounding provinces;
they spread their net for him;
he was caught in their pit.
- 9 They caged him with hooks (they took him to the king of Babylon);
they took him into a fortress,
so that his voice could never again be heard on the mountains of Israel.^f
- 10 "Your mother was like a vine"
planted beside the water,
fruitful and leafy,
because the water flowed so full.
- 11 It put out strong branches that turned to royal sceptres;
they reached up, reached so high they touched the clouds;^g men admired them for their height and their thick foliage.
- 12 But it was rooted up
and thrown on the ground;
the east wind dried up its fruit;
it was broken up;
its strong branch withered away;^h
fire consumed it all.

This is a dirge; it was used as such.

16:1+ An account of Israel's infidelities

20 In the seventh year, on the tenth day of the fifth month,^a some of the elders of Israel came to consult Yahweh and sat down in front of me.
The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, ‘Son of man, speak to the elders of Israel. Say, “The Lord Yahweh says this: Have you come to consult me?” As I live, I am not going to let myself be consulted by them—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks. • Are you ready to judge them? Are you ready to judge them, son of man? Confront them with the filthy practices of their fathers.
Say, “The Lord Yahweh says this: On the day when I chose Israel, when I raised my hand over the descendants of the House of Jacob, I told them then in the land of Egypt; I raised my hand over them^b and said: I am Yahweh your God. • On that day I raised my hand over them and swore to lead them out of the land of Egypt and bring them into the land I had chosen for them, a land where milk and honey flow, and the noblest of them all. • I said: Each one of you must reject those horrors that attract you; do not pollute yourselves with the idols of Egypt; I am Yahweh, your God. • But they rebelled against me and would not listen to me. Not one of them rejected those horrors that attracted them; they did not give up the idols of Egypt. I resolved to discharge my anger on them and exhaust my fury against them in Egypt. • But respect for my own name kept me from allowing it to be profaned in the opinion of the nations
among whom they were living,^c for I had given them my word that in the sight of those nations I would lead my people out of the land of Egypt. • So I led them out of Egypt and into the wilderness. • I gave them my laws and taught them my observances, which must be practised by all who want to live. • I even gave them my sabbaths to be a sign between me and them, so that they might learn that I, Yahweh, am the one who sanctifies them. • The House of Israel, however, rebelled against me in the wilderness; they refused to keep my laws, they scorned my observances, which must be practised by all who wish to live, and they profaned my sabbaths. Then I resolved to discharge my anger on them in the wilderness and to destroy them. • But respect for my own name kept me from allowing it to be profaned in the opinion of the nations, in whose sight I had brought them out. • However, I did raise my hand over them in the wilderness and swear that I would not lead them to the land which I had given them, a land where milk and honey flow, the noblest of them all, since they had scorned my observances, had refused to keep my laws and had profaned my sabbaths, their hearts being so attached to idols. • In spite of this,
I took pity on them; I refrained from destroying them, and I did not kill them all in the wilderness.

I said to their children in the wilderness: Do not live by your ancestors’ standards, do not practise the observances they practised, do not defile yourselves with their idols. • I am Yahweh your God. Keep my laws, respect my observances and practise them. • Keep my sabbaths holy; let them be a sign between me and you, so that men may learn that I am Yahweh your God.
The sons, however, rebelled against me; they refused to keep my laws, they did not respect or practise my observances, which must be practised by all who want to live; they profaned my sabbaths. I then resolved to discharge my anger on them and exhaust my fury against them in the wilderness. • But I restrained my

- hand; respect for my own name kept me from allowing it to be profaned in the 23 opinion of the nations, under whose eyes I had brought them out. •Once again, however, I raised my hand over them in the wilderness, swearing to scatter 24 them throughout the nations and disperse them in foreign countries, •because they had not followed my observances but had rejected my laws and profaned my sabbaths, and because they had kept their eyes fastened on their ancestors' 25 idols. •I even gave them laws that were not good and observances by which they 26 could never live;^d •and I polluted them with their own offerings, making them sacrifice all their first-born; which was to punish them, so that they would learn that I am Yahweh.”
- 27 ‘For this reason, son of man, speak to the House of Israel. Say to them,
 “The Lord Yahweh says this: Here is another way by which your ancestors
 28 outraged me, behaving treacherously to me, •even though I led them into the land which I had solemnly sworn to give them. There they saw all sorts of high hills, all kinds of leafy trees, and there they performed their sacrifices and made offerings that provoked my anger; there they laid their appeasing fragrance 29 and poured their libations. •I said to them: What is the name of the high place where you go? And they gave, and still give it, the name of Bamah.”^e 30 Very well, say to the House of Israel, “The Lord Yahweh says this: Since you insist on defiling yourselves by behaving like your fathers, by whoring with their 31 idols, •by offering your gifts and by burning your children as sacrifices, polluting yourselves with your pack of idols to this very day, how can I let you consult me, House of Israel? As I live—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks—I am not 32 going to let myself be consulted by you. •And that dream ever haunting your mind will never come true, when you say: We shall be like the nations, like foreign 33 tribes worshipping wood and stone. •As I live I swear it—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks—I am the one who will reign over you, with a strong hand and 34 outstretched arm, through the discharge of my anger. •With a strong hand and outstretched arm, through the discharge of my anger, I will bring you out from the peoples and gather you together from foreign countries among 35 which you have been scattered. •I will lead you into the Desert of the Nations^f and condemn you to your face. •As I judged your fathers in the desert of the land 37 of Egypt, so will I judge you—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks. •I mean to 38 make you pass under my crook^g and I will bring a few of you^h back; •I will sort out the rebels who have rebelled against me. I intend to bring them out of the country where they are staying, but they shall not enter the land of Israel, and you 39 will learn that I am Yahweh. •House of Israel, the Lord Yahweh says this:
 Go on, all of you, worship your idols, but I swear that you will hear me in the end. You will stop profaning my Holy Name with your offerings and your idols.
 40 For on my holy mountain, on the high mountain of Israel—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks—is where the whole House of Israel, resettled in the country, will worship me. There I will welcome you, and there expect your presents, your 41 choicest gifts and all your holy offerings. •I will welcome you likeⁱ an appeasing fragrance when I bring you out from among the peoples; I mean to gather you together from the foreign countries in which you have been scattered; through 42 you I intend to display my holiness for all the nations to see; •and you will learn that I am Yahweh, when I bring you back to the soil of Israel, to the land I 43 solemnly swore to give to your fathers. •There you will remember your past sharpened and polished to fit the slaughterer’s hand!

Yes, shout and howl, son of man;
it is meant for my people,
for all the princes of Israel, doomed like my people to the sword.
So beat your breast;•this is no first attempt,
and what would happen, were there no haughty sceptre?^f
—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks.
Son of man, prophesy and clap your hands.
Let the sword be twice, three times, as cruel,
the butcher’s sword,
the great sword of slaughter, menacing all around.^g
To make hearts sink and to increase the number of victims
I have posted a sword at every gate to flash like lightning, polished for havoc.^h
Behind! To the right! To the left! In front!ⁱ
And I too will clap my hands;
I will exhaust my wrath.
I, Yahweh, have spoken.”

out two roads for the sword of the king of Babylon to come along, making both of them begin from the same country. Put up a signpost where they begin, showing the way to a city, •showing the sword the way to Rabbah of the Ammonites, and the way to Judah, to the fortress of Jerusalem. •For the king of Babylon has halted at the fork where these two roads diverge, to take the omens. He has shaken the arrows, questioned the teraphim, inspected the liver. Into his right hand the lot for Jerusalem falls; there he must set up battering-rams, give the word for slaughter, raise the war cry, level battering-rams against the gates, cast up earthworks, build entrenchments. •The citizens believe that these omens are idle, whatever oaths have been sworn. But he is evidence of their crimes, and these will bring about their capture. •And so, thus says the Lord Yahweh. Since you give evidence of your crimes by parading your sins and flaunting your wickedness in everything you do, and since this evidence is now produced against you, you will be punished. •As for you, prince of Israel, vile criminal on the last of whose crimes the day is about to dawn, •the Lord Yahweh says this: They will take away your turban and remove your crown; everything will be changed; the low will be high and the high brought low. •To ruin, and to ruin on ruin, am I going to bring it, to such ruin as was never known before this man came who is appointed to inflict the punishment which I am determined to impose on it.

And so I have made you an object of scorn to the nations and a laughing-stock to every country. 16:1+ An allegorical history of Jerusalem and Samaria^a

23 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •‘Son of man, 1
 2 there were once two women, daughters of the same mother. •They became 3 20:7-8 prostitutes in Egypt, when they were girls. There their nipples were handled, there their virgin breasts were first fondled. •Their names were: Oholah the 4 elder, Oholibah her sister.^b They belonged to me and bore sons and daughters.
 As regards their names, Samaria is Oholah, Jerusalem Oholibah. •Now Oholah 5 played the whore, although she belonged to me; she lusted for her lovers, her neighbours the Assyrians, •dressed in purple, governors and nobles, all of them 6 young and desirable, and skilful horsemen. •She granted them her favours— 7 they were all the flower of the Assyrians—and she defiled herself with all the idols of all those she lusted for. •She did not renounce the whoring begun in 8

Egypt, where men had slept with her^c from her girlhood, fondling her virgin breast, debauching her.

9 'And that is why I have handed her over to her lovers, to those Assyrians for 10 whom she lusted. •They uncovered her nakedness, they seized her sons and daughters and put her to the sword. She became notorious among women for the justice done on her.

11 'Though her sister Oholibah saw all this, her own lust and whorings were 12 even more shameful than her sister's. •She lusted for her neighbours the Assyrians, governor and nobles, dressed in sumptuous clothes, skilful horsemen, all young and desirable. •I saw that she was unchaste, that both sisters were as bad as 13 each other. •She began whoring worse than ever; no sooner had she seen wall
14 carvings of men, paintings of Chaldaeans coloured vermilion, •men with sashes round their waists and elaborate turbans on their heads, all so imperious of 15 bearing, portraits of Babylonians from Chaldaea, •than she fell in love with them
16 at first sight and sent messengers to them in Chaldaea.^d •The Babylonians came to her, shared her love-bed and defiled her with their debauchery. Once defiled
17 she lost interest in them. •She flaunted her whoring, she stripped naked; then
18 I turned away from her as I had turned away from her sister. •She began whoring worse than ever, remembering her girlhood, when she had played the whore 19 in the land of Egypt, •when she had been infatuated by profligates big-membered as donkeys, ejaculating as violently as stallions.

21 'You were hankering for the debauchery of your girlhood, when they used to 22 handle your nipples in Egypt and fondle your young breasts. •And so, Oholibah, the Lord Yahweh says this: I intend to call up against you those of your lovers in whom you have lost interest; I will bring them against you from everywhere,
23 the Babylonians and all the Chaldaeans, the men of Pekod and Shoa and Koa,^e and all the Assyrians with them, young and desirable, all governors and nobles,
24 all famous officers and horsemen. •They will advance on you from the North,^f with chariots and wagons, at the head of a horde of peoples. From every side they will arm against you with shield, buckler and helmet. I have told them to 25 pass sentence on you; they will pass sentence on you as they think fit. •I shall direct my jealousy against you; they will treat you with fury; they will cut off your nose and ears, and what is left of your family will fall by the sword; they will seize your sons and daughters, and what is left of you will be burnt.
26 They will strip off your garments and rob you of your jewels. •I mean to put an end to your debauchery and to the whorings you began in Egypt; you will not look
27 to the Egyptians any more, you will never think of them again. •For the Lord Yahweh says this: I now hand you over to those you hate, to those in whom you
28 have lost interest. •They will treat you with hatred, they will rob you of the fruit of your labours and leave you completely naked. And thus your shameful
29 whoring will be exposed. Your debauchery and your whorings •are the cause of these afflictions, since by playing the whore with the nations you have defiled 30 yourself with their idols. •As you have copied your sister's behaviour, I will 31 put her cup in your hand. •The Lord Yahweh says this:

You will drink your sister's cup,^g a cup that is wide and deep,

They may, however, allude to events or practices unknown to us. Possibly there is reference to the tents erected on the 'high places'.

 they have committed adultery with their idols. As for the children they had

A prophecy of the siege of Jerusalem

24 In the ninth year, on the tenth day of the tenth month,^a the word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •‘Son of man, write down today’s date, since this is the very day the king of Babylon has laid siege^b to Jerusalem. •So pronounce a parable for this set of rebels. Say, “The Lord Yahweh says this:

11:3-12

Put the pot on the fire;
 put it on; pour water into it.^c
 Put cuts of meat in too,
 the best cuts, leg and shoulder.
 Fill it with the best bones.
 Take the best of the flock.
 Then heap wood^d underneath;
 make the pot boil and bubble
 until even the bones are cooked.

6 For the Lord Yahweh says this:

Trouble for the bloodstained city,
that rusty cooking-pot
whose rust can never be scoured away!
Empty it scrap by scrap, drawing no lots.
For her blood is in her;
she has put it on the naked rock;
she has not shed it on the ground to hide it in dust.
To make my anger overflow, to take revenge,
I have put her blood on the naked rock, unhidden.

Jb 16:18+

9 So, the Lord Yahweh says this:

Trouble for the bloodstained city!
I too plan to build a great fire.
Heap on the wood, light it, cook the meat, prepare the spices,
let the bones burn.
Set the pot empty to heat on the coals;
let the bronze glow red-hot,
the filth inside melt away,
the rust inside be consumed.

9:9

12 "But all that rust will not disappear in the flames. •I have tried to purge 13 you of the filth of your debauchery, but you would not let yourself be purged of your filth. So now you will not be purged until my anger has been exhausted 14 against you. •I, Yahweh, have spoken; my word will come true; I shall act and not relent; I shall show no pity, no compassion. I intend to judge you as your conduct and actions deserve—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks."'

 —it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks.

The Lord Yahweh says this to Tyre: When they hear of your fall, the groans 15 of your wounded and the havoc inside your walls, will not the islands^f shake?

Jon 3:6 The rulers of the sea will all get off their thrones, lay aside their cloaks and take 16 off their embroidered robes. Dressed in terror they will sit on the ground unable to stop trembling, terrified at your fate.

Rv 18:9-19 'They will raise a dirge^g and say to you: 17

"You are destroyed then, swept from the seas,
 city of pride,
 you who were mighty on the sea,
 you and your citizens,
 who used to terrorise
 the continent^h far and near.
 Now the islands are trembling 18
 on the day of your fall;
 the islands of the sea are terrified by your end."

'For the Lord Yahweh says this: 19

'When I make you as desolate as any depopulated city, when I bring up the 20 32:18-32 deep against you and the ocean covers you, •I will cast you down with those who go down to the pit, down to the men of old; I will make you live in the regions underground, in the eternal solitudes, with those who go down to the pit, so that you can never come back and be restored to the land of the living.ⁱ

Rv 18:21 I will make you an object of terror; you will not exist. People will look for you 21 and never find you again—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks.'

A lamentation over the fall of Tyre^a

Rv 18:9f 27 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •'Son of man, ¹/₂ raise the dirge over Tyre. •Say to Tyre, that city standing at the edge of 3 the sea, doing business with the nations in innumerable islands, "The Lord Yahweh says this:

Tyre, you used to say: I am a ship^b
 perfect in beauty.
 Your frontiers stretched far out to sea;
 those who built you made you 4
 perfect in beauty.
 Cypress from Senir^c they used 5
 for all your planking.
 They took a cedar from Lebanon
 to make you a mast.
 From the tallest^d •oaks of Bashan 6
 they made your oars.
 They built you a deck of cedar inlaid with ivory
 from the Kittim^e isles.
 Embroidered linen of Egypt was used for your sail 7
 and for your flag.

Purple and scarlet from the Elishah islands formed your deck-tent.

8 Men from Sidon and from Arvad^f were your oarsmen.

Your sages, Tyre, were aboard serving as sailors.

9 The elders and craftsmen of Gebal^g were there to caulk your seams.

All the ships^h of the sea and the sailors in them visited you to trade with you.

- 10 Men of Persia and Lud and Put served in your army and were your warriors. 38:5 11 They hung up shield and helmet in you. They brought you glory. •The sons Jf 46:9+ of Arvad and their army manned your walls all round and kept watch from Sg 4:4
your bastions.ⁱ They hung their shields all round your walls and helped to make 12 your beauty perfect. •Tarshish was your client, profiting from your abundant Is 23:1+ wealth. People paid you in silver and iron, tin and lead for your merchandise.
13 Javan, Tubal and Meshech^j traded with you. For your merchandise they bartered 32:26; 38:2
men and bronze implements. •The people of Beth-togarmah^k traded you horses, Jf 4:6
14 chargers, mules. •The sons of Dedan traded with you; many shores were your 38:6
15 clients; you were paid in ivory tusks and ebony. •Edom^l was your client, because 25:13 of the variety and quantity of your goods; she exchanged carbuncles, purple, 16 embroideries, fine linen, coral and rubies against your goods. •Judah and the Jg 11:33 land of Israel also traded with you, supplying you with corn from Minnith,^m wax, 17 honey, tallow and balm. •Damascus was your client, because of the plentifulness of your goods and the immensity of your wealth, furnishing you with wine from Ho 14:8
18 Helbon and wool from Zahar.ⁿ •Dan and Javan, from Uzal onwards,^o supplied Gn 10:27
20 you with wrought iron, cassia and calamus in exchange for your goods. •Dedan 25:13
21 traded with you in horse-cloths. •Arabia and even the sheikhs of Kedar were 22 all your clients; they paid in lambs, rams and he-goats. •The merchants of Gn 10:7
Sheba and Raamah traded with you; they supplied you with the best quality I K 10:1+ 23 spices, precious stones and gold against your goods.^p •Haran, Canneh and Eden, Gn 11:31;
24 traders of Sheba, Asshur and Chilmad^q traded with you. •They traded rich 12:5
25 ed cords in your markets. •The ships of Tarshish crossed the seas for your trade.

Then you were rich and glorious surrounded by the seas.

26 Out to the open sea
your oarsmen rowed you.
The east wind has shattered you,
surrounded by the seas.

27 Your riches, your goods, your cargo,
your crew, your sailors,

Against Sidon^b

Sidon, now I set myself against you;
 I will show my glory through you.

 and so men will learn that I am Yahweh.

Israel delivered from the nations

No more, for the House of Israel, 24 shall any of the hostile nations surrounding her be a thorn that wounds or a briar that tears;
 and so men will learn that I am the Lord Yahweh.

The Lord Yahweh says this. When I gather the House of Israel from the peoples 25 among whom it is dispersed, this is how I am going to display my holiness in the sight of the nations. They shall live on the soil that I gave to my servant = 37:25 Jacob. •They shall live there in confidence, build houses, plant vineyards; they 26 shall live in confidence. When I inflict punishments on all the hostile surrounding nations, then men will learn that I am Yahweh their God.”

 since they have given no more support than a reed to the House of Israel.

 and cut their hands all over.
 Whenever they leaned on you, you broke and left their loins shaking.^c
 8 For this reason, the Lord Yahweh says this: I am sending the sword against you, 9 to kill your men and your beasts. •Egypt will be reduced to desert and desolation, and men will learn that I am Yahweh. Since he has said: The Nile is mine, the sins of Israel at the time when Israel turned to her for help. And men will

 17 In the twenty-seventh year, on the first day of the first month,^g the word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows:
 18 ‘Son of man, Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon mobilised his army for a great expedition against Tyre. Their heads have all gone bald, their shoulders are all chafed, but even so he has derived no profit from the expedition mounted 19 against Tyre either for himself or for his army. •Since this is so, the Lord Yahweh says this: I am going to hand Egypt over to Nebuchadnezzar king of 30:10,24;
 Babylon. He will levy his share of riches there instead, will loot it and carry 32:11f

30 a. A supplement, probably late, to the preceding.

For the day is near, the day of Yahweh is near; it will be a day dark with cloud, 3 the end of an epoch for the nations.

The sword will come on Egypt, and terror will visit Ethiopia when the 4 slaughtered fall in Egypt, when her riches are carried away, when her foundations 30:4-9 are destroyed. •Cush and Put and Lud, the whole of Arabia and Cub^b and the 5 sons of my covenant^c will fall by the sword along with them.

Yahweh says this: 6

The supports of Egypt will fall; the pride of her strength will crumble; people 7 29:10 will fall by the sword from Migdol to Syene—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks.

They will be laid waste among wasted countries; her cities will rank with 7 other ruined cities. •They will learn that I am Yahweh when I set fire to Egypt 8 and all her supports are shattered.

On that day messengers despatched by me will set out in boats to shake 9 the complacency of Ethiopia. Terror will run through her inhabitants on the day of Egypt—it is coming now! •The Lord Yahweh says this: I intend to destroy 10 29:19 the huge population of Egypt at the hand of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon.
He and his people, most barbarous of nations, will be sent to ravage the country. 11
29:11-12 They will draw the sword against Egypt and fill the country with corpses.
I am going to dry up the arms of the Nile, hand the country over to brigands. 12 and lay the whole country waste and everything in it, at the hand of foreigners.
I, Yahweh, have spoken.

The Lord Yahweh says this: I mean to destroy the idols, and take the 13 rams^d away from Noph.^e The land of Egypt will be left without a ruler. I shall 29:14 spread terror through the land of Egypt. •I shall lay Pathros waste, set Zoan on 14 fire, inflict my punishments on No. •I shall discharge my fury on Sin, the 15 stronghold of Egypt; I shall wipe out the crowding population of No. •I shall 16 set fire to Egypt; Sin will be racked with anguish; there will be a flood^f at No, the waters will inundate it. •The young men of On and Pi-beseth will fall by the 17 sword and the cities themselves go into captivity. •At Tahpanhes day will turn 18 to darkness when I shatter the yoke of Egypt there, when the pride of her strength ceases. A cloud will cover her, and her daughters will go into captivity. •Such 19 will be the punishments that I am going to inflict on Egypt. And so men will learn that I am Yahweh.”^g

In the eleventh year, on the seventh day of the first month,^g the word of 20
Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •‘Son of man, I have broken the arm 21 of Pharaoh king of Egypt; you can see that no one has bound up his wound to heal it, given it a bandage or a dressing to make the arm strong enough to wield the sword again.^h •And so, the Lord Yahweh says this: Now I set myself 22 against Pharaoh king of Egypt; I intend to break his arms, the sound one and the broken one, and make the sword drop from his hand.ⁱ •I shall scatter Egypt among 23
the nations and disperse her throughout the countries. •I shall strengthen the 24 29:19 arms of the king of Babylon and put my sword in his hand. I shall break
Pharaoh’s arms and, confronted with his enemy, he will groan like a dying man.
I shall strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and the arms of Pharaoh 25 will fall. And so men will learn that I am Yahweh, when I put my sword into the hands of the king of Babylon and he wields it against the land of Egypt. •I mean 26 to scatter Egypt among the nations and disperse her throughout the countries;
and men will learn that I am Yahweh.’

The cedar

31 In the eleventh year, on the first day of the third month,^a the word of 1
Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •‘Son of man, say to Pharaoh 2
king of Egypt and to all his subjects:^b

“To what shall I compare you in your greatness?
Surely, to a cedar of Lebanon^c with noble branches, thick-set needles and lofty trunk.

Its top pierces the clouds.^d

The waters have made it grow, the deep has made it tall, pouring its rivers round the place where it is planted, sending its streams to all the other trees.

This is why its trunk grew taller than all the other trees;
its branches increased in number, its boughs stretched wide,
because the plentiful waters reached it.

All the birds of heaven used to nest in its branches;
under its boughs all wild animals used to drop their young;
in its shade every kind of people sat.

It was beautiful in its size, in the span of its boughs;
its roots went deep into plentiful waters.

No cedar equalled it in the garden of God,
no cypress had branches such as these;
no plane tree could match its boughs,
no tree in the garden of God could rival its beauty.

I had made it lovely with branching green.

It was the envy of every tree in Eden, in the garden of God.

made their dens under its branches.

In future let no tree rise in pride beside the waters, none push its top through the clouds,^g no well-watered tree stretch its whole height towards them. For all of them are doomed to death, to the regions underground, with the common run of mankind, with those who go down to the pit.

The Lord Yahweh says this: On the day it went down to Sheol, I closed the deep over it in sign of mourning. I stopped its rivers, the plentiful waters dried up; I made Lebanon dark for its sake, and all the trees of the fields wilted

the sword,^h all those nations who used to live in its shade.ⁱ

I shall grieve the heart of many peoples when I lead your captives^c among 9
the nations, into countries unknown to you. •^dI shall stun many peoples with 10 shock at your fate; their kings will be panic-stricken at your fate, when I brandish my sword before their eyes. On the day of your fall, each will tremble continuously for his life. •For the Lord Yahweh says this: The sword of the 11 king of Babylon will follow you. •I shall make your throngs of subjects fall at 12 the swords of my warriors, who are the most barbarous of the nations. They will annihilate the pride of Egypt, and her whole population will be destroyed.
I shall make all her cattle perish too on the banks of the deep waters. The feet 13 of men will not muddy them again, the feet of animals will not muddy them again. •Then I shall calm her waters; I shall make her rivers glide like oil—it is 14
the Lord Yahweh who speaks.

When I reduce Egypt to desert and the country is stripped of its contents, 15 when I strike all those who live there, they will learn that I am Yahweh.

Such is the dirge that the daughters of the nations will raise. They will 16 horn, but pays no attention, the sword will overtake him and destroy him; he will have been responsible for his own death. •He has heard the sound of the 5 horn and paid no attention; his death will be his own responsibility. But the life of someone who pays attention to the warning will be secure.

"If, however, the sentry has seen the sword coming but has not blown his 6 destroys one of them, the latter shall indeed die for his sin, but I will hold the sentry responsible for his death."

you hear a word from my mouth, warn them in my name. •If I say to a wicked 8 man: Wicked wretch, you are to die, and you do not speak to warn the wicked man to renounce his ways, then he shall die for his sin, but I will hold you responsible for his death. •If, however, you do warn a wicked man to renounce 9 his ways and repent, and he does not repent, then he shall die for his sin, but you yourself will have saved your life.

14:12-20 + 18:21-30 + Conversion and perversity

18:1 "Son of man, say to the House of Israel, "You are continually saying: Our 10 sins and crimes weigh heavily on us; we are wasting away because of them. How are we to go on living?" •Say to them, "As I live—it is the Lord Yahweh 11 who speaks—I take pleasure, not in the death of a wicked man, but in the turning back of a wicked man who changes his ways to win life. Come back, come back from your evil ways. Why are you so anxious to die, House of Israel?"

3:20; 18:24 Jn 8:21 "And you, son of man, say to the members of your nation, "The integrity of an 12 upright man will not save him once he has chosen to sin; the wickedness of a wicked man will no longer condemn him once he renounces wickedness, nor will an upright man live on the strength of his integrity once he has chosen to sin. •If I say to an upright man: You are to live,^c and then, trusting in his 13 own integrity, he turns to evil, all his integrity will no longer be remembered;
because he has sinned, he shall die. •If, however, I say to a wicked man: You 14 are to die, and he renounces his sins and does what is lawful and right, •if he 15 returns^d pledges, restores what he has stolen, keeps the laws that give life and stops committing sin—he shall live, and will not die. •All his previous sins will 16 no longer be remembered—he has done what is lawful and right; he shall live.

=18:22
=18:29 "The members of your nation object: What the Lord does is unjust; but 17 it is what you do that is unjust. •When an upright man renounces his integrity and commits sin, he dies for it. •And when a wicked man renounces his 18 wickedness and does what is lawful and right, because of this he lives. •You 19 =18:30 object: What the Lord does is unjust; but I mean to judge each of you by what

The taking of the city

In the twelfth year of our captivity, on the fifth day of the tenth month,^e 21 24:26-27 a fugitive arrived from Jerusalem and said to me, 'The city has been taken'.
Now the hand of the Lord had been on me the evening before the fugitive 22 3:26-27 arrived; he had opened my mouth before the man came to me the next morning;
my mouth had been opened and I was dumb no longer.^f

The ravaging of the country

The word of Yahweh was then addressed to me as follows, •"Son of man, 23 the people living in those ruins in the land of Israel say, "Abraham was alone 24 11:15 when he was given possession of this land. Now we are many and we hold the country as our domain."^g
Lv 17:10-14 "Very well, tell them, "The Lord Yahweh says this: You eat blood,^h you 25
Lv 1:5 + raise your eyes to your idols, you shed blood; are you likely to keep possession

26 of the land? •You rely on your swords, you engage in filthy practices, you each commit adultery with your neighbour's wife; are you likely to retain possession 27 of the land?" •Tell them this, "The Lord Yahweh says this: As I live, I swear it, those in the ruins will fall to the sword, those in the countryside I will give to wild 28 animals to devour, those in strongholds and caves will die of plague. •I intend to reduce the land to desert and desolation and it will no longer take pride in its strength. The mountains of Israel will be deserted and no one will pass that 29 way again. •And so men will learn that I am Yahweh, when I reduce the land to desert and desolation on account of all their filthy practices."

Lv 18:20

The results of the preaching ramparts and in doorways. They keep saying, "Come and hear the word that has of you and listen to your words, but they do not act on them. They cannot tell the

you are like a love song beautifully sung to music. They listen to your words,

b. As in 13:10f, the illustration has probably been suggested by the defensive preparations then being made.

c. 'You are to live' versions; 'He is to live' Hebr.

d. Hebr. inserts 'wicked'.

e. December 586-January 585.

f. Ezekiel had been deprived of speech by 'the hand of Yahweh', cf. 3:24-27; 24:27.

g. The observation shows the people's affection for their country but also, even after the disaster of 587, a presumptuous confidence in their future.

h. Translation doubtful. Possibly correct to 'You eat on the mountains', cf. 18:6.

i. 'throng' interpretation uncertain. 'They... truth' following Greek.

34 a. The image of the king-shepherd is deeply rooted in Eastern literary tradition. Jeremiah used it of the kings of Israel to rebuke their slackness in office, Jr 2:8; 10:21; 23:1-3, and to proclaim that God would give his people new shepherds who would pasture them with integrity, Jr 3:15; 23:4, and from these shepherds would come a 'Branch', Jr 23:5-6, i.e. the Messiah. Ezekiel takes up the theme from Jr 23:1-6, later to be resumed in Zc 11:4-17. For their wickedness he rebukes the shepherds, here the kings and lay leaders of the people, vv. 1-10. Yahweh will take from them the flock they have ill-treated and himself become the shepherd of his people (cf. Gn 48:15; 49:24; Is 40:11; Ps 80:1; 95:7 and Ps 23); this is in effect the proclamation of a theocracy, vv. 11-16; and in point of fact the monarchy was not restored after the return from exile. But the time was to come when Yahweh would give his people a shepherd of his own choice, vv. 23-24, a 'prince' (cf. 45:7-8; 46:8-10, 16-18), another David. The terms in which this prince's reign is described, vv. 25-31, and the name 'David' by which he is called (see 2 S 7:1+; cf. Is 11:1+; Jr 23:5), suggest a messianic age in which God himself, by means of his Messiah, rules his people in justice and peace. In this text of Ezekiel we discern the outline of the parable of the Lost Sheep, Mt 18:12-14; Lk 15:4-7, but more especially of the allegory of the Good Shepherd, Jn 10:11-18, which by virtue of its original context here is seen to be a claim to messiahship on the part of Jesus. The Good Shepherd is later to become one of the earliest themes of Christian iconography.

b. 'Shepherds' Syr.; 'To the shepherds' Hebr.

c. 'milk' Greek; 'fat' Hebr.

d. Probably alluding to worship on the 'high places'.

Yahweh says this: I am going to call the shepherds to account. I am going to take my flock back from them and I shall not allow them to feed my flock. In this way the shepherds will stop feeding themselves. I shall rescue my sheep from their mouths; they will not prey on them any more.

For the Lord Yahweh says this: I am going to look after my flock myself and keep all of it in view. •As a shepherd keeps all his flock in view when he stands up in the middle of his scattered sheep, so shall I keep my sheep in view. I shall rescue them from wherever they have been scattered during the mist and darkness. •I shall bring them out of the countries where they are; I shall gather them together from foreign countries and bring them back to their own land. I shall pasture them on the mountains of Israel, in the ravines and in every inhabited place in the land. •I shall feed them in good pasturage; the high mountains of Israel will be their grazing ground. There they will rest in good grazing ground; they will browse in rich pastures on the mountains of Israel. I myself will pasture my sheep, I myself will show them where to rest—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks. •I shall look for the lost one, bring back the stray, bandage the wounded and make the weak strong. I shall watch over^e the fat and healthy. I shall be a true shepherd to them.

As for you, my sheep, the Lord Yahweh says this: I will judge between sheep and sheep, between rams and he-goats. •Not content to graze in good pastures, you trample down the rest; not content to drink clear water, you muddy the rest with your feet. •And my sheep must graze on what your feet have trampled, drink what your feet have muddied. •Very well then, the Lord Yahweh says this: I myself am now about to judge between fat sheep and lean sheep. Since you have butted all the weak sheep with your rumps and shoulders and horns, until you have chased them away, •I am going to come and rescue my sheep from being cheated; I will judge between sheep and sheep.

I mean to raise up one shepherd, my servant David, and to put him in charge of them and he will pasture them; he will pasture them and be their shepherd. I, Yahweh, will be their God, and my servant David shall be their ruler. I, Yahweh, have spoken. •I shall make a covenant of peace with them; I shall rid the country of wild animals. They will be able to live safely in the wilderness and go to sleep in the woods. •I shall settle them round my hill;^f I shall send rain at the proper time; it will be a fertile rain. •The trees of the countryside will yield their fruit and the earth its produce; they will feel safe on their own farms. And men will learn that I am Yahweh when I break their yokestraps and release them from their captors. •No more will they be a prey to foreign countries, no more will they be eaten by wild animals in this country. They will live without fear and no one will disturb them again. •I shall make splendid vegetation grow for them; no more will they suffer from famine in this land; no more will they have to bear the insults of other nations. •And men will learn that I, their God, am with them and that they, the House of Israel, are my people—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks. •And you, my sheep, are the flock^g I shall pasture, and I am your God—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks.”^h

Against the mountains of Edom^a

35 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •“Son of man, turn towards the mountain of Seir and prophesy against it. •Say to it, “The Lord Yahweh says this: Now I set myself against you, mountain of Seir; I am stretching out my hand against you; I am going to reduce you to desert and desolation, •I lay your towns in ruins, and make you a desolation, and so you will learn that I am Yahweh. •Since, nourishing a long-standing hatred, you betrayed the sons of Israel to the sword during their trouble, at the time of their last crime, •very well, as I live—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks—I mean to hand you over to bloodshed, and bloodshed will pursue you. I swear it; you have sinned^b by shedding blood, and bloodshed will pursue you. •I intend to reduce

- the mountain of Seir to desert and desolation, and I will eliminate everyone 8 who travels up and down the country. •I shall fill its mountains with corpses; people will fall, struck down by the sword on your hills, in your valleys, in 9 every one of your ravines. •I am going to reduce you to desolation, for ever your towns will remain uninhabited, and so you will learn that I am Yahweh.
- 10 Since you said to the two nations, the two countries:^c You belong to me; we 11 are going to take possession here where Yahweh used to be: •very well, as I live —it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks—in anger and fury I will do exactly what you did because you hated them. I shall make it clear that I am punishing you 12 on their behalf; •then you will know that I, Yahweh, have overheard all the outrageous things you have said about the mountains of Israel, such as: They have 13 been abandoned, they have been left for us to devour. •You have talked arrogantly
 14 about me, too, you have repeatedly slandered me; I have heard! •The Lord Yahweh says this: To the joy of the whole country, I am going to reduce you to 15 desert. •Since you rejoiced when the domain of the House of Israel became a desert, I will do the same to you, mountain of Seir; you will become a desert, and so will the whole of Edom; and so men will learn that I am Yahweh.”

Oracle on the mountains of Israel^a

- 1 36 ‘Son of man, prophesy this to the mountains of Israel. Say, “Mountains
 2 of Israel, hear the word of Yahweh”. •The Lord Yahweh says this: Since the enemy has insulted you by saying, “Aha! These eternal heights have now 3 become our domain”, •you must prophesy. Say, “The Lord Yahweh says this:
 Since you have been ravaged and seized on by surrounding countries, and taken over by the rest of the nations, and made the subject of people’s talk and gossip, 4 now, mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord Yahweh: The Lord Yahweh says this to mountains and hills, to ravines and valleys, to abandoned ruins and the empty plundered cities that have become the laughing-stock of all the 5 surrounding nations. •Yes, the Lord Yahweh says this: I swear it by the fierceness of my jealousy; I am speaking to the rest of the nations and to the whole of Edom who so exultantly and contemptuously took possession of my country and plundered it.”
- 6 ‘This being so, prophesy this about the land of Israel. Say to the mountains and hills, to the ravines and valleys, “The Lord Yahweh says this: I am speaking in my jealousy and rage; because you are enduring the insults of the 7 nations,^b •very well, the Lord Yahweh says this: I raise my hand and I swear that the nations round you shall have their own insults to bear.
- 8 Mountains of Israel, you will grow branches and bear fruit for my people 9 Israel, who will soon return.^c •Yes, I am coming to you, I have turned to you;
 10 you will be tilled and sown. •I shall multiply the men who live on you, the whole House of Israel, yes, all. The cities will be lived in again and the ruins rebuilt. Ps 69:35
 11 I shall multiply the men and animals that live on you; there will be many of them and they will be fertile. I shall repopulate you as you were before; I shall make you more prosperous than you were before, and so you will learn that I am Yahweh.
 12 Thanks to me, men will tread your soil again, my people Israel; they will have Tb 14:7 you for their own domain, and never again will you rob them^d of their children.

g. Hebr. adds ‘of men’.

The Lord Yahweh says this: Since people have said of you: You are ¹³ a man-eater, you have robbed your nation of its children,^e •very well, you will ¹⁴ eat no more men, never rob your nation of its children again—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks. •I shall never again let you hear the insults of the nations, ¹⁵ you will never again have to bear the taunts of the foreigners, you will never again rob the nation of its children—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks.”

The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows: •‘Son of man, the ¹⁶ members of the House of Israel used to live in their own land, but they defiled ¹⁷ it by their conduct and actions; to me their conduct was as unclean as a woman’s menstruation. •I then discharged my fury at them because of the blood they shed ¹⁸ in their land and the idols with which they defiled it. •I scattered them among ¹⁹ the nations and dispersed them in foreign countries. I sentenced them as their conduct and actions deserved. •And now they have profaned my holy name ²⁰ among the nations where they have gone, so that people say of them, “These are the people of Yahweh; they have been exiled from his land”. •But I have been ²¹ concerned about my holy name, which the House of Israel has profaned among the nations where they have gone. •And so, say to the House of Israel, “The ²² Lord Yahweh says this: I am not doing this for your sake, House of Israel, but for the sake of my holy name, which you have profaned among the nations where you have gone. •I mean to display the holiness of my great name, which has ²³ been profaned among the nations, which you have profaned among them. And the nations will learn that I am Yahweh—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks— ²⁴ when I display my holiness for your sake before their eyes. •Then I am going to take you from among the nations and gather you together from all the foreign ²⁵ countries, and bring you home to your own land. •I shall pour clean water over you and you will be cleansed; I shall cleanse you of all your defilement and all ²⁶ your idols. •I shall give you a new heart, and put a new spirit in you; I shall remove the heart of stone from your bodies and give you a heart of flesh instead. •I shall ²⁷ put my spirit in you, and make you keep my laws and sincerely respect my observances.^f •You will live in the land which I gave your ancestors. You shall be ²⁸ my people and I will be your God. •I shall rescue you from all your defilement. I shall summon the corn and make it plentiful, and no more bring famines on you. ²⁹ I shall increase the yield of fruit trees and fields so that you will no longer have the ignominy of famine among the nations. •Then you will remember your evil ³⁰ conduct and actions. You will loathe yourselves for your sins and your filthy practices. •I assure you that I am not doing this for your sake—it is the Lord ³¹ Yahweh who speaks. Be ashamed and blush for your conduct, House of Israel.

The Lord Yahweh says this: On the day I cleanse you from all your sins, ³² I will repopulate the cities and cause the ruins to be rebuilt. •Waste land, once ³³ desolate for every passer-by to see, will now be farmed again. •Everyone will say: ³⁴ This land, so recently a waste, is now like a garden of Eden, and the ruined cities ³⁵ once abandoned and levelled to the ground are now strongholds with people living in them. •And the nations left round you will know that I, Yahweh, have ³⁶ rebuilt what was destroyed and replanted what was ruined. I, Yahweh, have spoken, and I will do it.

The Lord Yahweh says this: To grant them further favour, I shall ³⁷ encourage the House of Israel to look for me, and shall increase them like a flock of men, •like a flock of sacrificial animals, like the flock in Jerusalem on her ³⁸ solemn feasts. And so your ruined cities will be filled with a human flock. And men will learn that I am Yahweh.”

e. Referring either to the poor soil of Palestine which is to be made wonderfully rich, v. 30, or to the practice of infant sacrifice, Lv 18:21+. Possibly both are in the prophet's mind.

f. The spirit (breath) of God, which creates and gives life, Gn 1:2; 2:7+, lays hold on men to endow them with superhuman power, Gn 41:38; Ex 31:3; 1 S 16:13, particularly the prophets, Jg 3:10+. The characteristic of the messianic age is to be an extraordinary outpouring of the spirit, Zc 4:6b; 6:8, on all men, endowing them with special graces, Nb 11:29; Jl 3:1-2; Ac 2:16-21+. But, more mysteriously, for each receiver the spirit will be the principle of an inward renewal making possible a faithful observance of the law of God, Ezk 36:26-27; 37:14; 11:19; Is 32:15-19; Zc 12:10; thus the spirit will be the principle inspiring the new covenant, Jr 31:31+; like life-giving water it will nourish fruits of integrity and holiness, Is 44:3; Jn 4:1+, which in turn will guarantee the favour and protection of God for man, Ezk 39:24,29. This effusion of the spirit will be effected through the Messiah who will be the first recipient of it, to be able to accomplish his saving work, Is 11:1-3; 42:1; 61:1;

d. Here, as in Ho 6:2; 13:14 and Is 26:19, God announces, vv. 11-14, the messianic restoration of Israel after the sufferings of the Exile, cf. Rv 20:4+. But also, by the imagery chosen, he is already preparing minds for the idea of an individual resurrection of the body, vaguely perceived in Jb 19:25+ and explicitly stated in Dn 12:2; 2 M 7:9-14,23-36; 12:43-46; cf. 2 M 7:9+. For the N.T., see Mt 22:29-32 and especially 1 Co 15.

Against Gog, king of Magog^a

38 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, • ‘Son of man, turn towards Gog and the country of Magog,^b the prince of Rosh, Meshech and Tubal,^c and prophesy against him. • Say, “The Lord Yahweh says this: I am against you, Gog, prince of Rosh, Meshech and Tubal. • I will turn you round, fixing hooks in your jaws,^d and drag you and your troops along, all the horses and well-armoured horsemen, and all that great army carrying shields and bucklers, and wielding swords. • Persia and Cush and Put are with them, all with buckler and helmet; • Gomer and all its troops, northernmost Beth-togarmah and all its troops,^e and many nations with you. • Be ready, be well prepared, you and all your troops and the others rallying round you, and hold yourself at my service.”’

Many days will pass before you are given orders; in years to come you will march against this country. Its inhabitants will have been living undisturbed,^g remote from all other peoples, since they escaped the sword and were gathered in from various nations, here in the long-deserted mountains of Israel. • Like a storm you will come up and onwards, and cover the land like a cloud, you, your army and many nations with you.

The Lord Yahweh says this: On that day, a thought is going to enter your mind and you will work out a wicked plan.^h • You will say: I will attack this undefended country and march against this peaceful nation living undisturbed. They all live in towns that have no walls or bars or gates. • To plunder them for loot, I am going to reach out my handⁱ towards the ruins they live in, against this nation gathered out of other nations, these stock-breeders and tradesmen who live at the navel of the earth.^j • Sheba and Dedan, the traders of Tarshish and all its young lions will ask you: Have you come for plunder? Are you massing your troops with a view to looting? To make off with gold and silver, seize cattle and goods, and come away with unlimited spoil?”

‘And so, son of man, say in prophecy to Gog, “The Lord Yahweh says this: Is it not true that you are planning to set out^k at a time when my people Israel is living undisturbed? • You plan to leave your home in the far north, you and many nations with you, a great army of countless troops all mounted. • You plan to invade Israel, my people. You will be like a cloud covering the earth. I myself am going to bring you in days to come to attack my country, so that the nations may learn what I am, when I have used you, Gog, to display my holiness to them.

The Lord Yahweh says this: It was of you^l that I spoke in the past through my servants the prophets of Israel, who prophesied and foretold your invasion.^m • On the day Gog attacks the land of Israel—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks—I shall grow angry.ⁿ In my anger, • my jealousy and the heat of my fury I say it: I swear that on that day there will be a fearful quaking in the land of Israel. •At my presence the fish in the sea and the birds of heaven, the wild beasts and all the reptiles that crawl along the ground, and all men on earth, will quake. Mountains will fall, cliffs crumble, walls collapse, and •I will confront him with every sort of terror^a—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks. His men will turn their swords on each other, •I will punish him with plague and bloodshed and send torrential rain, hailstones, fire and brimstone against him and his hordes and against the many nations with him. •I mean to display my greatness and holiness and to compel the many nations to acknowledge me; this is how they will learn that I am Yahweh.”

38 a. Though not a pure apocalypse, this poem already shows a number of apocalyptic features. While the earlier prophets were in the main concerned with contemporary morality and only occasionally looked ahead to a more glorious future, the purpose of an apocalypse, whether written or spoken, is usually to console by the visions the prophet has seen. These visions reveal a future that will eclipse present misery. Often, too, they reveal the forthcoming triumphs of divine judgement and, opening eschatological vistas, unveil mysteries of the world to come. Although this form of literature was particularly cultivated in later Judaism, the Bible contains several examples of its earlier stages of development, of. Introduction to the Prophets. Ezk 38-39 marks the earliest stage. Further examples occur in Is 24-27; Dn 7-12; Zc 9-14. The most vigorous period of development was the 2nd century B.C. (the Book of Enoch, etc.). It is represented in the N.T. by the apocalypse of St John (Rv).

b. ‘Gog and the country of Magog’ Greek; ‘Gog, country of Magog’ Hebr.

c. Meshech and Tubal are northern countries on the borders of the Black Sea, cf. 27:13. Magog, not known from other sources, should be assigned to the same area. It seems useless to try to identify Gog. Doubtless deriving features from several contemporary personalities, he figures here as the type of victorious barbarian who in an unspecified distant future will inflict the final ordeals on Israel.

“That is how I shall display my glory to the nations, and all nations will feel 21 they had rebelled against me, and to hand them over to their enemies; and they all

2 Ch 3:3

The Temple was surrounded with a wall, and the man was holding a measur- 5
ing rod that was six cubits long, each cubit a forearm and a handbreadth.^f

He measured the thickness of this construction—one rod; and its height—one rod.

The east gate^o

6 He went to the east gate, climbed the steps and measured its threshold: one 7 rod deep. •Each guardroom one rod by one rod; and the walls between the 8 guardrooms five cubits thick; and the threshold of the gate inwards from the 9 porch of the gate: one rod.^h •He measured the porch of the gate: eight cubits; its 10 jambs: two cubits; the porch of the gate was at the inner end. •There were three 11 guardrooms on each side of the east gate, all three the same size; the walls 12 between them all the same thickness each side. •He measured the width of the 13 entrance: ten cubits; and the width all down the gateway: thirteen cubits.
14 There was a rail in front of the guardrooms; each rail on either side was one 15 cubit. And the guardrooms on either side were six cubits square. •He measured 16 the width of the gate from the back wall of one guardroom to the back wall of 17 the other;ⁱ it was twenty-five cubits across from window to window. •He measured 18 the porch: twenty cubits; after the porch of the gate came the outer court.^j •From 19 the entrance end of the gate to the porch opposite: fifty cubits. •On each side of 20 the gate there were splayed openings^k both in the guardrooms and in the spaces
21 between, and there were openings all round inside the porch as well, and palm 22 trees decorating the jambs.^l

The outer court

23 He took me through to the outer court that had rooms and a paved terrace
24 going all the way round; there were thirty rooms on this terrace. •This terrace, 25 which came right up to the sides of the gates and matched their depth, is the 26 Lower Terrace. •He measured across the outer court^m from the lower gate to the 27 outside of the inner court: a hundred cubits on the eastern and northern sides.

The north gate

28 He measured the length and breadth of the north gate of the outer court. •It 29 had three guardrooms on each side; the thickness of the walls between them, and 30 its porch too, all measured the same as those of the first gate: fifty cubits by 31 twenty-five cubits. •Its windows, its porch and its palm-tree decoration all 32 measured the same as those of the east gate. There were seven steps up to it, 33 and its porch was at the inner end.ⁿ •In the inner court there was, opposite the

g. The conclusion to the whole section, not to the oracle against Gog. It sums up the teaching of Ezekiel as expressed 5:8,10; 28:26; 34:30, etc.

40 a. The final section of Ezk, ch. 40-48, is a blueprint for the religious and political rehabilitation of the Israelite nation in Palestine. The prophet is inspired by his profound knowledge of past history, but he does his best to adapt the earlier legislation to new conditions, and take advantage of recent experience to preserve Israel from the temptations and apostasies which have led the nation to ruin. Henceforth Ezekiel assumes the role of organizer intent on realising long-foreseen and long-desired reforms. His earlier promises of restoration and of a covenant animated by the spirit presupposed a reorganisation of the community. Living at a time when the whole structure of Israel needed to be rebuilt enabled Ezekiel to draw up a founding charter for what was shortly to emerge as Judaism, and to provide a basis for all future efforts and aspiration from Ezra to the heavenly Jerusalem of the apocalypse of St John. In all this, the Christian reader will be aware of the high ideal of holiness, 44:23; 43:7, and the sense of the presence of God, 48:35, later to be realised in the Church.

f. There seem to have been two cubits: the common cubit of 6 palms, or handbreadths, and the older 'great cubit' of 7 palms. Ezekiel makes it clear that he uses the latter, which measures 'one (common) cubit and a palm'.

g. The three gates of the outer court are alike; only the E. gate is described in detail.

north gate, a gate like the one opposite the east gate.^o He measured the distance from one gate to the other: a hundred cubits.

The south gate

He took me to the south side where there was a south gate; he measured its guardrooms,^p wall-thicknesses and porch; they were of the same dimensions as the others. •All round it and its porch were windows, like the other windows; it measured fifty cubits by twenty-five cubits, •and it had seven steps up to it; its porch was at the inner end and had palm-tree decoration on its jambs, one on each side. •The inner court had a south gate; he measured the distance southwards from one gate to the other: a hundred cubits.

There was a room entered from the porch of the gates.^t It was here that they washed the holocaust. •And on either side of the porch of the gate there were two tables for slaughtering the holocaust, the sacrifice for sin and the sacrifice of reparation. •Going northward up to the gate, there were two tables outside and two more tables at the porch end of the gate. •Four tables on the inside and four tables on the outside of the porch; in all, eight tables on which the sacrifices were offered. •There were also four tables of dressed stone for holocausts, a cubit and a half long, a cubit and a half wide and a cubit high, on which all the things necessary for killing the holocaust and the sacrifices were put. •Rims,^u a handbreadth broad, went all round the top, and on these tables was put the sacrificial flesh.

window screens, the three sets of doors, one at each threshold, were all panelled with wood, from floor to windows,^g and the windows were screened with lattice-work. •From the door to the inner part of the Temple, and right round the whole wall of the inner room, outside and inside, were carved^h •cherubs and palm trees, palm trees and cherubs alternating; each cherub had two faces—the face of a man turned towards the palm tree one side and the face of a lion towards the palm tree the other side, all round the Temple. •The cherubs and palm trees were carved from the floor to above the entrance, as also on the wall of the hall. The pillars of the Temple were square.

The wooden altar

Ex 30:1-3
1 K 6:20-21 In front of the Debir, there appeared to be •a wooden altar, three cubits high and two cubits square.ⁱ Its corners, base and sides were of wood. He said to me, 'This is the table in front of Yahweh'.

The doors

1 K 6:31-35 There was a double door for the Hekal, and a double door for the Debir. These doors had two hinged leaves, two leaves for the one door, two leaves for the other. •On them, on the doors of the Hekal, were carved cherubs and palm trees like those carved on the walls. A wooden screen outside went across the front of the Ulam. •There were screened windows with flanking palm trees on the walls of the Ulam, and of the cells to the side of the Temple and on the screens.

1 Ch 28:12 Outbuildings of the Temple^a

46:19 42 He took me northward into the court and led me to the rooms facing the outer court, those to the north of the building.^b •They were one hundred cubits long along on the north side and fifty cubits wide. •On the sides facing the porches^c of the inner court and the paving of the outer court was a gallery in front of the triple gallery, •and in front of the rooms was a walk, ten cubits broad measured inwards and a hundred cubits long;^d their doors looked north. •The top floor rooms were narrow because the galleries took up part of the width, being narrower than those on the ground floor or those on the middle floor of the building, since these were divided into three stories and had no columns such as the court had. Hence they were narrower than the ground floor ones or the middle floor ones below them. •The outer wall parallel to the rooms, facing them and giving on to the outer court, was fifty cubits long, •the length of the rooms facing the outer court being fifty cubits, while on the side facing the Temple it was a hundred cubits. •Beneath the rooms there was an entrance from the east, leading in from the outer court.

In the thickness of the wall of the court, on the south side^e fronting the court and the building, were rooms. •A walk ran in front of them, as with the rooms built on the north side; they were of the same length and breadth, and had similar design and doors in and out. •They were like the entrances of the southern rooms; one entrance at the end of each walk, fronting the eastern wall, being the way in. •He said to me, 'The northern and southern rooms giving on to the court are the rooms of the Debir, in which the priests who approach Yahweh will eat the most holy things. In them will be placed the most holy things: the oblation, the sacrifice for sin and the sacrifice of reparation, since this is a holy place. •Once the priests have entered, they will not go out of the holy place into the outer court without leaving their liturgical vestments there, since these vestments are holy; they will put on other clothes before going near places assigned to the people.'

45:2 Measurements of the court

When he had finished measuring the inside of the Temple, he took me out to the east gate and measured the whole area of the court. •He measured the east side with his measuring rod: a total of five hundred cubits^f by the measuring rod.

 17 He then measured the north side: a total of five hundred cubits by the measuring 18 rod. •He then measured the south side: five hundred cubits by the measuring 19 rod •was the total. On the west side he measured five hundred cubits by the 20 measuring rod. •He measured the entire enclosing wall on all four sides: length five hundred, breadth five hundred, separating the sacred from the profane.

The use of the east gate

44 He brought me back to the outer east gate of the sanctuary. It was shut. 1
 Ps 24:7 Yahweh said to me, 'This gate will be kept shut. No one will open it or go 2 through it, since Yahweh the God of Israel has been through it. And so it must be kept shut. •The prince himself, however, may sit there to take his meal in the 3 presence of Yahweh.^a He is to enter and leave through the porch of the gate.'

Rules of admission to the Temple

He led me through the north gate to the front of the Temple. I looked; I saw 4 the glory of Yahweh filling the Temple of Yahweh, and I prostrated myself.
 Yahweh said to me, 'Son of man, pay attention, look carefully and listen closely 5 to everything I explain; these are all the arrangements of the Temple of Yahweh and all its laws. Be careful about which men are admitted to the Temple and which are excluded from the sanctuary.^b •And say to the rebels of the House of 6

 Ac 21:28-29 Lord Yahweh says this: No alien, uncircumcised in heart and body, is to enter my sanctuary, none of those aliens living among the Israelites.^e

The Levites

As regards the Levites who abandoned me when Israel strayed far from me 10 to follow its idols,^f they must bear the weight of their own sin. •They are to be 11 servants in my sanctuary, responsible for guarding the Temple gates and serving the Temple. They will kill the holocaust and the sacrifice for the people, and hold themselves at the service of the people. •Since they used to be at their service in 12 front of their idols and were an occasion of sin to the House of Israel, very well,
 I raise my hand against them—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks; they must bear 13 the weight of their sin. •They are never to approach me again to perform the Lv 2:3+ priestly office in my presence, or to touch my holy things and my most holy things; they must bear the disgrace of their filthy practices. •I shall give them the responsi- 14 bility of working in the Temple; I shall make them responsible for serving it and for everything to be done in it.

44 a. Cf. 46:1-2. Evidently an allusion to a sacred meal, presumably accompanying the communion sacrifice, Lv 7:15; Dt 12:7,18.

b. Translation doubtful. Hebr. 'at the entrance to the Temple and at all the exits from the sanctuary'.

c. 'and break' versions.

d. Probably alluding to the employment of more or less assimilated aliens, cf. Jos 9:27; Dt 29:10, in the service of the Temple of Jerusalem.

e. In the Temple of Herod in the days of Jesus, the following notice was still to be seen: 'Let no alien pass beyond the balustrade and wall surrounding the sanctuary. Whoever is caught doing so will have only himself to blame for the death which will be his penalty.' Several of these stone inscriptions have been unearthed.

f. Text corr. The Levites were frequently employed at the 'high places'. When these shrines were abolished by Dt and the reform under Josiah, these Levites lost their official standing and were forced to live on charity, Dt 12:12,18, etc., or else to reaffiliate themselves to the sanctuary in Jerusalem, Dt 18:6-8. Ezekiel approves the latter course but assigns them a subordinate status; they are to take over the duties of the aliens expelled from the Temple service.

g. The levitical priests, cf. Dt 18:1-5, are those who remained loyal to the service of the sanctuary in Jerusalem. They belonged to the clan of Zadok, the priest appointed by Solomon after the deprivation of Abiathar, 1 K 2:27-35.

h. Hebr. has 'sweat' here. Probably the word has another meaning, or else the text is corrupt.

i. Hebr. repeats 'in the outer court'.

j. The laity are forbidden to touch consecrated objects; they run the risk of being 'hallowed' or 'sanctified', cf. Lv 17:1+.

k. Long, unkempt hair symbolised either a vow, Nb 6:5, or mourning, cf. Ezk 24:17,23.

l. 'They are not to go near' versions.

m. 'They are to have no...' Vulg.

n. According to Lv 7:24 this applies to all Israelites.

45 a. Ezekiel divides the country into regular parallel strips in complete disregard of geographical features or population distribution. This is the most theoretical and impracticable part of Ezekiel's plan.

b. The domain of the priests, the Levites and the prince occupies the entire central part of the country: a strip 25,000 cubits wide (about 7 miles) having the Temple of Jerusalem as its central point and extending from the Jordan to the Mediterranean.

of this an area five hundred by five hundred cubits^c square is to be for the sanctuary, with a boundary fifty cubits wide right round. •Out of this area you are also to measure a section twenty-five thousand by ten thousand cubits, in which there shall stand the sanctuary, the Holy of Holies. •This is to be the sacred portion of the country; it shall belong to the priests who officiate in the sanctuary and approach Yahweh to serve him. There they are to have their houses and also a district set apart for the sanctuary. •An area twenty-five thousand by ten thousand cubits is to be kept for the Levites serving the Temple to own, with towns to live in.^d •You are to give the city possession of an area five thousand by twenty-five thousand cubits, near the land belonging to the sanctuary; this is to be for the whole House of Israel.

The portion for the prince

The prince is to have a domain either side of the land belonging to the Holy Place and of the land belonging to the city, and adjacent to the land belonging to the Holy Place and the land belonging to the city, stretching westwards from the west and eastwards from the east, its size equal to one of the portions between the west and the east frontiers •of the country. This is to be his possession in Israel. Then my princes will no longer oppress my people; they must leave the rest of the country for the House of Israel, for its tribes.

Jr 22:3-5 The Lord Yahweh says this: Let this be enough for you, princes of Israel!

Lv 19:35-36 Give up your violence and plundering, practise justice and integrity, crush my people no more with taxation—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks. •Have scales that are fair, a fair ephah, a fair bath. •Let the ephah and bath be equal, let the bath hold one tenth of a homer and the ephah one tenth of a homer. Let the measures be based on the homer.^e •The shekel is to be twenty gerahs. Twenty shekels, twenty-five shekels and fifteen shekels are to make one mina.

Offerings for worship

Ex 30:13-16 Mt 23:23 This is the offering that you are to levy: the sixth of an ephah for every homer of wheat, and the sixth of an ephah for every homer of barley. •The dues on oil: one bath of oil out of every ten baths or out of every cor (which is equal to ten baths or one homer, since ten baths equal one homer). •You are to levy one sheep on every flock of two hundred from the patrimony^f of Israel for the oblation, the holocaust and the communion sacrifice. This is to form your atonement—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks. •Let all the people of the country be subject to this due for the prince of Israel. •The prince is to make himself responsible for providing the holocausts, oblation and libation for feasts, New Moons and sabbaths, for all the solemn festivals of the House of Israel. He is to provide the sacrifice for sin, oblation, holocaust and communion sacrifices atoning for the House of Israel.

Ex 12:1 + The feast of the Passover

Lv 16:16 The Lord Yahweh says this: On the first day of the first month, you must take a young bull without blemish, to purify the sanctuary. •The priest is to take blood from the sacrifice for sin and put it on the doorposts of the Temple, on the four corners of the altar plinth and on the doorposts of the gates of the inner court. •You must do the same on the seventh of the month, on behalf of anyone who has sinned through inadvertence or ignorance. This is how you are to make atonement for the Temple. •On the fourteenth day of the first month, you must celebrate the feast of the Passover. For seven days everyone is to eat unleavened loaves. •On that day, the prince must offer a bull as a sacrifice for sin, for himself and all the people in the country. •For the seven days of the feast, he must offer Yahweh a holocaust of seven bulls and seven rams without blemish, daily for a week, and one he-goat daily as a sacrifice for sin, •offering one ephah for each bull and one ephah for each ram, and a hin of oil for every ephah for the oblation.

The feast of Tabernacles

Nb 29:12

The sabbath and the New Moon

- 1 46 Thus speaks the Lord Yahweh: The east gate of the inner court must be kept shut for the six working days. On the sabbath day it is to be opened, as also on the day of the New Moon; •and the prince is to go in through the porch of the outer gate and take his position by the doorposts of the gate. The priests must then offer his holocaust and his communion sacrifice. He must prostrate himself on the threshold of the gate and go out, and the gate is not to be shut again until the evening. •The people of the country are to prostrate themselves in the presence of Yahweh at the entrance to the gate on sabbaths and days of the New Moon. •The holocaust offered to Yahweh by the prince on the sabbath day is to consist of six unblemished lambs and one unblemished ram, •and an oblation of one ephah for the ram, and such oblation as he pleases for the lambs, and a hin of oil for every ephah. •On the day of the New Moon it is to consist of a young bull without blemish, six unblemished lambs and one unblemished ram, •when he must make an oblation of one ephah for the bull and one ephah for the ram, and what he pleases for the lambs, and a hin of oil for every ephah.

Nb 28:9-14

Miscellaneous regulations

- 8 When the prince goes in, he is to enter by the porch of the gate, and he must leave by the same way. •When the people of the country come into the presence of Yahweh at the solemn festivals, those who have come in by the north gate to prostrate themselves are to go out by the south gate, and those who have come in by the south gate are to go out by the north gate; no one is to turn back to leave through the gate by which he entered but is to go out on the opposite side.
- 10 The prince is to come with them, coming in like them and going out like them. •On feast days and solemn festivals the oblation must be one ephah for every bull, one ephah for every ram, what he pleases for the lambs, and a hin of oil for every ephah. •When the prince offers Yahweh a voluntary holocaust or a voluntary communion sacrifice, the east gate is to be opened for him, and he is to offer his holocaust and his communion sacrifice as he does on the sabbath day; when he has gone out, the gate is to be shut after him. •Every day he must offer^a an unblemished lamb one year old as a holocaust to Yahweh; he must offer this every morning. •Every morning in addition he is to offer an oblation of one sixth of an ephah and one third of a hin of oil, for mixing with the flour.
- 15 This is the oblation to Yahweh, an eternal law fixed in perpetuity. •The lamb, the oblation and the oil are to be offered morning after morning for ever.^b
- 16 The Lord Yahweh says this. If the prince presents his sons with part of his hereditary portion, the gift is to pass into the ownership of his sons, and become their hereditary property. •If, however, he presents part of his hereditary portion to one of his servants, it shall only belong to the man until the year of liberation^c and is then to revert to^d the prince. 47 He brought me back to the entrance of the Temple, where a stream came out from under the Temple threshold and flowed eastwards, since the Temple faced east. The water flowed from under the right side of the Temple, south of the altar. •He took me out by the north gate and led me right round outside as far as the outer east gate where the water flowed out on the right-hand side. •The man went to the east holding his measuring line and measured off a thousand cubits; he then made me wade across the stream; the water reached my ankles. •He measured off another thousand and made me wade across the stream again; the water reached my knees. He measured off another thousand and made me wade across again; the water reached my waist. •He measured off another thousand; it was now a river which I could not cross; the stream had swollen and was now deep water, a river impossible to cross. •He then said, ‘Do you see, son of man?’ He took me further, then brought me back to the bank of the river. •When I got back, there were many trees on each bank of the river. •He said, ‘This water flows east down to the Arabah^a and to the sea; and flowing into the sea it makes its waters wholesome. •Wherever the river flows, all living creatures teeming in it will live. Fish will be very plentiful, for wherever the water goes it brings health, and life teems wherever the river flows.^b •There will be fishermen on its banks. Fishing nets will be spread from En-ge-di to En-eglaim. The fish will be as varied and as plentiful as the fish of the Great Sea.^c •The marshes and lagoons, however, will not become wholesome, but will remain salt. •Along the river, on either bank, will grow every kind of fruit tree with leaves that never wither and fruit that never fails; they will bear new fruit every month, because this water comes from the sanctuary. And their fruit will be good to eat and the leaves medicinal.

The frontiers of the land^d

•The Lord Yahweh says this: Here are the frontiers of the territories to be allotted between the twelve tribes of Israel, with two portions for Joseph.^e You must share it out equally between you, since I swore to your fathers that I would give them this land which now falls to you as your inheritance. •Here are the frontiers of the land. On the north, from the Great Sea by way of Hethlon to the Pass of Hamath^f and on to Zedad, •Berothah, Sibram lying between the territories of Damascus and Hamath—and to Hazer-hat-ticon on the borders of Hauran. •The frontier will extend from the sea to Hazer-enon, marching with the frontier of Damascus to the north of it and the frontier of Hamath also on the north; so much for^g the northern frontier. •On the east the Jordan will serve as frontier between Hauran and Damascus, between Gilead and the land of Israel, down to the Eastern Sea^b as far as Tamar; so much for 19 the eastern frontier. •On the south, from Tamar southward to the waters of Meribah in Kadesh, to the Wadi and the Great Sea; so much for the southern 20 frontier. •On the west the Great Sea will serve as frontier up to the point 21 opposite the Pass of Hamath; so much for the western frontier. •You are to 22 share out this land among yourselves, between the tribes of Israel. •You are to divide it into inheritances for yourselves and the aliens settled among you who have begotten children with you, since you are to treat them as citizens of Israel.

 They are to draw lots with you for their inheritance, with the tribes of Israel.
 23 You must give the alien his inheritance in the tribe in which he is living—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks.

DANIEL

THE YOUNG HEBREWS AT THE COURT OF NEBUCHADNEZZAR

- 1 In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah, Nebuchadnezzar 2 K 24:1f
2 king of Babylon marched on Jerusalem and besieged it. •The Lord delivered 2 Ch 36:5-7
Jehoiakim king of Judah into his hands, with some of the furnishings of the 5:2
Temple of God. He took them away to the land of Shinar,^a and stored the sacred Gn 10:10 vessels in the treasury of his own gods.
- 3 The king ordered Ashpenaz, his chief eunuch, to select from the Israelites 4 a certain number of boys of either royal or noble descent; •they had to be without any physical defect, of good appearance, trained in every kind of wisdom, well-informed, quick at learning,^b suitable for service in the palace of the king.
Ashpenaz himself was to teach them the language and literature of the Chaldaeans.
- 5 The king assigned them a daily allowance of food and wine from his own royal 2 K 25:29-30 table. They were to receive an education lasting for three years, after which they 6 were expected to be fit for the king's society. •Among them were Daniel, 7 Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah, who were Judaeans. •The chief eunuch gave them other names, calling Daniel Belteshazzar, Hananiah Shadrach, Mishael 8 Meshach, and Azariah Abednego.^c •Daniel, who was most anxious not to defile himself with the food and wine from the royal table, begged the chief eunuch to 9 spare him this defilement;^d •and by the grace of God Daniel met goodwill and Gn 39:4,21
Est 2:9
10 sympathy on the part of the chief eunuch. •But he warned Daniel, 'I am afraid of my lord the king: he has assigned you food and drink, and if he sees you looking 11 thinner in the face than the other boys of your age, my head will be in danger with the king because of you'. •At this Daniel turned to the guard whom the chief eunuch had assigned to Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah. He said, 12 'Please allow your servants a ten days' trial, during which we are given only Jdt 12:2
13 vegetables to eat and water to drink. •You can then compare our looks with Rv 2:10 those of the boys who eat the king's food; go by what you see, and treat your 14 servants accordingly.' •The man agreed to do what they asked and put them on 15 ten days' trial. •When the ten days were over they looked and were in better health than any of the boys who had eaten their allowance from the royal table;
16 so the guard withdrew their allowance of food and the wine they were to drink, 17 and gave them vegetables. •And God favoured these four boys with knowledge and intelligence in everything connected with literature, and in wisdom; while 18 Daniel had the gift of interpreting every kind of vision and dream. •When the Gn 41:12 period stipulated by the king for the boys' training was over, the chief eunuch presented them to Nebuchadnezzar. •The king conversed with them, and among 19 all the boys found none to equal Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah. So 1 K 10:3-4 they became members of the king's court, •and on whatever point of wisdom 20 or information he might question them, he found them ten times better than all the magicians and enchanters in his entire kingdom. •Daniel remained there 21 until the first year of King Cyrus.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM: THE COMPOSITE STATUE

The king questions his sages

2 In the second year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuchadnezzar had a 1 series of dreams;^a his mind was troubled, sleep deserted him. •The king then 2 had magicians and enchanters, sorcerers and Chaldaeans^b summoned to tell the king what his dreams meant. They arrived and stood in the king's presence.
The king said to them, 'I have had a dream, and my mind is disturbed by a desire 3 to understand the dream'. •The Chaldaeans answered the king:^c 4

'O king, live for ever!^d Tell your servants the dream, and we will reveal its meaning for you.' •The king answered the Chaldaeans, 'This is my firm resolve: 5
if you cannot tell me what my dream was, and what it means, I will have you torn limb from limb and your houses razed to the ground. •If, on the other hand, 6 5:17 you can tell me what I dreamt and what it means, I will give you presents, rewards and high honour. So tell me what I dreamt and what it means.' •A 7 second time they said, 'Let the king tell his dream to his servants, and we will reveal its meaning'. •But the king retorted, 'It is plain to me that you are trying 8 to gain time, knowing my proclaimed and firm resolve. •Your intention is 9 not to interpret my dream, but to make me misleading and tortuous speeches while the time goes by. So tell me what my dream was, and I shall know whether you can interpret it or not.' •The Chaldaeans answered the king, 'Nobody in the 10 world could find out the king's trouble; what is more, no other king, governor or chief would think of putting such a question to any magician, enchanter or Chaldaean. •The question the king asks is difficult, and no one can find the king 11
Gn 41:16 an answer to it, except the gods, whose dwelling is not with creatures of flesh.'
At this the king flew into a rage and ordered all the Babylonian sages to be put 12 to death. •On publication of the decree to have the sages killed, search was made 13 for Daniel and his companions to have them put to death.

Daniel intervenes

With shrewd and cautious words, however, Daniel approached Arioch, 14 commander of the king's executioners, when he was on his way to kill the Babylonian sages. •He said to Arioch, the royal marshal, 'Why has the king issued 15 such an urgent decree?' Arioch explained matters to Daniel, •and Daniel went 16 off to ask the king for a stay of execution to give him the opportunity of revealing his interpretation to the king. •Daniel then went home and told his friends 17
Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah what had happened, •urging them to beg the 18
Gn 24:7 God of heaven to show his mercy in this mysterious^e affair, so that Daniel and Ps 136:26 his friends might be spared the fate of the other Babylonian sages. •The mystery 19 was then revealed to Daniel in a night-vision, and Daniel blessed^f the God of heaven. •This is what Daniel said: 20

- 24 So Daniel went to see Arioch whom the king had made responsible for putting the Babylonian sages to death. On going in he said, 'Do not put the Babylonian sages to death. Take me into the king's presence and I will reveal the meaning 25 to the king.' •Arioch lost no time in bringing Daniel to the king. 'Among the exiles from Judah,' he said 'I have discovered a man who can reveal the meaning 26 to the king.' •The king said to Daniel (who had been given the name Belteshazzar), 27 'Can you tell me what my dream was, and what it means?' •Facing the king, Daniel replied, 'None of the sages, enchanters, magicians or wizards has been 28 able to tell the king the truth of the mystery which the king propounded; •but there is a God in heaven who reveals mysteries, and who has shown King Nebuchadnezzar what is to take place in the days to come. These, then, are the dream and the visions that passed through your head as you lay in bed:ⁱ 29 'O king, on your bed your thoughts turned to what would happen in the future, and the Revealer of Mysteries disclosed to you what is to take place.
30 This mystery has been revealed to me, not that I am wiser than any other man, but for this sole purpose: that the king should learn what it means, and that you should understand your inmost thoughts.
31 'You have had a vision, O king; this is what you saw: a statue, a great statue
32 of extreme brightness, stood before you, terrible to see. •The head of this statue was of fine gold, its chest and arms were of silver, its belly and thighs of bronze, 33 its legs of iron, its feet part iron, part earthenware. •While you were gazing, 34 a stone broke away, untouched by any hand,^j and struck the statue, struck its feet
35 of iron and earthenware and shattered them. •And then, iron and earthenware, bronze, silver, gold all broke into small pieces as fine as chaff on the threshing-floor in summer. The wind blew them away, leaving not a trace behind. And the stone that had struck the statue grew into a great mountain, filling the whole 36 earth. •This was the dream; now we will explain to the king what it means.

2 a. Cf. the dreams of the Egyptian officials, Gn 40:5-23, and of Pharaoh, Gn 41:1-32. The dream is a true prophecy, but this is not its only purpose: it is made in cryptic terms in order that it may be a means of advancement to God's chosen servant, whose power of interpreting it is evidence that he has the spirit of God living in him.

b. 'Chaldaean' here means all those practising divination, an art commonly believed to have originated in Chaldaea. The various terms used in the lists of Dn 1:20; 2:2,10,27; 4:4; 5:7,11,15 have no precise technical significance.

c. The text here adds 'in Aramaic', meaning that the following chapters are in that language. Hebr. is resumed in 8:1.

d. The greeting is often found in Akkadian texts and was used in the Persian court until the Islamic period.

e. raz, mystery, is a word of Persian origin; its biblical use is confined to Dn, but it is found in the Qumran scrolls: its primary meaning is 'secret', but it seems already to possess something of the profundity of the Greek mysterion as used by St Paul, cf. Rm 16:25+.

f. The Jewish 'blessing' begins with an invocation to God or to his name, followed by a commemoration of his favours. When used liturgically it ends with a repetition of the initial eulogy, mentioning in abbreviated form the particular favour obtained.

g. The O.T. describes God as surrounded by light, Ex 24:17; Ezk 1:27; Hab 3:4, and as light itself, Is 60:19-20; Ws 7:26. The N.T. expresses this idea more clearly still, cf. for example 1 Jn 1:5-7; 1 Tm 6:16; Jm 1:17. cf. Jn 8:12+. Some early Jewish commentators cite this verse to vindicate the title 'Light' for the expected Messiah.

h. 'intelligence' LXX: 'strength' Aramaic.

i. The allegories in Dn, of which this is the first, are veiled descriptions of the great successive empires of history: Neo-Babylonian, Median, Persian, Greek (Alexander's Asiatic kingdom governed by his successors). The allegory is here borrowed from ancient speculations on the ages of the world, the symbolism being used of metals in descending scale of value. Last of all comes the messianic kingdom. The empires of earth collapse and give place to a new kingdom which, being founded by God, is everlasting: the 'kingdom' of heaven cf. Dn 4:17+. Jesus will later call himself 'Son of Man', cf. Dn 7:13+ and Mt 8:20+; he will also refer to himself, cf. Mt 21:42-44; Lk 20:17-18, as the keystone formerly rejected, Ps 118:22, and as the foundation stone of Is 28:16, with a clear allusion to the stone which breaks away from the mountain and crushes him on whom it falls, Dn 2:34,44-45.

j. Lit. 'without hands'.

 7:7; 8:5, rise, not so great as you, and then a third, of bronze, which will rule the whole 40
 21:11:5 world. •There will be^k a fourth kingdom, hard as iron, as iron that shatters and crushes all. Like iron that breaks everything to pieces, it will crush and break 41 all the earlier kingdoms. •The feet you saw, part earthenware, part iron, are a kingdom which will be split in two, but which will retain something of the strength 42 of iron, just as you saw the iron and the clay of the earthenware mixed together.
 The feet were part iron, part earthenware: the kingdom will be partly strong and 43 partly weak. •And just as you saw the iron and the clay of the earthenware mixed together, so the two will be mixed together in the seed of man;^l but they will 44 not hold together any more than iron will blend with earthenware. •In the time

 Mt 21:42-44 iron, bronze, earthenware, silver and gold. The great God has shown the king what is to take place. The dream is true, the interpretation exact.'

The king's profession of faith

At this, King Nebuchadnezzar fell prostrate before Daniel; he gave orders 46 for Daniel to be offered an oblation and a fragrant sacrifice. •The king said to 47
 Lv 2:1+; 6:8 Daniel, 'Your god must be the God of gods, the master of kings, and the Revealer
 3:90; 11:36 of Mysteries, since you have been able to reveal this mystery'. •The king conferred 48
 Dt 10:17 high rank on Daniel and gave him many handsome presents. He also made him
 Est 4:17r governor of the whole province of Babylon and head of all the sages of Babylon.
 Ps 95:3 At Daniel's request, however, the king entrusted the affairs of the province of 49
 Tb 1:16 Babylon to Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego; Daniel himself remained at Est 8:2 court.

THE ADORATION OF THE GOLDEN STATUE

Nebuchadnezzar erects a golden statue

3 King Nebuchadnezzar had a golden statue made,^a six cubits tall and three 1 cubits wide,^b which he erected on the plain of Dura, in the province of Babylon.
 King Nebuchadnezzar then summoned the satraps, prefects, governors, 2 counsellors, treasurers, judges, men of law, and all the provincial authorities to assemble and attend the dedication of the statue erected by King Nebuchadnezzar.
 Then the satraps, prefects, governors, counsellors, treasurers, judges, men of 3 law and all the provincial authorities assembled for the dedication of the statue erected by King Nebuchadnezzar; and they stood there in front of the statue which King Nebuchadnezzar had erected. •The herald then made this 4 Est 1:22; 3:12 proclamation: 'Men of all peoples, nations, languages! This is required of you:
 Rv 5:9; 7:9; 13:7; 14:6; 17:15 the moment you hear the sound of horn, pipe, lyre, trigon, harp, bagpipe, or any other instrument, you must prostrate yourselves and worship the golden statue erected by King Nebuchadnezzar. •Those who do not prostrate themselves 6 and worship shall immediately be thrown into the burning fiery furnace.' •And so, 7
 Jr 29:21-22 the instant the people heard the sound of horn, pipe, lyre, trigon, harp, bagpipe Est 3:12 and all the other instruments, the men of all peoples, nations and languages prostrated themselves and worshipped the statue erected by King Nebuchadnezzar.

The denunciation and condemnation of the Jews

Some Chaldeans then came forward and laid information against the Jews. 8

9 They said to King Nebuchadnezzar, 'O king, live for ever! •You have issued a 10 decree, O king, to the effect that everyone on hearing the sound of horn, pipe, lyre, trigon, harp, bagpipe or any other instrument is to prostrate himself 11 and worship the golden statue; •and that anyone who does not prostrate himself
 12 and worship is to be thrown into the burning fiery furnace. •Now there are certain Jews to whom you have entrusted the affairs of the province of Babylon: Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego; these men have ignored your command, O king; they do not serve your gods, and refuse to worship the golden statue you have erected.'
 13 Furious with rage, Nebuchadnezzar sent for Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego.
 14 The men were immediately brought before the king. •Nebuchadnezzar addressed them, 'Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, is it true that you do not serve Jdt 6:2 15 my gods, and that you refuse to worship the golden statue I have erected? •When you hear the sound of horn, pipe, lyre, trigon, harp, bagpipe, or any other instrument, are you prepared to prostrate yourselves and worship the statue I Rv 13:15 16 have made? If you refuse to worship it, you must be thrown straight away into the burning fiery furnace; and where is the god who could save you from my power?'
 17 Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego replied to King Nebuchadnezzar, 'Your 18 question hardly requires an answer: •if our God, the one we serve, is able to save us from the burning fiery furnace and from your power, O king, he will 19 save us; •and even if he does not, then you must know, O king, that we will not serve your god or worship the statue you have erected'. •These words infuriated King Nebuchadnezzar; his expression was very different now as he looked at Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego. He gave orders for the furnace to be made 20 seven times hotter than usual, •and commanded certain stalwarts from his army to bind Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego and throw them into the burning

The king acknowledges the miracle

Then King Nebuchadnezzar sprang to his feet in amazement. He said to his advisers, 'Did we not have these three men thrown bound into the fire?' They replied, 'Certainly, O king'. • 'But,' he went on 'I can see four men walking about freely in the heart of the fire without coming to any harm. And the fourth looks like a son of the gods.'²⁴ • Nebuchadnezzar approached the mouth of the burning fiery furnace and shouted, 'Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, servants of the Most High God,²⁵ come out, come here!' And from the heart of the fire out came Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego. • The satraps, prefects, governors, and advisers of the king crowded round the three men to examine them: the fire had had no effect on their bodies: not a hair of their heads had been singed, their cloaks were not scorched, no smell of burning hung about them. Nebuchadnezzar exclaimed, 'Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego: he has sent his angel to rescue his servants who, putting their trust in him, defied the order of the king, and preferred to forfeit their bodies²⁶ rather than serve or worship any god but their own. • I therefore decree as follows: 27

Men of all peoples, nations, and languages! Let anyone speak disrespectfully of the God of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, and I will have him torn limb from limb and his house razed to the ground, for there is no other god 28

Nebuchadnezzar describes his dream

1 4 'I, Nebuchadnezzar,^a was living at ease at home, prosperous in my palace.

4 of Babylon be summoned to explain to me what the dream meant. •Magicians, enchanters, Chaldaeans and wizards came, and I told them what I had dreamt, my own god,^b and in whom the spirit of God Most Holy^c resides, then came 5:11,14; 13:

The use of the term 'watcher', which in the Bible is confined to Dn, is very common in apocryphal works, notably the Book of Enoch, the Book of Jubilees, the Testament of the Twelve Patriarchs, and the 'Damascus Document': it designates the archangels, not infrequently the fallen archangels. In later tradition the 'watchers' are guardian angels.

 because the spirit of God Most Holy resides in you.'

Daniel interprets the dream

Daniel, known as Belteshazzar, hesitated for a moment in embarrassment. 16
 The king said, 'Belteshazzar, do not be alarmed at the dream and its meaning'.
 Belteshazzar answered, 'My lord, may the dream apply to your enemies, and its meaning to your foes! •The tree you saw that grew so tall and strong that it 17 reached the sky and could be seen from the ends of the earth, •the tree with 18 beautiful foliage and abundant fruit, with food for all in it, providing shade for the wild animals, with the birds of heaven nesting in its branches, •that tree 19 is yourself, O king, for you have grown tall and strong; your stature is now so great that it reaches the sky, and your rule extends to the ends of the earth.

Lk 13:19

'And the watcher seen by the king, the holy one coming down from 20 heaven and saying, "Cut the tree down and destroy it, but leave stump and roots in the ground, bound with hoops of iron and bronze in the grass of the field; let him be drenched with the dew of heaven, let him share with the wild animals until seven times have passed over him": •the meaning of this, 21 O king, this decree of the Most High passed on my lord the king, is this:

'You are to be driven from human society, 22
 and live with the wild animals;
 you will feed on grass like the oxen,
 you will be drenched by the dew of heaven;
 seven times will pass over you
 until you have learnt
 that the Most High rules over the kingship of men,
 and confers it on whom he pleases.

'And the order, "Leave the stump and roots of the tree", means that 23 your kingdom will be kept for you until you come to understand that heaven rules all. •May it please the king to accept my advice: by virtuous actions 24 break with your sins, break with your crimes by showing mercy to the poor, and so live long and peacefully.'

The dream comes true

This all happened to King Nebuchadnezzar. •Twelve months later, while 25 strolling on the roof of the royal palace in Babylon, •the king was saying, 26

'Great Babylon! Imperial palace! Was it not built by me alone, by my own 28 might and power to the glory of my majesty?'^k •The boast was not out of his mouth when a voice came down from heaven:

'King Nebuchadnezzar, these words are for you!
Sovereignty is taken from you,
29 you are to be driven from human society,
and live with the wild animals;
you will feed on grass like oxen,
and seven times will pass over you
until you have learnt
that the Most High rules over the kingship of men,
and confers it on whom he pleases.'

30 The words were immediately fulfilled: Nebuchadnezzar was driven from human society and fed on grass like oxen, and was drenched by the dew of heaven; his hair grew as long as eagle's feathers, and his nails became like bird's claws.

31 'When the time was over,^l I, Nebuchadnezzar, lifted up my eyes to heaven:
my reason returned. And I blessed the Most High,

'praising and extolling him who lives for ever,
for his sovereignty is an eternal sovereignty,
his empire lasts from age to age.

j. From the verb here translated as 'break with' is derived an Aramaic noun meaning 'salvation, redemption'; it is possible, therefore, to translate 'atone for your sins'. The 'virtuous actions' refer here to all that is virtuous ('just') in man's relationship with God; such virtue goes far beyond legal justice or purely human justice. In its narrow sense the word means 'good works', particularly almsgiving, as in Tb 12:9; 14:11.

world. Its name later became a symbol for the imposing, though unstable, achievements of mankind; it then came to symbolise the arrogance of men and demons, the antithesis of the heavenly Jerusalem which is the city of God. Cf. Rv 14:8; 16:19; 17:5; 18:2, 10, 21, drawing on the prophetic tradition, cf. Is 21:9, etc. The whole of Dn 4 is intended to show how such arrogance is humbled: Nebuchadnezzar recovers his wits only when he acknowledges the true God.

l. In LXX the king's recovery is the reward of repentance and prayer: an angel appears to him in his sleep to tell him that his kingdom will be restored to him.

5 a. The Babylonian form is Bel-shar-usur, 'May-Bel-protect-the-king'. The historical personage bearing this name is the son, not of Nebuchadnezzar, but of Nabonidus; he did not bear the title of 'king'. Cf. Introduction to the Prophets.

sipped his wine, Belshazzar gave orders for the gold and silver vessels to be brought which his father Nebuchadnezzar had looted from the sanctuary in Jerusalem, so that the king, his noblemen, his wives and his singing women could drink out of them. •The gold and silver vessels looted from the sanctuary of the Temple of God in Jerusalem were brought in, and the king, his noblemen, his wives and his singing women drank out of them. •They drank their wine and praised their gods of gold and silver,^b of bronze and iron, of wood and stone. •Suddenly the fingers of a human hand appeared, and began to write on the plaster of the palace wall, directly behind the lamp-stand; and the king could see the hand as it wrote. •The king turned pale with alarm: his thigh-joints went slack and his knees began to knock. •He shouted for his enchanters, Chaldeans and wizards. And the king said to the Babylonian sages, 'Anyone who can read this writing and tell me what it means shall be dressed in purple, and have a chain of gold put round his neck, and be third in rank in the kingdom'. The king's sages all crowded forward, but they could neither read the writing nor explain to the king what it meant. •Greatly alarmed, King Belshazzar turned even paler, and his noblemen were equally disturbed. •Then the queen, attracted by the noise made by the king and his noblemen, came into the banquet hall. 'O king, live for ever!' said the queen. 'Do not be alarmed, do not look so pale. •In your kingdom there is a man in whom lives the spirit of God Most Holy. In your father's days, he was known for having percipience, intelligence and wisdom comparable to that of the gods. King Nebuchadnezzar, your father, made him head of the magicians, enchanters, Chaldeans and wizards. •Since such a marvellous spirit, and such knowledge and intelligence in interpreting dreams, solving enigmas and unravelling difficult problems, live in this man Daniel, whom the king had renamed Belteshazzar, send for Daniel: he will be able to tell you what this means.'

Daniel was brought into the king's presence; the king said to Daniel, 'Are you the Daniel who was one of the Judaeans brought by my father the king from Judah? •I am told that the spirit of God Most Holy lives in you, and that you are known for your perception, intelligence and marvellous wisdom. The sages and enchanters have already been brought to me to read this writing and tell me what it means, but they have been unable to reveal its meaning. As I am told that you are able to give interpretations and to unravel difficult problems, if you can read the writing and tell me what it means, you shall be dressed in purple, and have a chain of gold put round your neck, and be third in rank in the kingdom.'

Then Daniel spoke up in the presence of the king. 'Keep your gifts for yourself,' he said 'and give your rewards to others. I will read the writing to the king without them, and tell him what it means. •O king, the Most High God gave Nebuchadnezzar your father sovereignty, greatness, glory, majesty. •He made him so great that men of all peoples, nations and languages shook with dread before him: he killed whom he pleased, spared whom he pleased,^a promoted whom he pleased, degraded whom he pleased. •But because his heart grew swollen with pride, and his spirit stiff with arrogance, he was deposed from his sovereign throne and stripped of his glory. •He was driven from the society of men, his heart grew completely animal; he lived with the wild asses;^e he fed on grass like the oxen; his body was drenched by the dew of heaven, until he had learnt that the Most High rules over the empire of men and appoints whom he pleases to rule it. •But you, Belshazzar, who are his son, you have not humbled your heart, in spite of knowing all this. •You have defied the Lord of heaven, you have had the vessels from his Temple brought to you, and you, your noblemen, your wives and your singing women have drunk your wine out of them. You have praised gods of gold and silver, of bronze and iron, of wood and stone, which cannot either see, hear or understand; but you have given no glory to the God who holds your breath and all your fortunes in his

DANIEL IN THE LION PIT

1 M 2:60

The satraps resent Daniel's promotion

It pleased Darius to appoint a hundred and twenty satraps over his kingdom for the various parts of the kingdom, and over them three presidents—of whom Daniel was one—to whom the satraps were to be responsible. This was to ensure that no harm should come to the king. •This Daniel, by virtue of the marvelous spirit residing in him, was so evidently superior to the presidents and satraps that the king considered appointing him to rule the whole kingdom. •The presidents and satraps in consequence started hunting for some affair of state by which they could discredit Daniel; but they could find nothing to his discredit, and no case of negligence; he was so punctilious that they could not find a single instance of maladministration or neglect. •These men then thought, 'We shall never find a way of discrediting Daniel unless we try something to do with the law of his God'. •The presidents and satraps then went in a body to the king. 'King Darius,' they said 'live for ever! •We are all agreed, the presidents of the kingdom, the prefects, satraps, counsellors and governors, that the king should issue a decree enforcing the following regulation: whoever within the next thirty days prays to anyone, god or man, other than to yourself O king, is to be thrown into the lions' den. •O king, ratify the edict at once by signing this document, making it unalterable, as befits the law of the Medes and the Persians, which cannot be revoked.' •King Darius accordingly signed the document embodying the edict.

Daniel's prayer

When Daniel heard that the document had been signed, he retired to his house. The windows of his upstairs room faced towards Jerusalem.^b Three times each day he continued to fall on his knees, praying and giving praise to God as he had always done. •These men came along in a body and found Daniel praying and pleading with God. •They then came to the king and said, 'Have you not just signed an edict forbidding any man for the next thirty days to pray to anyone, god or man, other than to yourself O king, on pain of being thrown into the lions' den?' 'The decision stands,' the king replied 'as befits the law of the Medes and the Persians, which cannot be revoked.' •Then they said to

b. 'and silver' Theod. and Vulg.

c. Daniel summarises what has already been narrated in ch. 4.

d. 'spared' Aram.; 'struck down' Theod. and Vulg.

e. 'wild asses'; var. 'flocks'.

f. The Aramaic repeats Mene (unlike LXX, Theod., Vulg., Josephus; and vv. 26-28 also apparently presume three oracular words, not four). Aram. also reads Parsin (not Phares as in the textual witnesses just enumerated). These mysterious words may conceal the names of three oriental measures of weight, or coins: a mina, a shekel, and a half-mina (paras), thus lending themselves to the successive play on words in

vv. 26-28: mene suggesting the verb mana, to measure, tekel the verb shaqal, to weigh out, parsin suggesting both the verb paras, to divide, and the Persians. The interpretation of the sequence of terms is disputed: allusion to the decreasing influence of the three successive empires (of the Babylonians, 'Medes', and Persians); or of the three kings, Nebuchadnezzar, Evil-merodach and Belshazzar; or else of Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar, and the kings of the 'Medes and Persians'; or an old saying, the point of which eludes us.

g a. 'Darius the Mede' is unknown to history, and the Persian Cyrus had already conquered Media before he captured Babylon. See Introduction to the Prophets.

b. The custom of praying with the face towards Jerusalem dates at least from the post-exilic period.

the king, 'O king, this man Daniel, one of the exiles from Judah, disregards both you and the edict which you have signed: he is at his prayers three times each day'. •When the king heard these words he was deeply distressed, and determined to save Daniel; he racked his brains until sunset to find some way out. •But the men came back in a body to the king and said, 'O king, remember that in conformity with the law of the Medes and the Persians, no edict or decree can be altered when once issued by the king'.

Daniel is thrown to the lions

The king then ordered Daniel to be fetched and thrown into the lion pit. The king said to Daniel, 'Your God himself, whom you have served so faithfully, will have to save you'. •A stone was then brought and laid over the mouth of the pit; and the king sealed it with his own signet and with that of his noblemen, so that there could be no going back on the original decision about Daniel. The king returned to his palace, spent the night in fasting and refused to receive any of his concubines. •Sleep eluded him, •and at the first sign of dawn he was up, and hurried off to the lion pit. •As he approached the pit he shouted in anguished tones, 'Daniel, servant of the living God! Has your God, whom you serve so faithfully, been able to save you from the lions?' •Daniel replied, 'O king, live for ever! •My God sent his angel who sealed the lions' jaws, they did me no harm, since in his sight I am blameless, and I have never done you any wrong either, O king.' •The king was overjoyed, and ordered Daniel to be released from the pit. Daniel was released from the pit, and found to be quite unhurt, because he had trusted in his God. •The king sent for the men who had accused Daniel and had them thrown into the lion pit, they, their wives and their children: and they had not reached the floor of the pit before the lions had seized them and crushed their bones to pieces.

The king's profession of faith

King Darius then wrote to men of all nations, peoples and languages throughout the world, 'May peace be always with you! •I decree: in every kingdom of my empire let all tremble with fear before the God of Daniel:

'He is the living God, he endures for ever,
his sovereignty will never be destroyed
and his kingship never end.
He saves, sets free, and works signs and wonders in the heavens and on earth;
he has saved Daniel from the power of the lions.'

This Daniel flourished in the reign of Darius and the reign of Cyrus the Persian.^d

DANIEL'S DREAM: THE FOUR BEASTS

The vision of the beasts^a

7 In the first year of Belshazzar king of Babylon, Daniel had a dream and visions that passed through his head as he lay in bed. He wrote the dream down, and this is how the narrative began: •Daniel said, 'I have been seeing visions in the night. I saw that the four winds of heaven were stirring up the great sea; •four great beasts emerged from the sea, each different from the other. •The first^b was like a lion with eagle's wings; and as I looked its wings were torn off, and it was lifted from the ground and set standing on its feet like a man; and it was given a human heart. •The second beast I saw^c was different, like a bear, raised up on one of its sides, with three ribs in its mouth, between its teeth. "Up!" came the command "Eat quantities of flesh!" •After this I looked,

- and saw another beast,^d like a leopard, and with four bird's wings on its flanks;
 7 it had four heads, and power was given to it. •Next I saw another vision in the visions of the night: I saw a fourth beast,^e fearful, terrifying, very strong; it had great iron teeth, and it ate, crushed and trampled underfoot what remained.
 It was different from the previous beasts and had ten horns.
 8 'While I was looking at these horns, I saw another horn sprouting among them, a little one;^f three of the original horns were pulled out by the roots to make way for it; and in this horn I saw eyes like human eyes, and a mouth that 9 was full of boasts.^g •As I watched:

The vision of the 'Ancient of Days' and of the son of man

- 'Thrones were set in place^h and one of great age took his seat.
 His robe was white as snow,
 the hair of his head as pure as wool.
 His throne was a blaze of flames,
 its wheels were a burning fire.
 10 A stream of fire poured out,
 issuing from his presence.
 A thousand thousand waited on him,
 ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him.
 A court was held and the books were opened.ⁱ
 11 'The great things the horn was saying were still ringing in my ears, and as I watched, the beast was killed, and its body destroyed and committed to the 12 flames. •The other beasts were deprived of their power, but received a lease of life^j for a season and a time.
 13 'I gazed into the visions of the night.
 And I saw, coming on the clouds of heaven,
 one like a son of man.^k
 He came to the one of great age and was led into his presence.
 14 On him was conferred sovereignty, glory and kingship,
 and men of all peoples, nations and languages became his servants.

c. Translation conj.

d. 'flourished' Aram.: 'was placed over the kingdom' LXX. In LXX the chapter ends with the death of Darius and the accession of Cyrus the Persian.

7 a. The vision corresponds to the dream of Nebuchadnezzar in ch. 2; the four metals (the kingdoms) of the dream, shattered by the stone, 2:28+, are now four beasts succeeded by the son of man. The eschatological significance underlying this vision of human history is even more clearly brought out in Rv 13.

b. The Babylonian empire.

c. The kingdom of the Medes: the author sees the Medes as immediate successors to the Babylonians. Cf. 6:1+.

d. The Persian empire.

e. The empire of Alexander (d. 323) and his successors. Cf. 2:40; 8:5; 11:3. The ten horns are kings of the Seleucid dynasty.

f. Antiochus IV Epiphanes (175-163) who came to power only after getting rid of several rival claimants.

g. Referring to the ready and blasphemous tongue of Antiochus, cf. v. 25; 11:36; 1 M 1:21,24,45 and Rv 13:5.

h. For judges. The saints of God are privileged to sit in judgement at his side according to ancient Jewish tradition (the Book of Enoch), and the promises of Jesus are even more explicit, Mt 19:28; Lk 22:30;

Rv 3:21 and 20:4. The wheeled and blazing throne of God recalls the divine chariot described in Ezk 1.

i. The book in which men's actions, good and bad, are recorded. Cf. Jr 17:1; Ml 3:16; Ps 56:8; Lk 10:20; Rv 20:12+. This image is later used in the Dies Irae. On the Book of Life, cf. 12:1+.

j. That the other empires should survive—for an indeterminate period—offers no further danger to the faith, once the people of God cease to be subject to them.

k. Like the Hebr. ben adam, the Aram. bar nasha used here, has the primary meaning 'man', cf. Ps 8:4. In Ezk, God addresses the prophet thus. But here in Dn the expression signifies a man who is mysteriously more than human. That it indicates an individual is attested by early Jewish apocryphal writings (Enoch, 2 Esd) inspired by this passage, as also by rabbinical tradition from the 2nd to the 9th centuries, and most particularly by Jesus who applies it to himself, cf. Mt 8:20+. That it has a collective sense also is deduced from v. 18 (and v. 22) where the 'son of man' and 'the saints of the Most High' seem more or less identified. But the collective (and equally messianic) sense is an extension of the individual sense: the 'son of man' being leader, representative and exemplar of the 'saints of the Most High'. It was with this in mind that St Ephraim believed that the prophecy applied first to the Jews (the Maccabees), but beyond this, and perfectly, to Jesus.

The interpretation of the vision

Ac 9:13 + 'I, Daniel, was deeply disturbed and the visions that passed through my head alarmed me.¹ •So I approached one of those who were standing by and asked him to tell me the truth about all this. And in reply he revealed to me what these things meant. •“These four great beasts are four kings who will rise from the earth. •Those who are granted sovereignty are the saints^m of the Most High, and the kingdom will be theirs for ever, for ever and ever.” •Then I asked to know the truth about the fourth beast, different from all the rest, very terrifying, with iron teeth and bronze claws, eating, crushing and trampling underfoot what remained; •and the truth about the ten horns on its head—and why the other horn sprouted and the three original horns fell, and why this horn had eyes and a mouth that was full of boasts, and why it made a greater show than the other horns. Jude 16 This was the horn I had watched making war on the saints and proving the stronger, •until the coming of the one of great age who gave judgement in favour of the saintsⁿ of the Most High, when the time came for the saints to take over the kingdom. •This is what he said: 23

“The fourth beast
is to be a fourth kingdom on earth, different from all other kingdoms.
It will devour the whole earth,
trample it underfoot and crush it.
Rv 17:12 As for the ten horns: from this kingdom 24
will rise ten kings, and another after them;
this one will be different from the previous ones
and will bring down three kings; 11:36 he is going to speak words against the Most High, 25 and harass the saints of the Most High.
He will consider changing seasons and the Law,^o
and the saints will be put into his power for a time, two times, and half a time.^p
8:14; 12:7, 12 But a court will be held and his power will be stripped from him, 26 consumed, and utterly destroyed.
And sovereignty and kingship, 27
and the splendours of all the kingdoms under heaven will be given to the people of the saints of the Most High.
Ps 29:11 His sovereignty is an eternal sovereignty
Rv 11:15 and every empire will serve and obey him.”

DANIEL'S VISION: THE RAM AND THE HE-GOAT

The vision

8 In the third year of King Belshazzar^a a vision appeared to me, Daniel, 1 after the one that originally appeared to me.^b •I gazed at the vision, 2 and as I gazed I found myself in Susa,^c the citadel in the province of Elam; gazing at the vision I found myself at the Gate of the Ulai. •I raised my eyes 3 to look round me, and I saw a ram^d standing in front of the river. It had two horns; both were tall, but one taller than the other, and the one that rose the

- 4 higher was the second.^c •I saw the ram thrust westwards, northwards and southwards. No animal could stand up to it, nothing could escape it. It did as it pleased and grew very powerful.
- 5 This is what I observed: a he-goat^f came from the west, having covered the entire earth but without touching the ground, and between its eyes the goat had one majestic^g horn. •It advanced towards the ram with the two horns, which I had seen standing in front of the river, and charged at it with all the fury of its might. •I saw it reach the ram, and it was so enraged with the ram, it knocked it down, breaking both its horns, and the ram had not the strength to resist; it felled it to the ground and trampled it underfoot; no one was there to save the ram. •Then the he-goat grew more powerful than ever, but at the height of its strength the great horn snapped, and in its place sprouted four majestic horns, pointing to the four winds of heaven.^h
- 9 From one of these, the small one, sprang a horn which grew to great size towards south and east and towards the Land of Splendour.ⁱ •It grew right up to the armies of heaven and flung armies and stars^j to the ground, and trampled them underfoot. •It even challenged the power of that army's Prince;^k it abolished the perpetual sacrifice and overthrew the foundation of his sanctuary, and the army too; it put iniquity on the sacrifice^l and flung truth to the ground; the horn was active and successful.
- 13 I heard a holy one^m speaking, and another who said to the speaker,ⁿ 'How long is this vision to be—of perpetual sacrifice,^o disastrous iniquity, of sanctuary and army trampled underfoot?' •The first replied,ⁿ 'Until two thousand three hundred evenings and mornings^q have gone by: then the sanctuary shall have its rights restored.'^r

The angel Gabriel interprets the vision

- 15 As I, Daniel, gazed at the vision and tried to understand it, I saw someone standing before me who looked like a man. •I heard a man's voice cry over^s the Ulai, 'Gabriel, tell him the meaning of the vision!' •He approached the place where I was standing; as he approached I was seized with terror, and fell prostrate. 'Son of man,' he said to me 'understand this: the vision shows the time of the End.' •He was still speaking, when I fell senseless to the ground.

l. Two incomprehensible Aramaic words are omitted here as in LXX and Vulg.

m. 'the saints' are the holy people of God as in 8:24; Ps 34:9; Is 4:3; Nb 16:3; cf. Ex 19:6+.

n. Or possibly 'delegated judgement to the saints'.

o. Allusion to the hellenising policy of Antiochus Epiphanes, and in particular to his ban on observance of the sabbath and feastdays, cf. 1 M 1:41f, 43-52.

p. According to 4:13 the 'time' here means 1 year. Three and a half years (the half-week of years of 9:27) correspond approximately to the duration of the persecution under Antiochus. This figure (also expressed as 42 months each of 30 days—or as 1260 days) is adopted in Rv 11:2-3; 12:14; 13:5 for the duration of the Roman persecution; cf. also Lk 4:25 and Jm 5:17. In all these texts, as throughout Dn, the figure stands for a period of distress permitted by God for a limited time after which there will be relief for the faithful,

8 a. On Belshazzar cf. 5:1+.

b. The vision of ch. 7, which this elaborates more explicitly.

c. One of the royal residences of the Achmenid dynasty. The river Ulai flows through Susa. 'gate' versions.

d. On the symbolism of rams and he-goats, cf. Ezk 34:17f and Zc 10:3.

e. The taller horn represents the power of the Persians triumphing over the power of the Medes, succeeding and absorbing it, v. 20.

f. Alexander. Cf. v. 21 and 2:40; 7:7; 11:3.

g. Translation conji.

h. Death of Alexander and division of his empire: of his heirs only the Seleucids are considered here as in 7:7; but in this passage, unlike 7:7, only Antiochus Epiphanes is mentioned (v. 9), not his predecessors.

i. Palestine.

j. The stars symbolise the people of God, 12:3. (And cf. Mt 13:43).

k. God himself.

l. The Hebr. is obscure and the translation approximate. It may mean either that 'iniquity' (i.e. the 'abomination of desolation') has been substituted for the sacrifice in the Temple, or else that the persecutor has decided that sacrifice is henceforth to be reckoned a crime.

m. Probably an angel, cf. 4:10.

n. Lit. 'to a certain one who spoke'. The questions which the seer asks himself are presented as part of a mysterious dialogue; for this device see also Zc 1:8-17.

o. LXX adds 'abolished'.

p. Lit. 'said to him': 'him' versions; 'me' Hebr.

q. That is to say, either 2300 days, or 1150 days. If the expression refers to the two daily sacrifices suspended throughout the persecution, as may be the case, the period would be not 2300 days but 1150. But either figure is remote from the three and a half years (1260 days) of 7:25 and the meaning remains obscure.

r. The phrase has a messianic sense above and beyond the immediate historical one.

s. The text reads 'between', meaning perhaps between the leaves of the Ulai gate (v. 2).

He touched me, however, and raised me to my feet. •‘Come,’ he said ‘I will 19
 Am 5:18 + tell you what is going to happen when the wrath’ comes to an end; this concerns the appointed End. •As for the ram that you saw, its two horns are the 20 21:40; 11:2 + kings of Media and of Persia. •The hairy he-goat is the king of Javan, the large 21 horn between its eyes is the first king. •The horn that snapped and the four 22 horns that sprouted in its place are four kingdoms rising from his nation but not having his power.

‘And at the end of their reign, when the measure of their sins is full,^u 23 a king will arise, a proud-faced, ingenious-minded man.

His power will gather strength—but not through power of his own^v— 24
 he will plot^w incredible schemes,

he will succeed in what he undertakes,

he will destroy powerful men and the people of the saints.

Such will be his resourcefulness of mind 25
 that all his treacherous activities will succeed.

He will grow arrogant of heart,

take many unawares and destroy them.

He will challenge the power of the Prince of princes

but, no hand intervening,^x shall himself be broken.

This explanation of the vision of the mornings and the evenings is true, 26
 but you must keep the vision secret, for there are still many days to go.’^y

At this I, Daniel, lost consciousness; I was ill for several days. Then I got 27 up to discharge my duties in the king’s service, keeping the vision a secret, and not understanding what it meant.

THE PROPHECY OF THE SEVENTY WEEKS

Daniel’s prayer

9 It was the first year of Darius son of Ahasuerus, who was of Median stock 1 and ruled the kingdom of Chaldaea.^a •In the first year of his reign I, Daniel, 2 was perusing the scriptures, counting over the number of years—as revealed by Yahweh to the prophet Jeremiah—that were to pass before the successive 3 devastations of Jerusalem would come to an end, namely seventy years. •I turned 3 my face to the Lord God^b begging for time to pray and to plead with fasting, 4 sackcloth and ashes. •I pleaded with Yahweh my God and made this confession:^c 4 ‘O Lord, God great and to be feared, you keep the covenant and have kind- 5
 ness for those who love you and keep your commandments: •we have sinned, 5
 we have done wrong, we have acted wickedly, we have betrayed your 6 commandments and your ordinances and turned away from them. •We have not 6 listened to your servants the prophets, who spoke in your name to our kings, 7 our princes, our ancestors, and to all the people of the land. •Integrity, Lord, is 7
 yours; ours the look of shame we wear today, we, the people of Judah, the 8 citizens of Jerusalem, the whole of Israel, near and far away, in every country 9 to which you have dispersed us because of the treason we have committed 9 against you. •To us, Yahweh, the look of shame belongs, to our kings, our 8 princes, our ancestors, because we have sinned against you. •To the Lord our God 9 mercy and pardon belong, because we have betrayed him, •and have not listened 10 to the voice of Yahweh our God nor followed the laws he has given us through his 11 servants the prophets. •The whole of Israel has flouted your Law and turned 11 away, unwilling to listen to your voice; and the curse and imprecation written 12 in the Law of Moses, the servant of God, have come pouring down on 12 us—because we have sinned against him. •He has carried out the threats which he made against us and against the princes who governed us^d—that he

- would bring so great a disaster down on us that the fate of Jerusalem would find no parallel in the whole of the world. •And now all this disaster has happened to us, just as it is written in the Law of Moses; even so, we have not tried to appease Yahweh our God by renouncing our crimes and being guided by your truth. •Yahweh has watched^e for the right moment to bring disaster on us, since Yahweh our God is just in all his dealings with us, and we have not listened to his voice. •And now, Lord our God, who by your mighty hand brought us out of the land of Egypt—the renown you won then endures to this day—we have sinned, we have done wrong. •Lord, by all your acts of justice^f turn away your anger and your fury from Jerusalem, your own city, your holy mountain, for as a result of our sins and the crimes of our ancestors, Jerusalem and your own people have become a byword among all around us. •And now, our God, listen to the prayer and pleading of your servant.^g For your own sake,^h Lord, let your face smile again on your desolate sanctuary. •Listen my God, listen to us; open your eyes and look on our plight and on the city that bears your name. We are not relying on our own good works but on your great mercy, to commend our humble plea to you. •Listen, Lord! Lord, forgive! Hear, Lord, and act! For your own sake, my God, do not delay, because they bear your name, this is your city, this is your people.’

l. As in the adjacent chapters the following prophecy refers to the persecution under Antiochus Epiphanes, but here the style is allusive and enigmatic (no proper names are mentioned, and the figures given are conventional and approximate): this suggests that the text has a reference beyond the immediate historical one. The prophecy, like those of the messianic kingdom, 2:28+; 7:13+, will be fully realised in the days of Christ and the Church. The era of plenty described in v. 24 far exceeds a mere return to peaceful conditions. But the detail in vv. 25-27, describing antecedent periods, remains obscure.

m. ‘decreed’ Hebr.; ‘cut short’ Theod. and Vulg. The ‘weeks’ are ‘weeks of years’; the number 70 implies completion. The period is computed from the date of the revelation made to Jeremiah, cf. v. 25, to the rebuilding of Jerusalem and the return of the exiles, an event which 2 Ch 36:22-23 (=Ezr 1:1-2) sees as the realisation of Jeremiah’s prophecy and dates 538 (the liberating decree of Cyrus).

THE GREAT VISION

THE TIME OF WRATH

The vision of the man dressed in linen

10 In the third^a year of Cyrus king of Persia a revelation was made to Daniel ¹ known as Belteshazzar, a true revelation of a great conflict.^b He grasped ^{9:23} the meaning of the revelation; what it meant was disclosed to him in a vision.

^{9:3} At that time, I, Daniel, was doing a three-week penance; •I ate no rich ² food, touched no meat or wine, and did not anoint myself, until these three weeks were over. •On the twenty-fourth day of the first month, as I stood on ⁴ the bank of that great river, the Tigris, •I raised my eyes to look about me, and ⁵
this is what I saw:

A man dressed in linen, with a girdle of pure gold round his waist;

his body was like beryl,

his face shone like lightning,

his eyes were like fiery torches,

his arms and his legs had the gleam of burnished bronze,

the sound of his voice was like the noise of a crowd.

I, Daniel, alone saw the apparition; the men who were with me did not see ⁷
the apparition, but so great a trembling overtook them that they fled to hide.
I was left alone, gazing on this great apparition; I was powerless, my appearance ⁸ altered out of all recognition, what strength I had deserted me.

The apparition of the angel

I heard him speak, and at the sound of his voice I fell unconscious to the ⁹ ground. •I felt a hand touching me, setting my knees and my hands trembling. ¹⁰

n. 'To seal' means sometimes 'to put an end to', sometimes 'to guarantee'; here it has the comprehensive sense of 'fulfilling'.

o. Either the altar (or Temple) or the high priest, cf. 1 Ch 23:13: the re-establishment of the priesthood is connected with the restoration of altar and Temple: in the prophetic perspective no distinction is made.

p. Or 'Prince Messiah', cf. Ex 30:22+; 1 S 9:26+; Is 45:1. Some of the earliest Fathers of the Church saw in this 'anointed Prince' a prophecy of Jesus, and in v. 26 an allusion to the crucifixion, but there was not universal agreement; some place the last week at the end of time.

q. This is the period of reconstruction in the Persian period.

r. Theod., perhaps rightly, identifies this anointed one with the high priest Onias III, cf. 2 M 4:30-38, deposed in about 175 and assassinated by the supporters of Antiochus Epiphanes; so also the prince of the covenant in 11:22.

s. 'and .. will not be for him' text obscure; 'and there is no guilt in him' Theod.; 'and the people who denied him will be no more' Vulg., following the commentary of St Jerome.

t. I.e. by God, cf. 8:25+.

u. 11:30-32 may help to explain this passage, the 'covenant' meaning the desertion of the Jewish renegades to the tyrant Antiochus who had induced them to renounce the true covenant. Cf. 1 M 1:21,43, 52; 2 M 4:10f.

v. The parallel passages show that this is the work of the blasphemers: it does not mean, therefore, the substitution of the new covenant sacrifice for the old.

w. 'of the Temple' added.

x. The phrase (shiqqisim meshomem) evokes firstly the idols or 'baals' of antiquity, the worship of which by Israel was condemned by the prophets (shiqqis, 'abomination' being a contemptuous designation of Baal, and shomem a malicious pun on the title baal shamen—'king of the heavens'—used of their gods by the Phoenicians); secondly, Zeus Olympios to whom the Temple of Jerusalem was dedicated by the persecutor, cf. 2 M 6:2

10 a. 'third' Hebr.; 'first' Greek.

b. Lit. a true word 'and a great army'. The reference is apparently to the war waged by the angels, cf. vv. 12-21.

c. The angel of Yahweh who confronts Satan in Zc 3:1-2 is called Michael ('Who-is-like-God?') in Jude 9, where he leaves Satan's condemnation to God. The same conflict is described in Rv 12:7-12. Michael is the guardian angel of the people of God (v. 21 and 12:1), cf. Ex 23:20+. The prince of Persia is apparently one of the guardian angels of the nations. This championing of opposed sides by different angels signifies that the fate of nations is a secret awaiting God's revelation and hidden from the angels themselves.

d. 'I have left him' Greek; 'I was left' Hebr., but the verb form is unusual.

e. The order of the following verses is doubtful. The text is corrected. In 11:1a we omit 'And as for me, in the first year of Darius the Mede' Hebr.

11 a. Evidently three Persian kings, 'Darius the Mede' being excluded. The 'fourth' is less probably the last of the Achmenids (Darius III Codomannus, 336-331, defeated by Alexander), more probably Xerxes the Great, 486-465, whose expedition against Greece ('Javan') took place in 480.

- d. Seleucus I Nicator (301-281) who supported Ptolemy I and with him defeated Antigonus (the battle of Gaza, 312, from which dates the Seleucid era), and subsequently founded his own huge Asiatic empire.
- e. Lit. 'than his' corr.
- f. Antiochus II Theos (261-246) having made an alliance with Ptolemy II Philadelphos (285-247) married Ptolemy's daughter Berenice, in about 252. Laodice (wife and half-sister of Antiochus) was then divorced, but being later taken back, poisoned her husband; she poisoned Berenice also, with the latter's son by Ptolemy, and her attendants. Seleucus II Callinicus (246-226), Laodice's son, was soon attacked by Ptolemy III Euergetes (247-221) who returned to Egypt loaded with booty but did not press his victory home. Reference is made in v. 9 to a counter-offensive by Seleucus for which there is little evidence in historical sources.

- j. The first explicit mention of 'Egypt' in the Hebr., hitherto called 'the South'; for 'the South' LXX reads 'Egypt' throughout.
- k. The king of the North.
- l. Seleucus III Ceraunus (227-223) and Antiochus III the Great (223-187).
- m. The following verses recount the triumphs of Antiochus the Great. In 220 he undertook the conquest of Palestine; Ptolemy IV Philopator (221-203) immediately raised an army of mercenaries and Egyptian troops and marched to the frontier where he inflicted heavy losses on Antiochus (the battle of Raphia, v. 11), but the victory was not pressed home, v. 12, and for 8 years Antiochus waged unrelenting war for the recovery of his Asiatic empire. He mounted an attack in force, v. 13, when Ptolemy V Epiphanes (205-181) came to the throne; this time he was reinforced by an alliance with Philip V of Macedon and by internal revolt in Egypt. The prolonged siege of Gaza is referred to in v. 15. An Egyptian counter-offensive in Judaea only slightly delayed the entry of Antiochus into Jerusalem, vv. 15-16.
- n. Lit. 'overthrow her (or 'it')'; the pronoun is feminine here; so also 'she (it) will not last nor will she (it) be to his advantage'; but it is impossible to understand this as referring to Cleopatra: the concluding words of this obscure verse must allude to the renewed outbreak of hostilities owing to the well founded mistrust on the Egyptian side.
- o. Lit. 'the daughter of women'. Antiochus, foreseeing intervention from Rome, decided on an alliance with Egypt, becoming betrothed to Cleopatra, Ptolemy's daughter: the marriage took place at Raphia in 194.
- p. The towns of the seaboard: taking advantage of the Egyptian treaty, Antiochus made his way back to Asia Minor, and defying Roman threats he occupied Greek and Egyptian towns. But in 190 he suffered an overwhelming defeat at the hands of the consul Lucius Cornelius Scipio (the 'magistrate' of v. 18) at Magnesia.
- q. To pay the huge tribute imposed on him, Antiochus undertook an expedition to Elymais to plunder one of the temples of Bel; he was murdered there in 187.
- r. Seleucus IV Philopator (187-175), son of Antiochus the Great; he commissioned Heliodorus, one of his ministers, to confiscate the treasures of the Jerusalem Temple: the supernatural vision which thwarted this plan is described in 2 M 3.

- w. Doubtless the supporters of Antiochus.
- x. The first campaign of Antiochus against Ptolemy VI Philometor of Egypt (son of his sister Cleopatra); Ptolemy, misled by his advisers, was finally made captive by Antiochus who simulated friendship but plundered Egypt. It was on his way home that Antiochus savagely ill-treated the Jews, v. 28.
- y. The second Egyptian campaign of Antiochus was to end in ignominy. The Roman consul Gaius Popilius Laenas arrived at Alexandria and informed Antiochus of the Senate's order to withdraw.
- z. The Vulg. translates 'Romans', and this is certainly the meaning here. Originally the term meant Cyprus, but the Bible uses it also of the regions bordering the Mediterranean, particularly in the West. Cf. Gn 10:4; Nb 24:24; Is 23:1,12; Jr 2:10; Ezk 27:6 (Vulg. 'Italia').

- dd. In the Hebr. there is a play on the words 'be brought down' (lit. 'stumble', ksl) and 'learned' (qskl); so also in v. 35.
- ee. Possibly referring to the early successes of Judas Maccabaeus in rallying those who remained staunch to Judaism.
- ff. Like Alexander, 8:4 and 11:3, and Antiochus the Great, 11:16, but unlike the Achmenids who in their inscriptions consistently ascribe their success to the will of Ahura Mazda. Antiochus in his old age had himself represented on his coins with the features of Zeus Olympios.

THE TIME OF THE END

The end of the persecutor

•When the time comes for the End, the king of the South will try conclu- 40 sions with him; but the king of the North will come storming down on him with chariots, cavalry, and a large fleet. He will invade countries, overrun them and drive on. •He will invade the Land of Splendour, and many will 41 fall; but Edom, Moab, and what remain^{kk} of the sons of Ammon will escape him.

•He will reach out to attack countries: the land of Egypt will not escape him. 42 The gold and silver treasures and all the valuables of Egypt will lie in his power. 43 Libyans and Cushites^{ll} will be at his feet:^{mm} •but reports coming from the East 44 and the North will worry him, and in great fury he will set out to bring ruin and complete destruction to many. •He will pitch the tents of his royal headquarters 45 between the sea and the mountains of the Holy Splendour. Yet he will come to his endⁿⁿ—there will be no help for him.

SUSANNA AND THE JUDGEMENT OF DANIEL^a

- ¹ 13 In Babylon there lived a man named Joakim. •He had married Susanna daughter of Hilkiah, a woman of great beauty; and she was God-fearing, because her parents were worthy people and had instructed their daughter in the Law of Moses. •Joakim was a very rich man, and had a garden attached to his house; the Jews would often visit him since he was held in greater respect than any other man. •Two elderly men had been selected from the people that year to act as judges. Of such the Lord said, 'Wickedness has come to Babylon through the elders and judges posing as guides to the people'.^b •These men were often at Joakim's house, and all who were engaged in litigation used to come to them. •At midday, when everyone had gone, Susanna used to take a walk in her husband's garden. •The two elders, who used to watch her every day as she came in to take her walk, gradually began to desire her. •They threw reason aside, making no effort to turn their eyes to heaven, and forgetting its demands of virtue. •Both were inflamed by the same passion, but they hid their desire from each other, •for they were ashamed to admit the longing to sleep with her, •but they still contrived to see her every day. •One day, having parted with the words, 'Let us go home, it is time for the midday meal', they went off in different directions, •only to retrace their steps and find themselves face to face again. Obligated then to explain, they admitted their desire and agreed to look for an opportunity of surprising her alone. •So they waited for a favourable moment; and one day Susanna came as usual, accompanied only by two young maidservants. The day was hot and she wanted to bathe in the garden. •There was no one about except the two elders, spying on her from their hiding place. She said to the servants, 'Bring me some oil and balsam and shut the garden door while I bathe'. •They did as they were told, shutting the garden door and going back to the house by a side entrance to fetch what she had asked for; they knew nothing about the elders, who were hiding.
- Hardly were the servants gone than the two elders were there after her. 'Look,' they said 'the garden door is shut, no one can see us. We want to have you, so give in and let us! •Refuse, and we will both give evidence that a young man was with you and that was why you sent your maids away.' •Susanna sighed. 'I am trapped,' she said 'whatever I do. If I agree, that means my death; if I resist, I cannot get away from you. •But I prefer to fall innocent into your power than to sin in the eyes of the Lord.' •Then she cried out as loud as she could. The two elders began shouting too, putting the blame on her, •and one of them ran to open the garden door. •The household, hearing the shouting 26 in the garden, rushed out by the side entrance to see what was happening; •once 27 the elders had told their story the servants were thoroughly taken aback, since nothing of this sort had ever been said of Susanna.

Next day a meeting was held at the house of her husband Joakim. The two 28 elders arrived, in their vindictiveness determined to have her put to death. •They 29 addressed the company: 'Summon Susanna daughter of Hilkiah and wife of Joakim'. She was sent for, •and came accompanied by her parents, her children 30 and all her relations. •Susanna was very graceful and beautiful to look at; •she 31 was veiled, so the wretches made her unveil in order to feast their eyes on her 32 beauty. •All her own people were weeping, and so were all the others who saw 33
her. •The two elders stood up, with all the people round them, and laid their 34 hands on the woman's head. •Tearfully she turned her eyes to heaven, her 35 heart confident in God. •The elders then spoke. 'While we were walking by 36 ourselves in the garden, this woman arrived with two servants. She shut the 37 garden door and then dismissed the servants. •A young man who had been 38 hiding went over to her and they lay down together. •From the end of the 39 garden where we were, we saw this crime taking place and hurried towards 40 them. •Though we saw them together we were unable to catch the man: he 41 was too strong for us; he opened the door and took to his heels. •We did, 42 however, catch this woman and ask her who the young man was. •She refused 43 to tell us. That is our evidence.'

Since they were elders of the people, and judges, the assembly took their 44 word: Susanna was condemned to death. •She cried out as loud as she could, 45
'Eternal God, you know all secrets and everything before it happens; •you 46 know that they have given false evidence against me. And now have I to die, 47 innocent as I am of everything their malice has invented against me?' 48

The Lord heard her cry •and, as she was being led away to die, he roused 49
the holy spirit residing in a young boy named Daniel •who began to shout, 50
'I am innocent of this woman's death!' •At which all the people turned to him and 51 asked, 'What do you mean by these words?' •Standing in the middle of the 52 crowd he replied, 'Are you so stupid, sons of Israel, as to condemn a daughter 53 of Israel unheard, and without troubling to find out the truth? •Go back to 54 the scene of the trial: these men have given false evidence against her.'

All the people hurried back, and the elders said to Daniel, 'Come and sit 55 with us and tell us what you mean, since God has given you the gifts that elders 56 have'. •Daniel said, 'Keep the men well apart from each other for I want to 57 question them'. •When the men had been separated, Daniel had one of them 58 brought to him. 'You have grown old in wickedness,' he said 'and now the 59 sins of your earlier days have overtaken you, •you with your unjust judgements, 60 your condemnation of the innocent, your acquittal of guilty men, when the Lord 61 has said, "You must not put the innocent and the just to death". •Now then, 62 since you saw her so clearly, tell me what tree you saw them lying under?' 63
He replied, 'Under a mastic tree'.^a •Daniel said, 'True enough! Your lie recoils 64 on your own head: the angel of God has already received your sentence from 65 him and will slash you in half.' •He dismissed the man, ordered the other to be 66 brought and said to him, 'Spawn of Canaan, not of Judah, beauty has seduced 67 you, lust has led your heart astray! •This is how you have been behaving with 68
the daughters of Israel and they were too frightened to resist; but here is a 69 daughter of Judah who could not stomach your wickedness! •Now then, tell 70

Then the whole assembly shouted, blessing God, the saviour of those who 74 trust in him. •And they turned on the two elders whom Daniel had convicted 75

BEL AND THE DRAGON^a

Daniel and the priests of Bel

- 1 14 ^bWhen King Astyages joined his ancestors, Cyrus of Persia succeeded him.
 2 Daniel was very close to the king who thought more of him than of any 3 other^c of his friends. • Now in Babylon there was an idol called Bel,^d to which 4 twelve bushels of the finest flour, forty sheep and six measures of wine were 5 offered every day. • The king took part in this cult and used to go and worship
 6 the idol every day. Daniel, however, worshipped his own God. • 'Why do you
 7 not worship Bel?' the king asked Daniel. 'I do not worship idols made by the 8 hands of men,' Daniel replied 'I worship the living God who made heaven and 9 earth and who has power over all living creatures.' • 'You believe, then,'
 10 said the king 'that Bel is not a living god? Can you not see how much he eats 11 and drinks every day?' • Daniel laughed. 'My king,' he said 'do not be taken in;
 12 he is clay inside, and bronze outside, and has never eaten or drunk anything.'
 13 This made the king angry; he summoned his priests, 'Tell me who eats all 14 this food,' he said 'or die. Prove to me that Bel really eats it, and I will have 15 Daniel put to death for blaspheming him.' • Daniel said to the king, 'Let it be as 16 you say'.^e

- 17 There were seventy of these priests, to say nothing of their wives and 18 children. • The king went to the temple of Bel, taking Daniel with him.^f • The 19 priests of Bel said to him, 'We are now withdrawing, as you can see;
 20 but we will leave you, O king, to set out food and prepare the wine and leave it
 21 there. Then you can shut the door and seal it with your own seal. If, when you 22 return in the morning, you do not find that everything has been eaten by Bel, 23 then let us be put to death; if not, then Daniel, that slanderer!' • They were 24 thinking—hence their confidence—of a secret entrance which they had made 25 under the table, by which they came in daily and took the offerings away.
 26 When the priests had gone and the king had set out the food for Bel, • Daniel 27 made his servants bring ashes and spread them all over the temple floor, with no 28 other witness than the king. Then they left the building, shut the door and,
 29 sealing it with the king's seal, went away. • That night, as usual, the priests 30 came with their wives and children; they ate and drank everything.

- 31 The king was up very early next morning; so was Daniel. • 'Daniel,' said
 32 the king 'are the seals intact?' 'They are intact, O king' he replied. • The king 33 then opened the door and taking one look at the table he exclaimed, 'You are 34 great, O Bel! There is no deception in you!' • But Daniel laughed. And restraining 35 the king from going further in, he said, 'Look at the floor and examine these

Daniel kills the dragon

There was a big dragon in Babylon, and this was worshipped too.^a •The 23 king said to Daniel, 'You are not going to tell me that this is no more than 24 bronze? Look, it is alive; it eats and drinks; you cannot deny that this is a living god; worship it, then.' •Daniel replied, 'I worship the Lord my God; 25 he is the living God. With your permission, O king, without using either sword or club I will kill this serpent.' •'You have my permission' said the king. 26
Whereupon Daniel took some pitch, some fat and some hair and boiled them 27 up together, rolled the mixture into balls and fed them to the dragon; the dragon swallowed them and burst. Daniel said, 'Now look at the sort of thing 28 you worship!' •The Babylonians were furious when they heard about this and began intriguing against the king. 'The king has turned Jew,' they said 'he has 29 allowed Bel to be overthrown, and the dragon to be killed, and he has put the priests to death.' •So they went to the king and said, 'Hand Daniel over to 30 us or else we will kill you, and your family'. •They pressed him so hard that the king found himself forced to hand Daniel over to them.

Daniel in the lion pit^b

They threw Daniel into the lion pit, and there he stayed for six days. •In 31
the pit were seven lions, which were given two human bodies and two sheep 32 every day; but for this period they were not given anything, to make sure they would eat Daniel.

Now the prophet Habakkuk was in Judaea: he had been making a stew, 33 and breaking up bread small to put in a basket. He was on his way to the fields, taking this to the harvesters, •when the angel of the Lord spoke to him, 'Take 34
the meal you are carrying to Babylon and give it to Daniel in the lion pit'.
'Lord,' replied Habakkuk 'I have not even seen Babylon, and know nothing 35 about this pit.' •The angel of the Lord seized his head and carried him off by the 36 hair to Babylon where, with a great thrust of his spirit, he set Habakkuk down on the edge of the pit. •'Daniel, Daniel,' Habakkuk shouted 'take the meal 37 that God has sent you.' •And Daniel said, 'You have kept me in mind, O God; 38 you have not deserted those who love you'. •Rising to his feet he ate the meal, 39 while the angel of God lost no time in returning Habakkuk to his own country.

On the seventh day the king came to lament over Daniel; on reaching the 40 pit he looked inside, and there was Daniel, quite unperturbed. •'You are great, 41
O Lord, God of Daniel,' he exclaimed 'there is no god but you!' •Then he 42 released Daniel from the pit and had the plotters of Daniel's ruin thrown in instead, where they were instantly eaten before his eyes.

14 g. Nothing is known of a dragon-god in Babylon. This story was familiar to early Jewish writers who refer to it when commenting on Jr 51:44.

h. A parallel narrative to that of ch. 6. The means of Habakkuk's transportation may have been suggested by Ezk 8:3.

Hosea's marriage: his three children

1 a. More accurately, it was under the last kings of Israel that Hosea chiefly exercised his prophetic ministry: Menahem (743-738), Pekahiah (738-737), Pekah (737-732), Hoshea (732-724).

b. Subsequent prophets performed many symbolic gestures, cf. Jr 18:1+, but Hosea's whole life with its heartbreaking experiences was a symbol, ch. 1-3. He loved, and still loves, a wife who has betrayed him; Yahweh likewise still loves faithless Israel and, when he has made trial of her repentance, will cherish her again. Hosea's conception of a marriage of Yahweh with his people dating from the covenant of Sinai was to become familiar in the prophetic tradition. The prophets denounce idolatry as 'prostitution' or 'adultery' and compare the relationship between Israel and God with the fluctuations of married life. Cf. also Dt 4:24+. Though Isaiah alludes only briefly to this theme (Is 1:21-26), Jeremiah reverts to it several times (Jr 2:2; 3:1, 6-12); but it is Ezekiel who, in two great allegories, Ezk 16 and 23, develops the theme most fully. In the second part of Is, the restoration of Israel is described as the reconciliation of a wife who has been unfaithful, Is 50:1; 54:6-7, cf. Is 62:4-5. It is possible, also, that this wedded love of God for his people is the subject of Sg and of Ps 45. In the N.T., Jesus speaks of the messianic age as a time of wedding, Mt 22:1-14; 25:1-13, and for St Paul Christian marriage is a symbol of Christ's union with his Church, Ep 5:25-33, cf. 1 Co 6:15-17; 2 Co 11:2. Thus the prophetic image of earlier days is sanctioned and applied to the new Israel of God. Although ch. 1-3 form a clearly defined unity, they are composed of heterogeneous elements: a biographical narrative (Hosea's marriage and the birth of his three children), 1:2-9; a discourse by Yahweh (God's treatment of faithless Israel), 2:4-25; an autobiographical fragment (reconciliation with the unfaithful wife, explanation of this symbolic act), 3:1-5. It is possible that 2:1-3, which read as a conclusion to this section, should not be attributed to Hosea.

c. Lit. 'a wife of prostitution', cf. 4:12; 5:4; either a woman who was already known to be a prostitute or, more probably, one who later became one.

d. Lit. 'children of prostitution'. Not that the children are to be born of an adulterous union but that they take after their unfaithful mother, cf. Ezk 16:44; Sl 41:5.

e. The names of Hosea's children are prophetic, cf. Is 1:26+.

f. Jezreel (ylzreel, 'God sows', cf. 2:24-25) was one of the residences of the kings of Israel; it was here that Jehu massacred the descendants of Omri.

g. The dynasty of Jehu ended with the assassination of Zechariah in 743.

h. The Valley of Jezreel, or of Megiddo, has always been one of the great battlefields of Palestine, Jg 4:12-16; 2 K 23:29-30, etc.

j. Or 'instead I will hate her bitterly'; or possibly 'I will punish her severely'.

k. 'the House' Hebr.; 'the sons' Greek.

l. The meaning of the symbolic name Lo-Ammi. The three children are named in ascending order of the severity of the punishment: with the third, God breaks with Israel entirely.

m. 'I am not your God' some MSS and several of the Fathers; 'I will not be (or: I am not) yours' Hebr. 'I will be their God and they shall be my people' was the formula expressing the covenant between God and his faithful, cf. Jr 31:31+. We read 2:1-3 after 3:5.

n. a. Yahweh speaks as a slighted lover, not rejecting his unfaithful beloved but seeking to bring her back by repeated correction; in this he succeeds; then, having tested her repentance, he welcomes her with all the fervour of his first love and showers gifts on her.

b. By 'whoring' and 'adultery' here we should probably understand the amulets, tattooing and other distinctive marks of a prostitute, cf. Pr 7:10; Gn 38:15.

c. A punishment for shameless women, Ezk 16:37-39; Is 47:2-3; Jr 13:22; Na 3:5; Rv 17:16.

d. Transference of the symbol from the wife to the country. The wealth of Canaan which had been an occasion of sin for Israel, 10:1; 13:6, is to be removed, 4:3; 5:7; 9:6; 13:15.

e. Lit. 'go after, pursue' in the sense of being devoted to; the expression is taken from the vocabulary of love.

f. The Baals, Canaanite gods of fertility to whom the Israelites offered the produce of their soil, which they believed came as much from the gods of Canaan as from Yahweh.

g. We read vv. 8-9 after v. 15.

h. Vv. 13 and 14 are here interchanged.

i. 'her' Greek and Syr.; 'thy' Hebr.

j. Lit. 'I will go, I will return'.

k. Hosea, like Amos before him (Am 5:25), thinks of Israel's journey through the desert as a time of spiritual idyll (and cf. 12:10): Israel was then childlike (Ho 11:1-4), knowing nothing of pagan gods, loyal to Yahweh whose presence was manifest in the cloud, Ho 2:16-17; Jr 2:2-3. On the Exodus theme in the Prophets, cf. Is 40:3+.

l. 'I will make' corr.; 'from there' Hebr. Achor is one of the gorges near Jericho leading to the uplands of the interior; the name means 'misfortune', cf. Jos 7:24-26.

m. 'she will' Greek; 'thou wilt' Hebr. So also in the following line.

n. The name baal ('master') was also used of husbands. It had been from ancient times an element in certain proper names, cf. 1 S 14:49+; 2 S 2:8, etc.; 1 Ch 8:33; 9:39,40, without any idolatrous significance Yahweh being the 'master' to whom the bearer of the name was thus dedicated. Later, however, the association of the word with the Canaanite divinities (cf. Jg 2:1+) made its use disreputable; hence Hosea forbids it, v. 19.

o. Or 'their names shall be remembered no more'. p. Justice and holiness will characterise the messianic age, vv. 21-22, and God will again dwell among his people, lavishing his gifts, cf. Lv 26:3-13; Dt 28:1-14. The sky will give rain, the earth will yield abundant harvests, Am 9:13; Ho 2:23-24; 14:8-9; Jr 31:12-14; Ezk 34:26-27,29; 36:29-30; Is 30:23-26; 49:10; Jl 2:19, 22-24; 4:18; Zc 8:12. The crops will be safe from marauders, Am 9:15; Is 65:21-23, cf. Dt 28:30-33, since there will be no more invasion, Mi 5:4; Is 32:17-18; Jl 2:20; Jr 46:27; Is 4:5-6, cf. also 25:4-5. The wild animals will not threaten: God will make a treaty with them, Ho 2:20; Ezk 34:25,28. All the nations, under the rule of the Messiah-King, Is 9:5-6; Zc 9:10, will enjoy peace, Is 2:4 = Mi 4:3; cf. Is 11:6-8+; 65:25. Death itself will be no more, Is 25:7-8; sorrow will give place to joy, Jr 31:13; Is 65:18-19; Ba 4:23,29, cf. Rv 21:4.

q. God takes back his unfaithful wife with the fervour of first love, and showers her (cf. Gn 24:53; 34:12) with spiritual gifts.

r. The primary meaning of this word (hesed) is that of a bond, or contract. When used of human relationships it comes to mean friendship, union, loyalty, especially when these are the outcome of a treaty. Used of God, the term means his faithfulness to his covenant and the kindness he therefore shows his chosen people (in Ex 34:6). Used by Hosea in the context of married love, the word assumes and from then on retains a still warmer significance: it means the tender love God has for his people, Ps 136; Jr 31:3, etc., and the benefits deriving from it, Ex 20:6; Dt 5:10; 2 S 22:51; Jr 32:18; Ps 18:50. But this divine

For the sons of Israel will be kept for many days without a king, without a leader, without sacrifice or sacred stone, without ephod or teraphim. •After- wards the sons of Israel will come back; ^f they will seek Yahweh their God and David their king; ^g they will come trembling to Yahweh, come for his good things ^h in those days to come.	1 2 3 4 5

hesed calls for corresponding hesed in man (Ho 6:6), consisting of self-giving, loving trust, abandonment, deep affection, 'piety', a love (in short) which is a joyful submission to the will of God and an active charity to fellow men, Ho 4:2; 6:6. This ideal, expressed in many of the Psalms, will later be that of the Hasidim, or 'Hasidacans', cf. 1 M 2:42+.

s. In Hosea 'knowledge of Yahweh' and hesed go together 2:21-22; 4:2; 6:6; this 'knowledge' is therefore not merely intellectual. God 'makes himself known' to man when he engages himself to him by covenant and shows his love (hesed) for him by the benefits he confers; similarly, man 'knows God' when he loyally observes God's covenant, shows gratitude for God's gifts, and returns love for love. Cf. Jb 21:14; Pr 2:5; Is 11:2; 58:2. In the wisdom literature 'knowledge' and 'wisdom' are practically synonymous.

t. Hebr. inserts 'I shall answer', absent from Greek and Syr.

u. Lit. 'I shall answer the heavens, they will answer the earth' etc. The name Jezreel no longer recalls the crimes of earlier days, 1:4+, but now justifies its etymology, 'God sows', cf. v. 25, and stands for an Israel restored and prosperous. This Jezreel pleads, as it were, with the produce of the soil, which plea is passed to earth and sky and finally to God who grants it.

v. 'will sow him' corr.; 'will sow her for myself' Hebr.

w. God so loves his people that he will give the lie to the ominous names, 'Unloved' and 'No-People-of-Mine'; the disaster they prophesied will come to an end, and the names with it; the names are replaced by their opposites, cf. 2:1,3.

3 a. 'loved by her husband' Hebr.; 'who loves evil' Greek. The 'woman', it seems, is Gomer herself: Hosea used to love her and evidently still does, though she has betrayed him once and is betraying him now. The prophet's generosity is a symbol of God's persistent love for his faithless people.

b. Or 'to other gods who love raisin cakes', cf. Dn 14:5-8.

c. Hosea buys Gomer back either from her present owner or from a pagan shrine where perhaps she was a sacred prostitute.

d. The total price is approximately that of a slave's ransom, Ex 21:32; Lv 27:4.

e. A period of trial, as v. 4 explains, before the covenant is renewed between Yahweh and Israel,

cf. 2:8,9,16.

f. Cf. 2:9; 6:1; 14:2.

g. Cf. Jr 30:9; Ezk 34:23. The Northern and Southern Kingdoms will therefore be reunited, 2:2. The end of v. 5 is perhaps not by Hosea.

h. Probably the produce of the soil, 2:24; 14:6-8; Is 1:19; Jr 31:12-14.

2 x. Or 'and they will return from the country (of their exile)'.

y. New symbolic names, contrary to the first: Ammi ('People-of-Mine'), Ruhamah ('Loved'), 'to your beloved brother', 'to your sister' Greek; 'to your brothers', 'to your sisters' Hebr.

4 a. The passage speaks of a great drought, cf. Am 1:2; 4:7; 7:4; Jl 1:16-20; 2:3. The punishment for man's sins is shared by the whole creation, Gn 3:17-18; Jr 4:23-28; 9:9; 12:4; 14:2-6; Hg 1:6-11; 2:16-17; Zp 1:3; Is 24:4-7, etc., so also is man's redemption, Is 11:6+; Jl 4:18, cf. Rm 8:19-22+.

b. Line corr.; Hebr. 'Thy people is like those who denounce the priest'. The priesthood as a whole is here attacked for ignorance, neglect, greed and even, 6:9, violence. For other attacks, cf. Jr 2:8; 6:13; Mi 3:11; Zp 3:4, and especially Mi 1:6-2:9.

c. Text corr.

d. On the unworthy prophets, cf. Jr 23:13-32; Mi 3:5,11, etc.

e. Line corr.; Hebr. 'I shall be the ruin of your mother'.

f. Knowledge of the Law in which the priests should have instructed the people, Dt 33:10; Mi 2:5-8.

g. 'they have bartered their glory (i.e. Yahweh) for shame (i.e. the Baals)' Targ. and Syr.; 'I will change their glory into shame' Hebr.

h. The priest's share in the sacrifice for sin was considerable, Lv 6:19-22, as it was in the sacrifice of reparation, Lv 7:7; in this way the people's sins were to his advantage, cf. 1 S 2:12-17.

i. To 'play the whore' is to be unfaithful to Yahweh, as in 2:14; 4:18; 9:1, with a possible allusion to sacred prostitution.

j. An isolated proverb, possibly taken out of its original context.

k. The 'block of wood' is apparently a contemptuous term for an asherah or sacred pole, Ex 34:13+. The 'rod' is probably a diviner's wand.

1:2; 2:6

for a prostituting spirit leads them astray,
they renounce their God to play the whore.
They offer sacrifice on the mountain tops,
burn their offerings on the hills,
under oak and poplar and terebinth,
so pleasant is their shade.

13

So, although your daughters prostitute themselves
and your sons' wives commit adultery,
I shall not be hard on your daughters for their whoring or on your sons' wives for their adultery,¹ when everyone else is wandering off^m with whores
and offering sacrifice with sacred prostitutes.
Thus does a senseless people run to ruin.

k. By concluding an alliance with Damascus and attacking its own brothers of the Southern Kingdom.

l. 'an oppressor' corr. following Greek; 'oppressed' Hebr. 'he tramples on' corr. following Greek; 'crushed' Hebr. 'nothingness' Greek; 'a command' Hebr. All human help is empty (13:4; Is 44:8; Ps 18:31, etc.), but this is especially true of Damascus whose fall is imminent.

m. 'to the Great King' corr.; 'to King Jareb' or 'to an avenging king' Hebr. Reference to the tribute paid by Menahem to Tiglath-pileser III in 738, cf. 2 K 15:19, and to the appeal of Ahaz for help from the same Assyrian king in 735, cf. 2 K 16:7-9.

n. 'heal your wound' corr.

o. Heaven, cf. Is 18:4; 63:15; Jr 25:30; Mi 1:3; Ps 18:6.

6 a. Hosea composes a penitential prayer (borrowing perhaps from an atonement ritual, 1 K 8:31-53; Jr 3:21-25; Jl 1-2; Ps 85); this he puts into the mouth of the people terrified by God's threat of punishment and desertion, 5:14-15; they exhort one another to return to Yahweh, vv. 1-3, but the return is only temporary; there is no true repentance, vv. 4-6.

he has struck us down, but he will bandage our wounds;
after a day or two he will bring us back to life,
on the third day^b he will raise us and we shall live in his presence.

‘Let us set ourselves to know Yahweh;
that he will come is as certain as the dawn
his judgement will rise like the light,^d
he will come to us as showers come,
like spring rains watering the earth.’

What am I to do with you, Ephraim?

What am I to do with you, Judah?^e

This love of yours is like a morning cloud, like the dew that quickly disappears.

This is why I have torn them to pieces by the prophets,
why I slaughtered them with the words from my mouth,
since what I want is love, not sacrifice;
knowledge of God, not holocausts.

The past and present sins of Israel

But they have violated the covenant^f at Adam,^g
they have proved unfaithful to me there.

Gilead^h is a town of evil-doers,
full of bloody footprints.

Like so many robbers in ambush

a band of priests commits murder on the road to Shechem—ⁱ appalling behaviour, indeed!

I have seen horrors in Bethel;^j

that is where Ephraim plays the whore
and Israel defiles himself.

Judah, I intend a harvest for you, too,
when I restore the fortunes of my people.^k

Whenever I want to heal Israel,
I am confronted by the guilt of Ephraim and the wickedness^a of Samaria;
deceit is their principle of behaviour,
thieves break into houses
and bandits raid outside.

They never pause to consider that I know about all their wickedness;

yet their actions are all round them,
they stare me in the face.

Conspiracy the order of the day in Israel^b

Such is their cunning, they beguile the king, and the leaders too, such is their treachery.

‘But they breathe fury, all of them,
as fiery as an oven

which the baker does not need to stoke from the time he has kneaded the dough until it rises.

They addle the king and leaders with wine fumes
as he mixes with these scoundrels.

Their hearts reach oven-heat in the excitement of the plot;
their fury smoulders all night and in the morning blazes like a fierce flame;

all burn at oven-heat

and they consume the men who rule them.

Against Gibeah

- 9 Ever since the days at Gibeah, Israel, you have sinned.
Things are still the same.
And will not war overtake the guilty at Gibeah?ⁱ

The nations will muster against them to punish them for their double crime.^k

Threats and an invitation to repentance

- 11 Ephraim is a well trained heifer
that loves to tread the threshing-floor;
very well, I myself mean to lay the yoke on that fine neck of hers,
I am going to put Ephraim in harness,
Israel will have to plough,
Jacob must draw the harrow.^l reap a harvest of kindness, break up your fallow ground:

it is time to go seeking Yahweh

The end of Israel

- 13 Why have you ploughed iniquity,
reaped injustice,
and eaten the produce, lies?
Because you have trusted in your chariots,ⁿ
and in your host of warriors,

n. Line corr., cf. Greek; Hebr. unintelligible.

o. The monarchy, condemned by Hosea, 8:4+, was instituted at Gilgal, I S 11:14-15. There too a curse was subsequently laid on the sovereignty of Saul, I S 13:7-14; 15:10-23.

10 a. 'yielding plenty of' corr.; 'setting for him' Hebr.

b. Either divided between Yahweh and the Baals or hesitating between Egypt and Assyria.

c. 'Words, words' corr.; 'they speak words' Hebr.

d. Under the kings of Israel justice was poisoned at the roots, cf. Am 6:12.

e. 'the calf' Greek and Syr.; 'the calves' Hebr. 'bewail' corr.; 'exult' Hebr.

f. 'Great King' corr.; 'King Jareb' or 'avenging king' Hebr. Cf. 5:13+. 'idol' corr.; 'purpose' Hebr.

g. That is, the calf.

h. Or 'like foam'.

i. Interpretation conj. Others find a reference here to the punishment of the Benjaminites, Jg 20.

j. Text corr.

k. The allusion is obscure: possibly to the institution of the monarchy (Mizpah, where it was proclaimed, was near Gibeah, I S 10:23-24) and to the crime of Jg 19; but perhaps merely to the single crime at Gibeah, since 'double' can mean 'great', 'disgraceful'.

l. 'lay (the yoke) on'; lit. 'pass (the yoke) over' corr.; 'pass by' Hebr. 'Israel' corr.; 'Judah' Hebr.

m. 'integrity' in the religious sense of conformity to the divine will as expressed in the Law, 8:12.

n. 'Why have you' Greek; 'You have' Hebr. 'your chariots' Greek; 'your way' Hebr.

o. 'towns' corr.; 'peoples' Hebr.

p. Probably Salamanu king of Moab, contemporary of Tiglath-pileser III (745-727), on the occasion of a raid on Beth-arbel (Irbid) in Gilead.

q. Or 'with their children'. Atrocities of this kind were usual when towns were captured, cf. 14:1; 2 K 8:12; Is 13:16; Na 3:10; Ps 137:9.

God's love despised: his vengeance^a

When Israel was a child^b I loved him, 1
 and I called my son^c out of Egypt.
 But the more I called to them, the further they went from me; 2
 they have offered sacrifice to the Baals and set their offerings smoking before the idols.^d
 I myself taught Ephraim to walk, 3
 I took them in my arms;^e
 yet they have not understood that I was the one looking after them.
 I led them with reins of kindness,^f 4
 with leading-strings of love.
 I was like someone who lifts an infant close against his cheek;^g
 stooping down to him I gave him his food.^h
 They will have to go back to Egypt, 5
 Assyria must be their king,
 because they have refused to return to me.
 The sword will rage through their towns, 6
 wiping out their children, glutting itself inside their fortresses.ⁱ

God's love proves stronger than his vengeance

My people are diseased through their disloyalty; 7
 they call on Baal,
 but he does not cure them.^j
 Ephraim, how could I part with you? 8
 Israel, how could I give you up?
 How could I treat you like Admah, or deal with you like Zeboiim?^k
 My heart recoils from it,
 my whole being trembles at the thought.^l
 I will not give rein to my fierce anger, 9
 I will not destroy Ephraim again,
 for I am God, not man:
 I am the Holy One in your midst and have no wish to destroy.^m

The return from exile

They will follow behind Yahweh; 10
 he will be roaring like a lion—
 how he will roar!—
 and his sons will come speeding from the west;
 they will come speeding from Egypt like a bird, 11
 speeding from the land of Assyria like a dove, and I will settle them in their homes
 —it is Yahweh who speaks.

Israel's religion and policy both alike perverse

12

^aAll round me are the lies of Ephraim 1/2
 and the deceit of the House of Israel.
 But God still recognises Judah, and he is still called the people of the Holy One.^b Ephraim feeds on^c the wind; 2 forever chasing the wind from the East,^d accumulating falsehood and fraud,^e making treaties with Assyria, sending oil to Egypt.

The prospect of reconciliation between Yahweh and Israel

11 a. This chapter, on the relationship between Yahweh and Israel, corresponds to 2:4-25, though here Israel is not the beloved, unfaithful wife, but the child ungrateful for all the love he has received (the two images are juxtaposed in Jr 3:19-20).

b. For Hosea, the history of Israel really begins with the Exodus. This whole passage describes the golden age of the desert journey, cf. 2:16+. Hosea seems only to have known, or to have remembered, the less creditable incidents of the patriarchal period, 12:4-5, 13.

c. 'my son' Hebr.; 'his sons' Greek.

d. Following Greek.

e. Thus Targ., Syr., and Greek; Hebr. corrupt.

f. Lit. 'cords of man'.

g. Text corr.

h. Text corr. '(I gave) him': reading 'him' instead of the 'not' in the Hebr. of the following line.

i. Text corr.

j. Text of these two lines corr.

k. Admah and Zeboiim were two of the five towns of the Pentapolis, Gn 10:19; 14:2,8; Dt 29:22: in the Elohistic tradition they presumably take the place of the Sodom and Gomorrah of the Yahwistic tradition, Is 1:9-10.

l. Lit. 'My heart recoils within me, my bowels are in a ferment'.

m. 'I have no wish to destroy' corr.; 'I shall not come into the town' Hebr.

12 a. A difficult chapter: references to contemporary events alternate with references to episodes from the patriarchal age. For Hosea, the faults of Jacob the Ancestor still weigh heavily on the present generation.

b. 'But ... Holy One' Greek; 'But Judah is rebellious (?) towards God and towards the Holy One (?) who is (?) faithful' Hebr. These two lines are a later addition.

c. Or 'is friendly with', 'has to do with'.

d. The scorching wind from the desert lying between Palestine and Assyria: it symbolises the Assyrian invasion, cf. 13:15; Jr 18:17; Ezk 17:10.

e. 'fraud' cf. Greek; 'violence' Hebr.

f. 'Israel' corr.; 'Judah' Hebr.

g. Ambition and arrogance innate and persistent. Hosea interprets these episodes unfavourably here, as in vv. 13-14.

h. Gn 32:24-28 does not speak of tears and entreaties: Hosea is probably hinting at some trick on Jacob's part.

i. 'to him' corr.; 'to us' Hebr.

j. These words are not a divine admonition addressed to Jacob but a warning from the prophet to his contemporaries.

k. 'Canaanite' was the usual term for a merchant. Here 'Canaan' is used pejoratively of Israel, infected by the spirit of commercialism characteristic of the people whom he has supplanted.

l. 'to defraud' corr.; 'to oppress' Hebr.

m. The translation follows the Greek.

n. Reference to the halt at Sinai when Yahweh 'met' his people, Ex 5:3; 19:9,17; 33:17; Dt 9:10; 18:16.

o. 'I will speak ... I will make'; or 'I spoke ... I made'. 'to the prophets' Greek; 'on' or 'against the prophets' Hebr.

p. Prophecy and vision are a sign of God's favour, Dt 18:9-22; Ps 74:9; Lm 2:9; Nb 12:2-8; Ex 33:11.

q. As in the case of Elijah, 1 K 18:40. See also Ho 6:5a; Jr 1:10; Is 6:9-13; Ezk 3:17-20, etc. Alternative translation 'I shall speak (or 'I spoke') in parables'.

r. Reading 'Gilead' for 'If Gilead'. 'to bulls' pasture' Hebr.

13 a. 'spoke' Hebr.; 'taught' Greek. 'so great was he' corr.; 'he carried' Hebr. On the political importance of Ephraim in the early days, see Jos 24:30; Jg 8:1-3; 12:1-6. Some commentators, accepting the Greek reading, think that religious primacy is here referred to; of this there are traces in Ex 33:11 (the part played by the Ephraimite Joshua) and 1 S 1-4 (the shrine of the ark at Shiloh in Ephraim).

b. 'Sacrifice' corr.

c. An act of homage.

d. 'whirled' corr.

e. For this line the Greek has 'I am the Lord your God who set the heavens firm and establish the earth; my hands have created the whole array of heaven, but I have not shown these to you for you to follow (the worship of) them. I it was who brought you up out of the land of Egypt.' When the calf-idols of Dan and Bethel were installed, Jeroboam had said, 'Here are your gods, Israel, these brought you up out of the land of Egypt', 1 K 12:28.

f. 'pastured' Greek; 'knew' Hebr., cf. Am 3:2.

j. Vv. 9-10 corr.

k. Possibly an ironic allusion to King Hoshea (732-724), whose name means 'Yahweh-is-saviour'.

l. 'its time is up' corr. The saying is probably proverbial, indicating a disastrous situation.

m. 'Where is', 'where are' corr.; 'I will be' Hebr. Hosea is thinking of the survival of the nation; St Paul is later to apply the text to the resurrection of individuals.

n. Symbolising luxuriant growth.

o. Text corr., cf. Greek.

14 a. Corr.; Hebr. has the pronoun in the singular.

b. The prophecy ends on a note of hope, already heard in 2:16-25; 3:5; 11:8-11; 12:10. A liturgical prayer expressing sincere repentance, corresponding to 6:1-6, is followed by a firm promise of God's blessing.

c. With words of true repentance (unlike 6:1-3) and not with sacrifices, 6:6.

Concluding admonition^k

Ps 107:43	Let the wise man understand these words.	10
Pr 4:7	Let the intelligent man grasp their meaning.
Dt 32:4	For the ways of Yahweh are straight,

f. Line corr.

g. Text corr.

h. 'What has Ephraim to do' corr.; 'Ephraim, what have I to do' Hebr.

i. The cypress was a symbol of life.

I. THE PLAGUE OF LOCUSTS

A. A LITURGY OF MOURNING AND ENTREATY

a. Lamentation over the ruin of the country

Rv 9:3

- 2 Listen to this, you elders;
all inhabitants of the country, attend.
Has anything like this ever happened in your day,
or in your fathers' days?

- 3 Tell it to your sons,
let your sons tell it to their sons,
and their sons to a generation after them.

Dt 4:9

- 4 What the gnawer has left, the grown locust has devoured,
what the grown locust has left, the hopper has devoured, what the hopper has left, the shearer has devoured.^b

Ps 103:34-35

- 5 Awake, drunkards, and weep!
All you who drink wine, lament for that new wine: it has been dashed from your lips.

Is 5:11+

Dt 28:39

- 6 For a nation has invaded my country,
mighty and innumerable;
its teeth are the teeth of lions,
it has the fangs of a lioness.

Jg 7:12
Jr 46:23
Rv 9:8

- 7 It has laid waste my vines
and torn my fig trees to pieces;
it has stripped them clean and cut them down,^c
their branches have turned white.

Is 5:1+
Na 2:3

- 8 Mourn^d like a virgin wearing sackcloth^e
for her young man betrothed to her.

1:13

- 9 Oblation and libation^f have vanished

1 a. Greek, Vet. Lat. and Syr. read 'Bathuel'.

b. An invasion of locusts has devastated the country. Of the four terms used here for the insect, arbeh, or 'destroyer', (translated 'grown locust' in this place) is the commonest, indicating the species as a whole. The exact meaning of the other three is disputed. They may be used for the various subspecies, but more probably they signify successive stages of growth:

yeleq ('hopper'), chasil (shearer'), gazam ('gnawer').

c. Text corr.

d. The prophet is addressing the community.

e. Sackcloth symbolises grief and repentance.

f. The daily oblation, cf. Lv 2, and libation were offerings from the produce of the soil: corn, wine and oil, cf. Ex 29:38-42; Nb 28:3-8.

from the house of Yahweh.
The priests, the ministers of Yahweh, are in mourning.

Ho 4:3 +

Wasted lie the fields,
the fallow is in mourning.
For the corn has been laid waste,
the wine fails,
the fresh oil dries up.

10

Stand dismayed, you farmers,
wail, you vinedressers,
for the wheat, for the barley;
the harvest of the field has been ruined.

11

The vine has withered,
the fig tree wilts away;
pomegranate, and palm, and apple,
every tree in the field is drooping.

12

Am 4:7-9

Is 16:10
Jr 25:10

Yes, gladness has faded
among the sons of men.

b. A call to repentance and prayer

1:8 +

Priests, put on sackcloth^g and lament.
Ministers of the altar, wail.
Come,^h pass the night in sackcloth,
you ministers of my God.
For the house of our God has been deprived of oblation and libation.

2:15
2 Ch 20:3

Orderⁱ a fast,
proclaim a solemn assembly;
elders, call together
all the inhabitants of the country to the house of Yahweh your God.
Cry out to Yahweh,
'Oh, what a day!
For the day of Yahweh is near,
it comes as a devastation from Shaddai.'^j

14

2:1
Ezk 30:2-3
Is 13:6

Has not the food disappeared
before our eyes?
Have not joy and gladness vanished
from the house of our God?
Seeds shrivel
under their clods;^k
the barns are broken down,
the granaries lie in ruins,
for lack of harvest.

16

What mourning from the beasts!
The herds of cattle wander bewildered^l because they have no pasture.

18

Ho 4:3 +

Even the flocks of sheep must bear their punishment.

2:3

To you, Yahweh, I cry:
fire has devoured the pastures on the heath,
flame has burnt up
every tree in the orchard.^m
Even the wild beasts wait anxiously for you,
for the watercourses have run dry,

19

give the alarm on my holy mountain!
Let all the inhabitants of the country tremble,
for the day of Yahweh is coming,
yes, it is near.

The invading army

³ In their van the fire devours, in their rear a flame consumes.
The country is like a garden of Eden ahead of them and a desert waste behind them.
Nothing escapes them.

⁴ They look like horses,
like chargers they gallop on,^f
⁵ with a racket like the clatter of chariots
they hurtle over the mountain tops, with a crackling like a blazing fire
devouring the stubble,
a mighty army in battle array.

⁶ At the sight of them the peoples are appalled
and every face grows pale.

⁷ Like fighting men they press forward, like warriors scale the walls,
each marching straight ahead,
not turning from^g his path;

each marches straight ahead:

Na 2:11

g. This and the following verses are used in the Lenten liturgy.

h. Into the Temple. Cf. 2:17.

i. Lit. 'sanctify'. Similar exhortations to repentance and prayer recur in 2:12-13, 15-17; cf. Jon 3:5-9. The interest that Joel displays in formal observances and the liturgy, 1:9,13,16; 2:14, contrasts markedly with the attitude of Amos, Hosea, Micah, and Jeremiah, cf. Am 5:21+; but Joel, too, insists on the need for inward conversion, 2:13.

j. There is a play on the words shod (devastation) and Shaddai (a name of God, cf. Gn 17:1+). The plague of locusts heralds the 'day of Yahweh', which is a day of terror, cf. 2:1-2,11; Am 5:18+, even though, in the context of Jl 3-4, cf. Ob 15, it brings the ultimate triumph of Israel.

k. Hebr. uncertain.

l. Hebr. uncertain.

m. Fire, cf. 2:3, and flame are symbolic of drought, cf. Am 7:4.

again, this time in terms of the day of Yahweh, 1:15.

b. A warning of imminent danger, Am 3:6; Ho 5:8; Ezk 33:3,6, the sound of trumpet or horn heralds the punishment of Israel, Is 18:3; Ho 8:1; Jr 4:5; 6:1, and the coming of the day of wrath, Jl 2:1; Zp 1:16, cf. Rv 8:6-9. It is also used to summon Israel to religious gatherings, Nb 10:2-10; Jl 2:15; hence it is to be the signal for the gathering of all the elect on the last day, Is 27:13; 1 Th 4:16-17; 1 Co 15:52.

c. These images correspond to the approach of the cloud of locusts which darken the sky, cf. Rv 9:2.

d. The comparison is either with the speed of the invasion of locusts or with the yellowish gleam of the sun on their bodies.

e. 'Like the dawn there spreads (a host)' Greek; 'As the dawn spreads' Hebr.

f. The comparison of locusts with horses is not uncommon. Here, vv. 4-9, it is elaborated into a description of the advancing locusts in terms of an invading army; cf. Na 2:4-7,11; 3:2-3,15-17, where the context is apocalyptic.

g. 'turning from' Greek and Vulg.; 'entangling' Hebr.

² a. The invasion of locusts is here, vv. 1-11, described arrows fly, they still press forward, without breaking ranks.

They hurl themselves at the city,
they leap on to its walls,
climb to the housetops,
and make their way through windows
like marauders.

B. THE PRAYER ANSWERED

Dt 4:24+	Then Yahweh, jealous on behalf of his land, took pity on his people.	18
----------	---	----

The plague ceases

- 19 Yahweh spoke in answer to his people,
 'Now I send you
 corn and wine and oil,
 until you have enough.
 Never again shall I make you a thing of shame for the nations.
- 20 I will drive the invader from the north^m far away from you and drive him into an arid, desolate land,
 his vanguard to the eastern sea,
 his rearguard to the western sea.
 He will give off a stench,
 give off a foul stink.'

 be glad, rejoice,
 for Yahweh has done great things.
- 22 Beasts of the field, do not be afraid;
 the pastures on the heath are green again,
 the trees bear fruit,
 vine and fig tree yield abundantly.
- 23 Sons of Zion, be glad,
 rejoice in Yahweh your God;
 for he has given you
 the autumn rain, since he is just,ⁿ and has poured the rains down for you,
 the autumn and spring rain as before.^o
- 24 The threshing-floors will be full of grain,
 the vats overflow with wine and oil.
- 25 'I will make up to you for the years devoured by grown locust and hopper
 by shearer and young locust,
 my great army
 which I sent to invade you.'
- 26 You will eat to your heart's content, will eat your fill,
 and praise the name of Yahweh your God who has treated you so wonderfully.
 (My people will not be disappointed any more.)

i. The thunder, cf. 4:16; Ex 19:16+; Am 1:2; Ps 18:13; 29:3-9; Jb 37:4,5. The locusts are the 'army'.

j. I.e. of good harvests, cf. Dt 7:13-14; 16:10,15,17, etc.; cf. Hg 2:15-19, making sacred offerings possible again, cf. 1:9.

l. I.e. in the courtyard to the E. of the sanctuary, cf. 1 K 6:3; Ezk 40:48-49, between the vestibule (Ulam) and the altar of holocaust, 1 K 8:64; 2 Ch 8:12. The priests pray facing the sanctuary.

compared with the enemy which, in the prophetic literature, always 'comes from the North' to execute the judgements of God, cf. Jr 1:13-15+; Ezk 26:7, etc.

n. Line uncertain. 'since he is just', lit. 'for justice', possibly a gloss: God gives rain to his repentant people 'since he is just' (i.e. faithful to his covenant promises), or 'in due measure', or 'for the vindication (of Israel)' as a sign of restoration to divine favour. Vulg. makes the text messianic, translating 'has given you a teacher of justice', cf. Ho 10:12 Hebr. and Jr 23:6; 33:15. This title is used in the Dead Sea scrolls for the spiritual leader of the Covenant Sect, the 'Teacher of Righteousness'.

II. THE NEW AGE AND THE DAY OF YAHWEH

A. THE OUTPOURING OF THE SPIRIT^a

3

'After this

I will pour out my spirit^b on all mankind.

Your sons and daughters shall prophesy,

your old men shall dream dreams,

and your young men see visions.

Even on the slaves,^c men and women,

will I pour out my spirit in those days.

I will display portents^d in heaven and on earth,

blood and fire and columns of smoke.'

The sun will be turned into darkness,

and the moon into blood,

before the day of Yahweh dawns,

that great and terrible day.

All who call on the name of Yahweh will be saved, for on Mount Zion there will be some who have escaped,

as Yahweh has said, and in Jerusalem some survivors whom Yahweh will call.^eB. THE JUDGEMENT OF THE NATIONS^a

The judgement announced

4

'For in those days and at that time,

when I restore the fortunes of Judah and Jerusalem,^b

I am going to gather all the nations and take them down to the Valley of Jehoshaphat;^c

there I intend to put them on trial for all they have done to Israel,^d my people and my heritage.For^e they have scattered them among the nations and have divided up my land among themselves.

They have cast lots for my people;

they have bartered the boys for prostitutes,

have sold the girls for wine and drunk it.'

Charges against the Phoenicians and Philistines^f

'And you, Tyre and Sidon, what do you expect from me?

You too, regions of Philistia?^g

Do you want to take revenge on me?

If you were to take revenge on me,

I would make it recoil promptly and swiftly on your own heads.^h

You who have taken my silver and my gold,

who have carried off my rich treasures to your temples,

you who have sold to the people of Javanⁱ

the sons of Judah and Jerusalem, to remove them far from their own frontiers.

Now I mean to summon them from wherever you have sold them, now I intend to make your crime recoil on your own heads.

I am going to sell your sons and daughters

into the hands of the sons of Judah,

and they will sell them to the Sabaeans,^j

to a distant nation;

Yahweh has spoken!'

A summons to the nations^k

- 11 Come quickly,
 all you surrounding nations,
 assemble there!"ⁿ (Yahweh, send down your champions!)^o
- 12 'Let the nations rouse themselves, let them march to the Valley of Jehoshaphat, for I am going to sit in judgement there on all the nations round.
- 13 Put the sickle in:
 the harvest is ripe;
 come and tread:

3 a. The oracle of vv. 1-3, the fulfilment of which is assigned by vv. 4-5 to the day of Yahweh, promises an outpouring of the spirit when that day comes, cf. Ezk 36:27+. Peter's discourse in Ac 2:16-21 + identifies the miracle of Pentecost as the fulfilment of this prophecy.

b. 'my spirit' Hebr.; '(a portion) of my spirit' Greek.

c. 'slaves' Hebr.; 'my servants' Greek and Vulg., cf. Ac 2:18.

d. Heralding the final judgement on the day of Yahweh, cf. 1:15; 2:1-2,10 and Am 8:9+.

e. 'in Jerusalem' transposed from the second line of the verse. 'survivors': Hebr. 'among the survivors'.

4 a. The restoration of Israel involves the punishment of the oppressor-nations, cf. Ob 15-21. The day of Yahweh here becomes full of menace for the enemy nations. As in the previous chapter the words of Yahweh, vv. 1-8,12-13,17 (21a?), are intermingled with those of the prophet, 9-11,14-16,18-20,21b.

b. 'I restore' qere. Alternative translation; 'when I bring back the captives of Judah and Jerusalem'.

c. Jehoshaphat 'Yahweh-judges', cf. v. 12, is the symbolic name for the place where Yahweh is to judge the nations, cf. Jr 25:31; Is 66:16, called in v. 14 'the Valley of Decision'. V. 16 (cf. v. 11) suggests that it is near Jerusalem, though it is unnecessary to identify it with the present 'Valley of Jehoshaphat' (the Valley of the Kidron to the S.E. of the Temple), a name traceable only to the 4th century A.D.

d. Lit. 'in the matter of Israel'. Israel here is not the Northern Kingdom but all the people of Yahweh, cf. 2:23,27; 4:1.

e. Alluding to the deportations of 597 and 586, and to the treatment of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans and by Judah's neighbours, cf. Ezk 21:23-37; 25; Ob 11-14; cf. Na 3:10.

f. Unlike the peoples of vv. 2-3, these two are mentioned by name and charged with plundering, v. 5, and of trafficking in Jewish slaves (possibly victims of the disasters of 597 and 586).

g. 'regions of Philistia' Hebr.; 'Galilee of the foreigners' Greek.

h. In accordance with the lex talionis, Ex 21:25+, applied in vv. 5-8, cf. Ob 15; Ps 7:14-16.

i. Javan, or 'Ionia', is Greece.

j. A mercantile people in S. Arabia, cf. Jr 6:20; Jb 6:19, cf. 1 K 10:1+.

k. Resumption of the theme of judgement, vv. 1-3. The nations may declare war on Yahweh and march on Zion, cf. Zc 14:2; 12:3-4, but there in the Valley of Decision, vv. 11-14, they will meet their judgement and final defeat, vv. 15-17.

l. Lit. 'sanctify war'; war is regarded as a sacred undertaking, cf. Is 13:3; Jr 6:4; 22:7.

m. Reversal of the paradisaical conditions, Is 2:4; 11:6+, which follow the judgement in Jl 4:18,21.

n. Text corr.

o. Probably a gloss, meaning uncertain. The 'champions' of the heavenly army are the angels (the 'holy ones' in Zc 14:5).

p. The word also means the drag with sharp wheels or stones used for threshing, cf. Is 28:27; 41:15; Am 1:3; the figure is suggested by the 'harvest' in v. 13; one may therefore translate 'Valley of the Drag'. The same word is used for an incisive decision or verdict.

1 a. Jeroboam II, king of Israel from 783-743.

b. Where his dwelling is, 2 S 5:9+. The observation is of Judean origin. The 'roaring' suggests thunder, the voice of Yahweh, Ex 19:16+. It heralds a disastrous storm, or rather a judgement of Yahweh, Is 30:30, the first manifestation of which is a severe drought, Am 7:4; 4:7-8.

c. This section assembles oracles pronounced at various times against seven nations (an added oracle against Judah is probably of later date). The structure of these oracles is the same throughout and the same stereotyped formulas recur. The oracles emphasise the justice of Yahweh that punishes wrong-doing in whatever nation it is found. Israel is dealt with last to show that this punishment, so little expected, will strike Israel as it has struck others, and that it will be the supreme manifestation of divine justice.

d. Lit. 'For three crimes of Damascus and for four' (so also in 1:6,9,11,13; 2:1,4). These two consecutive numbers together indicate an indefinite quantity (small or large according to the context), cf. 4:8; Is 17:6; Jr 36:23 and the 'numerical proverbs', Pr 30:15+.

e. Lit. 'I will not withdraw it' (i.e. the decree). Others translate 'I will not thrust him back' (i.e. the Assyrian invader).

f. 'Gilead' Hebr.: 'the pregnant women of Gilead' Greek.

g. Dragged over the threshing-floor to separate husks from wheat, cf. Is 21:10; 28:27; 41:15; Mi 4:12-13; 2 K 8:12; 13:7. Cf. Jl 4:14+.

h. Hazael and his son Ben-hadad III were bitter enemies of Israel.

i. Or 'the one who dwells' (i.e. the whole population); so too v. 8.

j. Bikath-aven and Beth-eden, difficult to identify, are possibly merely symbolic names for Damascus ('valley of wickedness' and 'house of pleasure').

Samaria will perish for her corruption

	Proclaim it in the palaces of Assyria ⁱ and in the palaces in the land of Egypt; ^j saying, 'Assemble on Samaria's mountain and see what great disorder there is in that city, what oppression is found inside her'. They know nothing of fair dealing —it is Yahweh who speaks— they cram their palaces full by harshness and extortion. Therefore, the Lord Yahweh says this: An enemy ^k is going to invade the country, your power will be brought low, ^l your palaces looted.	9

3 a. Here the prophet is apparently addressing all twelve tribes.

b. Lit. 'known' in the biblical sense of chosen, loved: Gn 18:10; Jr 1:5; Ho 13:4; Dt 9:24; Ws 10:5. This privilege, according to Amos, is not an unconditional promise of divine protection, Am 9:10, cf. Mi 3:11, it imposes moral obligations.

c. Lit. 'visit'. The divine 'visit', cf. Ex 3:16+, is here a punishment.

d. In all this passage the prophet is justifying his intervention. There is neither effect without cause, vv. 3-5b, nor cause without effect, vv. 5c-6,8a. If the prophet exercises his office, it is because Yahweh has spoken; if God speaks, the prophet cannot but prophesy, vv. 7-8b. The images chosen suggest that the message will be one of disaster.

e. Or 'without having met'; Greek 'without knowing each other'.

f. Hebr. adds 'in the snare', omitted by Greek.

g. Or 'no bait', or 'no sling'.

h. This verse may be a gloss.

i. 'Assyria' Greek; 'Ashdod' Hebr.

j. Israel's two great hostile neighbours are summoned as witnesses to her crimes, as heaven and earth are summoned in Is 1:2, cf. Dt 30:19.

k. Assyria; though never named, her threat pervades the whole prophecy of Amos.

l. 'will invade' corr.; 'and all round' Hebr. 'will be brought low' corr.; 'he (or one) will bring low' Hebr.

m. The first mention of the 'remnant' of the saved, cf. 5:15; 9:8 and Is 4:3+.

n. Conj. translation.

o. The phrase apparently means all twelve tribes, 9:8-9.

p. 'ebony' conj., cf. Ezk 27:15; 'many (houses)' Hebr.

4 a. Bashan in Transjordan was famous for its pasture lands and cattle. In Ps 22:12 'bulls of Bashan' symbolise frightening power; here the 'cows' symbolise the reckless luxury of the women of Samaria.

b. Like a herd of cattle led by a 'hook' in the muzzle and urged along with a goad or 'prong'.

c. 'be driven' Greek; 'driven' Hebr. 'To Hermon': i.e. towards Assyria. The translation is conj.

d. The sin consists not in worshipping at these places but in combining ceremonial worship with immoral and unjust actions, 5:21+.

e. Perhaps: on the third day after arrival at the sanctuary. The tithe, Dt 14:22+, was a very ancient custom; it was offered by Jacob at Bethel, Gn 28:22. Some render 'each morning' or 'every three days'; the prophet is being ironical about the extravagance of the formal cult; cf. Dt 14:28; 26:12.

Zc 5:3-4

f. The following passage, vv. 6-12, is a short poem with a refrain indicating the lesson God wanted the people to learn from these events. As a father punishes his child, Dt 8:5+, so God wants to bring back his people to himself (here the seven strokes of his rod are listed in crescendo, Am 4:6-11; Lv 26:14-39; Dt 28:15-68; but all is in vain, Is 9:12; 42:25; Jr 2:30; 5:3; Ho 7:10; Zp 3:2,7; Hg 2:17, cf. Rv 9:20,21; 16:9,11; Ex 7-11. Israel is hardened in sin and God is about to strike him down.

g. I.e. by sending famine.

h. Text corr. following Greek.

i. 'withered' corr.; 'to multiply' Hebr.

j. Probably alluding to an earthquake, cf. 1:1.

k. Enigmatic announcement of the final punishment. 'and because ... you' is perhaps a gloss.

l. This doxology, cf. 5:8-9; 9:5-6, may have been added for use in the liturgy. In its present context it makes the threat still more impressive.

m. Or 'reveals man's thoughts', cf. Jr 11:20; Ps 94:11; 2 K 5:25-26 etc.

n. Following Greek: Hebr. 'changes dawn to darkness'.

o. Either an allusion to the storm, Ps 18:7-15, or preferably an expression symbolising the omnipotence of God, Mi 1:3-6; Ps 18:33; Dt 32:13; Jb 9:8; Is 58:14.

5 a. The nation itself, compared to a virgin carried off by death before she has known the joys of married life.

b. 'to the House of Israel' transposed here from the end of the verse.

c. A great disaster but leaving a 'remnant', cf. 3:12; 5:15; 9:8 and Is 4:3+.

d. The sanctuaries will be destroyed, v. 5, and sacrifice in them is not sufficient means of salvation; a man must 'seek Yahweh', i.e. seek to know his will and do it, 'seek good and not evil', 5:14. Hence men 'seek' Yahweh (verb: darash) by visiting his sanctuaries, Am 5:5; 2 Ch 1:5; Dt 12:5, but also by 'questioning' him (cf. 1 S 14:41+) through the medium of a man of God, Gn 25:22; Ex 18:15; 1 S 9:9; 1 K 22:8, or again by 'seeking the word', 1 K 22:5; cf. 14:5, either in a book, Is 34:16, or through the mediation of a prophet, 1 K 22:7. A similar expression (the verb being normally biqqesh) means rather to seek the face, i.e. the presence, of Yahweh, Ho 5:15; 2 S 21:1; 1 Ch 16:11 (=Ps 105:4; Ps 24:6; 27:8 and (probably in the same sense) Zp 1:6; Ho 3:5; 5:6; Ex 33:7+, etc. But the two expressions are related: a man seeks 'the face' of Yahweh in order to learn his will, whose presence is often manifested by way of oracles. In the O.T. this 'seeking Yahweh' is an imperative necessity of man's religious life; in the N.T. the equivalent is to 'seek the kingdom', Mt 6:33.

e. A famous shrine in patriarchal times, Gn 21:31-33; 26:23-25.

f. Gilgal galah yigleh, pun on Gilgal; so too on Bethel (=house of God, now 'house of nothing').

g. 'at Bethel' Hebr.; 'in the House of Israel' Greek.

h. We put v. 7 after v. 9.

i. Either to swamp the earth, Jb 12:15, and reduce it to its primeval state, Ps 104:5-9, or to water it with beneficent rain, Jb 36:27-28.

j. Translation following Greek.

k. 'Woe', added here, cf. 5:18 and 6:1.

l. Either the truthful witness or the just judge.

you will never drink their wine.

m. Relying on its special place as the Chosen Nation, Israel has been counting on Yahweh's unconditional protection, 5:18; 9:10; Mi 3:11.

n. I.e. on the Northern Kingdom depleted by successive punishments from Yahweh, 4:6-11, not yet finished, 5:3. The 'remnant' of Israel appears here in the Prophets for the first time, cf. Is 4:3+.

o. Inverting the Hebr. order of words.

p. Confident in its election, Dt 7:6+, Israel serenely awaits God's intervention which is bound to be in its favour. To this expected 'day of Yahweh' Amos opposes the prophetic concept of it: the day of Yahweh is a day of wrath, Zp 1:15; Ezk 22:24; Lm 2:22, against an Israel hardened in sin; a day of darkness, tears, massacre, terror, Am 5:18-20; 2:16; 8:9-10,13; Is 2:6-21; Jr 30:5-7; Zp 1:4-18, cf. Jl 1:15-20; 2:1-11. All these texts contain threats of a disastrous invasion (Assyrian or Chaldaean). During the Exile, the day of Yahweh becomes an object of hope; the wrath of God will now turn against Israel's oppressors, Ob 15; Babylon, Is 13:6,9; Jr 50:27; 51:2; Lm 1:21; Egypt, Is 19:16; Jr 46:10,21; Ezk 30:2; Philistia, Jr 47:4; Edom, Is 34:8; 63:4. This day, therefore, is to bring Israel's recovery, a sense found even in Amos 9:11, and also in Is 11:11; 12:1; 30:26; cf. Jl 3:4; 4:1. After the Exile, the 'day of Yahweh' becomes more and more a day of 'judgement' ensuring the triumph of the virtuous and the destruction of sinners, Mi 3:19-23; Jb 21:30; Pr 11:4, with the whole world for its theatre, Is 26:20-27:1; 33:10-16. See also Mt 24:1+. On the cosmic signs that are to accompany the day of Yahweh, cf. Am 8:9+.

q. Cf. Jl 2:1-2; Zp 1:14-18.

r. The prophets often attack religious hypocrisy, the conviction that all is well, provided external forms like sacrifice and fasting are observed, though the most elementary principles of social justice and neighbourly love are neglected, 1 S 15:22; Is 1:10-16; 29:13-14; 58:1-8; Ho 6:6; Mi 6:5-8; Jr 6:20; Jl 2:13; Zc 7:4-6; cf. Ps 40:6-8; 50:5-15; 51:16-17. The Psalmists lay emphasis on the inner dispositions that must lie behind acceptable sacrifice; obedience, gratitude, contrition; the Books of Chronicles, too, insist on the part played in sacrificial worship by the liturgical chant as an expression of inward sentiments; these authors also protest against a religion of mere form. The N.T. will formulate the distinction definitely: Lk 11:41-42; Mt 7:21; Jn 4:21-24.

s. A line is missing here.

t. The reference is to 'communion sacrifice', cf. Lv 3:1+.

u. Religious ceremonies were accompanied by vocal and instrumental music, 1 S 10:5; 2 S 6:5,15.

v. Amos, like Hosea, 2:16-17; 9:10, and Jeremiah, 2:2-3, regarded the period in the desert as a time of perfect union between Yahweh and his people, cf. Ho 2:16+. The material circumstances of a nomadic people and the undeveloped legislation gave small opportunity for elaborate worship, cf. Jr 7:22; Yahweh could therefore be pleased by worship which, though simple, was sincere.

w. Text corr. and translation conj. With them into exile the Israelites' will take, cf. Jr 48:7; 49:3; Is 46:1, the images of the false gods they have adored. Sakkuth and Kaiwan are apparently Babylonian deities.

x. I.e. to Assyria.

6 a. In order to pay homage, seek counsel, ask for justice.

b. At present, under Jeroboam II the conqueror, Israel is powerful, but Amos warns it of cities once prosperous, now in ruins, Calneh, cf. Is 10:9, N. of Aleppo, was to be captured by the Assyrians in 738, Hamath on the Orontes in 720, Gath in the N. of Philistia in 711, but all three had already suffered much destruction, 2 K 12:18; 14:28; 2 Ch 26:6. 'These kingdoms' are Israel and Judah.

c. I.e. of enemy occupation.

d. Meaning uncertain.

e. The impending collapse of the kingdom of Israel.

f. Or 'company'.

Dt 28:38 Jl 1:4-7; 2: 3-9	7 This is what the Lord Yahweh showed me:	1

Ezk 9:8	Then I said, 'Stop, Lord Yahweh, I beg you.	5
	How can Jacob survive, being so small?'
	And Yahweh relented;	6

Third vision: the plumb-line

2 K 21:13	'What do you see, Amos?' Yahweh asked me.	8

'A plumb-line' I said.
 Then the Lord said to me,
 'Look, I am going to measure my people Israel by plumb-line;
 no longer will I overlook their offences.
 The high places of Isaac are going to be ruined,
 the sanctuaries of Israel destroyed, and, sword in hand, I will attack the House of Jeroboam.'

The intervention of Amaziah: Amos expelled from Bethel

- 10 Amaziah the priest of Bethel then sent word to Jeroboam king of Israel as follows. 'Amos is plotting against you in the heart of the House of Israel; the country can no longer tolerate what he keeps saying. •For this is what he says, "Jeroboam is going to die by the sword, and Israel go into exile far from its country".' •To Amos, Amaziah said, 'Go away, seer;^h get back to the land of Judah; earn your breadⁱ there, do your prophesying there. •We want no more prophesying in Bethel; this is the royal sanctuary, the national temple.' •'I was no prophet, neither did I belong to any of the brotherhoods of prophets,'^j Amos replied to Amaziah 'I was a shepherd,^k and looked after sycamores: •but it was Yahweh who took me from herding the flock, and Yahweh who said, "Go, prophesy to my people Israel". •So listen to the word of Yahweh. You say:
- "Do not prophesy against Israel,
 utter no oracles against the House of Isaac".
- 17 Very well, this is what Yahweh says,
 "Your wife will be forced to go on the streets,^l your sons and daughters will fall by the sword,

g. Samaria, or else all the cities of the Northern Kingdom.

h. Text corr. following Greek; Hebr. unintelligible.

i. Out of respect, or possibly superstitious fear, at this act of God. Perhaps v. 11 should be read after v. 8 and v. 10 after v. 11.

j. '(do men plough) the sea' corr.; '(do men plough) there' Hebr.

k. 'Lo-debar' corr.; 'that which is nothing' Hebr. Lo-debar and Karnaim, both in Transjordan, had been reconquered either by Jeroboam II or by his father Joash, cf. 2 K 13:25; 14:25.

m. N. and S. boundaries of Israel, cf. Jg 20:1 +.

7 a. 'It was a swarm' Greek; 'He was forming' Hebr. 'of full-grown locusts' Greek; 'and behold the second crop' Hebr. Presumably the king exacted a part of the first growth for his horses.

b. 'They were about to devour' corr.; 'When they had devoured' Hebr.

c. For prophets interceding on behalf of the people, cf. Ex 32:11 +; Jr 15:1; 18:20; cf. 2 M 15:14 +; Ezk 9:8; Dn 9:15-19.

d. I.e. agreed not to carry out his intention.

e. 'summoning fire in punishment' corr.; 'calling in order to punish by fire' Hebr. The 'fire' is drought, Am 1:2; 4:6-8, that devours everything, cf. Jl 1:19-20; 2:3. Others translate 'he called for a judgement by fire', i.e. fire from heaven such as destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, Gn 19:24-25,28.

f. The nether ocean whence rain and rivers come.

g. 'the Lord Yahweh' added, following 7:1 and 8:1. 'A man' Greek; 'The Lord' Hebr. 'by a wall'; Hebr. adds '(built with) a plumb-line'. Translation conj. The image of the plumb-line suggests, apparently, that this symbolic wall is bulging or leaning over and about to collapse, cf. Is 30:13. The plumb-line can also signify destruction, 2 K 21:13; Is 28:17; 34:11; Lm 2:8.

h. Here the term is possibly contemptuous ('visionary').

i. Amaziah speaks as if Amos were one of the professional prophets for whom prophecy was a livelihood, cf. 1 S 9:7 +.

j. 'neither did I belong . . .': lit. 'nor the son of a prophet', cf. 2 K 2:3 +.

k. 'shepherd' corr., cf. 1:1; 'herdsman' Hebr.

l. Forced to this for her living.

m. All foreign countries are unclean on account of their idols, Ho 9:3-4; the land of Israel where Yahweh resides, Ho 8:1; Zc 9:8; Jr 12:7, is pure, 2 K 5:17, and 'holy', Ex 19:12 +; Zc 2:16; 2 M 1:7.

8 a. Despite the interruption of the Bethel episode, 7:10-17, this fourth vision is connected with the third, 7:7-9, to which it is similar in structure and idea.

Rv 14:15-18

'My people Israel is ripe for destruction;^b

2:6-8; 4:1 Against swindlers and exploiters^e

Listen to this, you who trample on^f the needy 4
and try to suppress the poor people of the country, you who say, 'When will New Moon be over^g 5

Then by lowering the bushel, raising the shekel,
by swindling and tampering with the scales,
we can buy up the poor for money, 6
and the needy for a pair of sandals, and get a price even for the sweepings of the wheat.'
Yahweh swears it by the pride of Jacob,^h 7
'Never will I forget a single thing you have done'.
Is this not the reason for the earthquakes, 8
for its inhabitants all mourning,
and all of it heaving, like the Nile,
then subsiding, like the river of Egypt?ⁱ

Prediction of a mysterious punishment: darkness and mourning

'That day—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks— 9

and darken the earth in broad daylight.^j
I am going to turn your feasts into funerals, 10
all your singing into lamentation;
I will have your loins all in sackcloth,
your heads all shaved.^k
I will make it a mourning like the mourning for an only son, as long as it lasts it will be like a day of bitterness.

Famine and drought of the word of God

4:2

'See what days are coming—it is the Lord Yahweh who speaks— 11 days when I will bring famine on the country,
a famine not of bread, a drought not of water,
but of hearing the word^l of Yahweh.
They will stagger from sea to sea, 12
wander from north to east, seeking the word of Yahweh
and failing to find it.

j. The day of Yahweh, 5:18+, is accompanied by cosmic signs; earthquake, Am 8:8; Is 2:10; Jr 4:24, solar eclipse, Am 8:9; Jr 4:23; the later prophets enlarge on this, using conventional imagery that must not be taken literally, Zp 1:15; Is 13:10,13; 34:4; Ezk 32:7,8;

k. Signs of mourning.

OBADIAH

Title and prologue

- 1a Vision of Obadiah: about Edom. Nb 20:23 +
- 1c I have received a message^a from Yahweh,
a herald has been sent throughout the nations,^b
'Up! Let us march against this people.
Into battle!'
- ||Jr 49:14

Sentence pronounced on Edom^c

- 1b The Lord Yahweh says this:
- 2 Now I am going to reduce you among the nations,
and make you utterly despised. ||Jr 49:15-16
- 3 Your pride of heart has led you astray, you whose home is in the holes in the rocks,^d
who make the heights^e your dwelling,
who say in your heart,
'Who will bring me down to the ground?'
- 4 Though you soared like the eagle,
though you set^f your nest among the stars,
I would still fling you down again—it is Yahweh who speaks. Hab 2:9

The annihilation of Edom

- 5 If robbers came to you,
or plunderers at night,
they would steal to their heart's content.
If grape-gatherers came to you,
they would leave no gleanings behind them.^g

- 6 How Esau has been looted, ||Jr 49:9
- ||Jr 49:10

a. Lit. 'I have heard (corr. with Greek and Jr 49:14; 'We have heard' Hebr.) what was heard'.

b. Metaphorical description of a confederacy in process of formation against Edom. Cf. Jr 4:5; 50:2.

c. The time will come when Edom in turn will be despised, 2, 10c, and so become an object of derision to Israel, 12; the collapse will be the punishment of arrogance. On this doctrine of pride and fall see Pr 16:18; 29:23 and (applied to nations) Is 14; Jr 50-51; Ezk 29-32; 26-28; Zc 10:11.

d. The 'rock' (sela) in which Edom is ensconced is a term chosen, perhaps, to suggest the name of the capital of Edom, Has-sela, 'The Rock', cf. 2 K 14:7; the Greek name of this capital, Petra, preserves the same sense.

e. 'make the heights' versions.

f. 'you set' corr. with Greek.

g. This is explained by vv. 6-7: Edom has been despoiled more thoroughly than by common brigands, who always leave something behind, or by the ordinary grape-gatherer who would leave a few grapes for the gleaner, cf. Dt 24:21.

h. This line is found in the Hebr. after 'or plunderers at night'.

i. The Edomites in turn are betrayed by their allies who drive the inhabitants from their own territory.

j. Ironical observation by the false friends of Edom. 'Those who ate' is added following Ps 41:9; 'Those who eat with you' Vulg. 'traps' corr., cf. Jb 19:6; the meaning of Hebr. is uncertain.

k. The day of the judgement of Edom is considered as part of the day of Yahweh, 15, cf. Am 5:18+, when God punishes Edom and the other nations, 16-17, but rescues and restores Israel. 17-21.

l. Edom was renowned for wisdom, cf. Jb 2:11+.

m. Here and in 9,19,21 an expression for the mountainous country of Edom, also called 'Mount Seir', cf. Gn 32:4; 33:14,16; 36:8-9; Dt 2:4,5,12. The territory referred to is S. Transjordan.

n. N. district of Edom. Here as elsewhere the term is used to indicate the whole country.

o. The behaviour of Edom at the time of the fall of Jerusalem is repeatedly rebuked in biblical tradition: Ezk 25:12-14; 35; Lm 4:21-22; Ps 137:7. From Ezk 35: 5-12 and 36:2,5 it would seem that at that time Edom occupied Judah, at least partially. For similar complaints against the Ammonites see Ezk 25:1-7, cf. 21: 23-27, and against the Philistines, see Ezk 25:15-17.

p. On the relationship and quarrels between Edom and Israel cf. Gn 25:22-28; 27:27-29; 32:4-33:16; Dt 23:8; Nb 20:23+. Here 'Jacob' indicates the land of Judah, cf. 18; Jl 4:19, as opposed to 'Joseph'.

q. The 'day of Jerusalem', Ps 137:7, is that on which the Chaldeans entered the city, 2 K 25:3-4, or else that of the burning of the Temple, 2 K 25:8-9, in 587 B.C.

r. 'your brother' corr.; 'the day of your brother' Hebr.

s. The lex talionis, Ex 21:25+, is applied here to Edom. The same retribution is called down on Babylon, Jr 50:15,29, cf. Rv 18:6-7, on the enemies of Jerusalem, Lm 3:64, and on Tyre, Sidon and the Philistines, Jl 4:4,7.

t. The perspective broadens to include 'the day of Yahweh' who will judge all the nations, cf. Am 5:18+; hitherto oppressed, Zion now becomes the centre of salvation and the power passes into its hands. The hostile pagan nations are defeated; Edom in particular suffers lasting ruin.

u. From now on the prophet is addressing the Israelites.

v. Of the cup of the wrath of God, cf. Is 51:17+, 'drink deep' sense uncertain.

w. Text cited in Jl 3:5 as an oracle from scripture. For the preserved 'remnant' of Judah, cf. Is 4:3+, the day of Yahweh no longer holds any terror, but gives assurance of salvation on Mount Zion, an inviolable sanctuary through which 'no alien will ever pass again', Jl 4:17.

x. 'its own despoilers' (lit. 'those who despoiled it') versions; 'its spoiliations' Hebr.

y. The 'House of Jacob', cf. 10, is Judah, 'the House of Joseph' the Northern Kingdom, cf. Am 5:6; Zc 10:6, associated with Judah at the time of final salvation, cf. Jr 3:18+. The two kingdoms reconquer, vv. 19-20, the empire of David, here defined in ideal rather than geographical terms, cf. 1 K 8:65; 2 K 14:25.

z. Translation supported by Greek and Vulg.

aa. Lit. 'the Canaanites', i.e. Phoenicia. Zarephath, between Tyre and Sidon, marks the frontier of the new Northern Kingdom. Sepharad is unknown.

bb. 'victorious' corr. (lit. 'those who have been saved'); 'the saviours' Hebr. 'judge', i.e. rule over, govern.

cc. The triumphant slogan of Israelite eschatology, Ps 22:28; 103:19; 145:11-13; cf. Ps 10:16; 47:8; 93:1; 97:1; 99:1. The rule of Israel is the rule of Yahweh and the fulfilment of history.

JONAH

Jonah rebels against his mission

1 The word of Yahweh was addressed to Jonah son of Amittai: •‘Up!’ he said ¹
4:2 ‘Go to Nineveh, the great city, and inform them that their wickedness has ² become known to me.’ •Jonah decided to run away from Yahweh, and to go to ³ Tarshish.^a He went down to Joppa and found a ship bound for Tarshish; he Ps 107:23-30 paid his fare and went aboard, to go with them to Tarshish, to get away from ⁴
Yahweh. •But Yahweh unleashed a violent wind on the sea, and there was such ⁵
Ac 27:18 a great storm at sea that the ship threatened to break up. •The sailors took ⁶ fright, and each of them called on his own god,^b and to lighten the ship they threw the cargo overboard. Jonah, however, had gone below and lain down in Mt 8:24-25p the hold and fallen fast asleep. •The boatswain came upon him and said, ‘What ⁷ do you mean by sleeping? Get up! Call on your god! Perhaps he will spare us a thought, and not leave us to die.’ •Then they said to each other, ‘Come on, ⁸
let us draw lots to find out who is responsible for bringing this evil on us’.^c
So they cast lots, and the lot fell to Jonah. •Then they said to him, ‘Tell us,’^d ⁹
Ac 27:23 what is your business? Where do you come from? What is your country? What ¹⁰ is your nationality?’ •He replied, ‘I am a Hebrew, and I worship Yahweh, the ¹¹ God of heaven, who made the sea and the land’. •The sailors were seized with ¹² terror at this and said, ‘What have you done?’ They knew that he was trying to escape from Yahweh, because he had told them so. •They then said, ‘What are ¹³
we to do with you, to make the sea grow calm for us?’ For the sea was growing ¹⁴
Ps 107:28 rougher and rougher. •He replied, ‘Take me and throw me into the sea, and ¹⁵ Jr 26:15 then it will grow calm for you. For I can see it is my fault this violent storm has ¹⁶ happened to you.’ •The sailors rowed hard in an effort to reach the shore, but in vain, since the sea grew still rougher for them. •They then called on Yahweh and said, ‘O Yahweh, do not let us perish for taking this man’s life; do not hold us guilty of innocent blood; for you, Yahweh, have acted as you have thought right’. •And taking hold of Jonah they threw him into the sea; and the sea grew calm again. •At this the men were seized with dread of Yahweh; they offered a sacrifice to Yahweh and made vows.^e

Jonah is saved

2 Yahweh had arranged that a great fish should be there to swallow Jonah;^a ¹

Ezk 27:30-31

¹ a. For the Hebrews, 'Tarshish', cf. 1 K 10:1+; Ps 48:7+, represented the end of the world: Jonah goes as far as he can to escape his duty.

b. The sailors are from different countries: each has his own god but believes in the power of other gods as well.

c. The belief that a ship is endangered by having a guilty man on board is found elsewhere among the Ancients.

d. Hebr. inserts 'who is responsible for bringing this evil on us', a gloss from v. 7; Greek omits.

e. The author emphasises the piety of the pagan sailors: they are scandalised that Jonah should disobey Yahweh, v. 10, fear to offend Yahweh by sacrificing Jonah, v. 14, and offer worship to Jonah's God whose power they recognise.

² a. On this fish and the other prodigies, of which the author is fond, see Introduction to the Prophets.

b. This song is a mosaic of Psalm-texts and is constructed on the conventional pattern of thanksgiving psalms: description of sufferings undergone, account of deliverance from them. For the psalmists, grave danger is a 'death' and deliverance a 'resurrection'; cf. here vv. 6,7,8. The sea, God's primordial 'enemy', cf. Jb 7:12+, is seen either as the kingdom of death itself or at least as the way that leads to it. Hence the dramatic expressions of this song which enable Jesus, Mt 12:40; Lk 11:30, to use the episode of Jonah as a figure of his own three-days' stay 'in the heart of the earth' (Sheol rather than the tomb, cf. Jon 2:2-3); the kingdom of death is depicted as a greedy monster that cannot hold Christ but must let him go (the resurrection). The analogy between Christian baptism and the resurrection of Christ has led to the use of the figure of Jonah in baptismal typology.

c. Probably the sea bed: this was thought to be the foundation on which the earth rested.

d. Text obscure. Others translate 'I went down to a land whose bars closed on me for ever'.

³ a. Lit. 'great before God', the strongest form of the superlative in Hebr.; there is a similar hyperbole in the 'it took three days to cross it', to evoke the fabulous size of Nineveh.

b. The 'forty days' suggest the 40 days of the Flood or the 40 years of Israel in the desert; cf. also 1 K 19:8. The Greek has 'Only three days more', cf. 2:1.

c. The same contrast is drawn in the gospels between the conversion of the Ninevites and the incredulity of the Jews.

d. This whole description of repentance and conversion is the antithesis of Jr 36, cf. Introduction to the Jdt 4:10 mation was then promulgated throughout Nineveh, by decree of the king and his ministers, as follows: 'Men and beasts, herds and flocks, are to taste nothing; they must not eat, they must not drink water. •All^e are to put on sackcloth and call on God with all their might; and let everyone renounce his evil behaviour and the wicked things he has done. •Who knows if God will not change his mind and relent, if he will not renounce his burning wrath, so that we do not perish?' •God saw their efforts to renounce their evil behaviour. And God relented: he did not inflict on them the disaster which he had threatened.

The grievance of the prophet and God's answer

Lk 15:28 4 Jonah was very indignant at this; he fell into a rage. •He prayed to Yahweh and said, 'Ah! Yahweh, is not this just as I said would happen when I was still at home? That was why I went and fled to Tarshish: I knew that you were a God of tenderness and compassion, slow to anger, rich in graciousness, relenting from evil. •So now Yahweh, please take away my life, for I might as well be dead as go on living.' •Yahweh replied, 'Are you right to be angry?' •Jonah then went out of the city and sat down to the east of the city. There he made himself a shelter and sat under it in the shade, to see what would happen to the city. Then Yahweh God arranged that a castor-oil plant should grow up over Jonah to give shade for his head and soothe his ill-humour; Jonah was delighted with the castor-oil plant. •But at dawn the next day, God arranged that a worm should attack the castor-oil plant—and it withered. •Next, when the sun rose, God arranged that there should be a scorching east wind; the sun beat down so hard on Jonah's head that he was overcome and begged for death, saying, 'I might as well be dead as go on living'. •God said to Jonah, 'Are you right to be angry about the castor-oil plant?' He replied, 'I have every right to be angry, to the point of death'. •Yahweh replied, 'You are only upset about a castor-oil plant which cost you no labour, which you did not make grow, which sprouted in a night and has perished in a night. •And am I not to feel sorry for Nineveh, the great city, in which there are more than a hundred and twenty thousand people who cannot tell their right hand from their left, to say nothing of all the animals?'^a Prophets; it is furthermore full of phrases characteristic of Jeremiah.

^e. Hebr. adds 'and beasts'.

4 a. This final chapter ends with the note of God's mercy on all his creatures. He has mercy on Jonah in the sea, 2:7, on repentant Nineveh, on the prophet in his self-pity; and now, 4:10-11, he explains with gentle irony how he is thoughtful even for the brute creation, still more for men and little children, 'who cannot tell their right hand from their left'. The whole book thus prepares the way for the revelation of the gospel: God is love; cf. Introduction to the Prophets.

the sin of the House of Israel.
What is the crime of Jacob?
Is it not Samaria?
What is the sin of the House of Judah?^c
Is it not Jerusalem?

Ex 22:25

f. Foretelling disaster for twelve cities to the S.W. of Judah. Seven of these are known: Gath, Moresheth-gath, Caanan, Lachish, Achzib, Mareshah, Adullam, cf. Jos 15:35-44; the name of one city has been lost, v. 10; the remaining four must have been in the same region. The general meaning is clear: an invasion affecting the prophet's native place serves here as a warning for Jerusalem. The reference is evidently to Sennacherib's invasion of Philistia and Judah in 701.

g. 'the blow of Yahweh strikes' corr.; 'the blows she has received' Hebr.

h. As in Is 10:28-32, the text plays on the names of the twelve cities. The assonances are: Gath and tagiddu 'announce', Beth-leaphrah and aphar 'dust', (possibly Shaphir and shophar 'horn'), Zaanah and yazeah 'she has gone out', Lachish and rechesh 'steed'. Maroth means 'bitterness'. The name Moresheth (the prophet's home, 1:1) suggests the betrothed, meorashah: the city with its marriage gifts is to be handed over to its new master. Achzib plays on achzab 'deception'; Mareshah on yoresh 'he who takes possession'.

i. The Hebr., here corrupt, must have given the name of a town.

j. 'Sound the horn' text corr. (by adding shophar); 'pass on for you (?)' Hebr. 'is torn' Greek, Targ. 'from its foundations' corr.; 'mourning' Hebr. 'from its supports' corr.; 'from you' Hebr.

k. Corr. following Targ.; 'for she was sick' Hebr.

l. 'Beth-achzib' corr.; 'The houses of Achzib' Hebr.

m. 'will come again' corr.; 'I shall bring (?)' Hebr.

n. David in flight took refuge in Adullam. A correction would give the reading 'For ever from Adullam the glory of Israel will depart', i.e. Yahweh will abandon the very place that saw the beginnings of the Davidic dynasty.

2 a. Confiscation for debt: the creditors thus take advantage to enlarge their estates.

b. 'give it back to them (lit. 'him') conj.; 'he takes it from me' Hebr.

c. Text corr., cf. Greek. The punishment, inflicted by a foreign invader, affects the whole nation. There is assonance between 'our fields' (sadenu), 'our despoiler' (shobenu), and 'we are stripped' (neshadunu).

d. 'you' (plural) corr.; 'you' (singular) Hebr. The monopolists will be excluded from the division of the land in the restored kingdom.

e. The prophet's listeners object, on the strength of the covenant, to his threats, vv. 6-7. Micah retorts, vv. 8-10, that this covenant has been violated by the very ones who hypocritically appeal to it and who ask their prophets to promise them earthly prosperity, v. 11.

f. The verb here rendered 'rave', and, in v. 11, 'prophecy', means literally 'to cause to flow, to foam at the mouth', and is usually employed in a damaging sense. 'No shame is going to overtake us' corr.

g. 'accursed' corr.; 'said' Hebr. 'his words' Greek; 'my words' Hebr. 'his people Israel' corr.; 'with the upright man who walks' Hebr.

h. Text corr., cf. Greek; Hebr. 'And yesterday my people played the enemy; from in front, you took the precious garment from those returned from battle who pass by trustingly'.

i. 'they', 'their': Greek; Hebr. has 'she', 'her'. j. i.e. of being free men in Israel.

k. 'a worthless thing (a nothing)' corr.; 'unclean-ness' Hebr. 'you exact a pledge' corr. of Greek; 'you (singular) destroy and grief' Hebr.

Were there a man of inspiration who would invent^l this lie, 11
 'I prophesy you wine and strong drink',^m
 he would be the prophet for a people like this.

d. Under the image of the good shepherd, cf. Ezk 34:1+, the promise is made that Israel will be restored to Zion when the punishment is over.

e. 'weary' Vulg.; 'outcasts' Hebr.

f. 'Tower of the Flock', in Hebr. Migdal-eder; this ancient place-name, cf. Gn 35:21, here indicates Jerusalem, comparing it to a sheepfold. Ophel is the district where the king lived.

g. 'over the House of Israel' corr.; 'to the daughter of Jerusalem' Hebr.

h. This oracle foretells the deportation. The mention of Babylon, v. 10, must be a later elucidation.

i. 'cry out' corr.; 'gush forth' Hebr.

j. This oracle, unlike the preceding, describes the liberation of Zion itself, besieged by the nations. Isaiah, the prophet's contemporary, made similar prophecies, Is 10:24-27, 32-34; 14:24-27; 29:1-8; 30:27-33; 31:4-9. In all these oracles the reference is probably to Sennacherib's invasion in 701 and its mysterious failure. At a later date the nations' assault on Jerusalem (and their final defeat) will become a notable feature of eschatological literature, Ezk 38-39; Jl 4; Zc 14.

k. The oracle contrasts the king, 'the judge of Israel', now humiliated (by Sennacherib: 2 K 18:13-16), with the messianic king whose birth inaugurates the new era of glory and peace (as in Is 9:5). Micah, in the way traditionally favoured by the prophets of Judah, sees this Messiah as a victorious king in Zion, so also Gn 49:10-12; Nb 24:15-19; Ps 110; Is 9:1-6; 11:1-9; 32:1.

l. 'look to your fortifications, Fortress' following Greek; 'cut yourself deep, daughter of the troop' Hebr. 'Fortress', Hebr. Beth-gader (lit. 'house of the rampart'), applied to Zion, is a name similar to 'Tower of the Flock' in v. 8. The prophet contrasts the pride of the fortified capital with the humble state of Ephrathah from which salvation is to come.

5 a. 'the least' Greek; 'small' Hebr.; Hebr. and Greek add 'to be'.

b. Ephrathah (to which Micah apparently attaches the etymological meaning of 'fruitful', connecting it with the birth of the Messiah) originally indicated a clan related to Caleb, 1 Ch 2:19, 24, 50, and settled in the district of Bethlehem, 1 S 17:12; Rt 1:2; the name later came to be used of the town itself, Gn 35:19; 48:7; Jos 15:59; Rt 4:11, hence the gloss in the text. Micah is thinking of the ancient origin of the dynasty of David, 1 S 17:12; Rt 4:11, 17, 18-22; in '(Beth)lehem Ephrathah' the evangelists will recognise an indication of the Messiah's birthplace.

c. Reference to the mother of the Messiah. Micah is perhaps thinking of the famous oracle of the alma, Is 7:14+, delivered by Isaiah about 30 years earlier.

d. 'his God'; Hebr. 'Yahweh his God'.

e. This brief passage perhaps expresses the presumptuous self-assurance of the prophet's contemporaries in contrast to the authentic messianic hope.

f. 'our soil' Greek, Syr.; 'our palaces' Hebr.

g. 'Assyria' Greek; 'the land of Assyria' Hebr. 'with the sword blade' one Greek MS, Lat.; 'in its entrances' Hebr.

h. Passage consisting of two symmetrical strophes. The second describes the triumph of the 'remnant' over the nations; the first is either a promise of blessing to these same nations or else, more probably, a prophecy of blessing for Israel alone (in which case Israel is not the 'dew' but the 'grass').

i. Hebr. adds 'among the nations'.

III. ISRAEL ON TRIAL

DENUNCIATION AND THREAT

Yahweh puts his people on trial^a

6

Now listen to what Yahweh is saying:

Stand up and let the case begin in the hearing of the mountains and let the hills hear what you say.^b

Listen, you mountains, to Yahweh's accusation, give ear,^c you foundations of the earth,

for Yahweh is accusing his people,

pleading against Israel:

My people, what have I done to you, how have I been a burden to you? Answer me.^d

I brought you out of the land of Egypt,

I rescued you from the house of slavery;

I sent Moses to lead you,

with Aaron and Miriam.

My people, remember:

what did Balak plot, that king of Moab?

What did Balaam answer, that son of Beor?

...from Shittim to Gilgal,

for you to know the rightness of the ways of Yahweh.^e

—'With what gift shall I come into Yahweh's presence and bow down before God on high?

Shall I come with holocausts,

with calves one year old?

Will he be pleased with rams by the thousand,

with libations of oil in torrents?

Must I give my first-born for what I have done wrong,

Universal injustice

- 1 7 I am in trouble! I have become like a harvester in summer time,

j. The oracle of vv. 9-13 declares that Yahweh will tear (lit. 'cut off') from his people all their spurious human supports (cf. Ho 3:4; 8:14; 14:4; Is 2:7-8; 30:1-3, 15-16; 31:1-3): military power, apparatus of divination and of the cult on the 'high places'. But the threat also implies an era of peace and of true faith. This oracle is applied by vv. 8 and 14, to the pagans, enemies of Yahweh; it is a subsequent adjustment.

k. 'your idols' corr.; 'your cities' Hebr.

6 a. After Yahweh's accusation in which he recalls his goodness to Israel, vv. 3-5, his repentant worshipper enquires what his God demands of him, vv. 6-7. The prophet replies, v. 8.

b. The mountains are God's favourite place of meeting with his people (Sinai, Nebo, Ebal and Gerizim, Zion, Carmel, etc.). They are changeless witnesses, often personified, Gn 49:26; 2 S 1:21; Ezk 35-36; Ps 68:15-16, etc.

c. 'give ear' corr.; 'and the deeps (?)' Hebr.

d. 'have I been a burden to you' (helelthika) and 'I brought you up' (helelthika) are similar in sound. Yahweh is about to remind the people, who claim that he has abandoned them, of his past kindnesses. The text is used in the Impropria of the Good Friday liturgy.

e. There is a lacuna in the Hebr. text. The reference is to the crossing of the Jordan. 'you to know' versions; 'knowledge of' Hebr. The 'rightness of the ways' (lit. 'uprightnesses') of Yahweh are the climactic events of sacred history by which Yahweh showed his loyalty to the people he had chosen. Since the covenant itself was the issue of a divine initiative, this 'uprightness' ('righteousness', 'justice') is freely given.

f. In answer to Yahweh's complaint against his people, the worshipper now replies, which shows clearly the personal nature of the prophet's religion. The worshipper suggests lawful and forbidden sacrifices. The prophet rejects them all, v. 8, replacing them with a religion of the spirit the demands of which have already been made known to man, namely, justice (Amos), love (Hosea), humility before God (Isaiah).

g. 'has been explained' Greek; 'He has explained' Hebr.; 'I will make known' Syr., Vulg.

h. Hebr. adds 'wisdom to fear your name (?)'.

i. 'assembly of the city' conj. following Greek.

j. Hebr. adds 'their tongue in their mouth is deceit', cf. Ps 120:2-3.

k. Text conj. restored.

l. 'Must I hold the man honest' Vulg.; 'Shall I be honest' Hebr. V. 12 is transposed to follow v. 9.

m. 'begun' versions; 'made sick' Hebr.

n. The Hebr. adds two words, the first not known.

o. V. 15 is transposed to precede v. 14.

p. Referring either to the worship of Baal or, more probably, to the luxury of the upper classes, and social injustice.

q. 'You keep' versions; 'he keeps himself' Hebr. 'you (singular) are guided'; Hebr. has plural. 'your (inhabitants), corr.; 'his' Hebr. 'of the peoples' Greek; 'of my people' Hebr.

like a gleaner at the vintage:

not a single cluster to eat,^a daughter defies mother,

daughter-in-law defies mother-in-law;

a man's enemies are those of his own household.

. . . among them, the best is like a briar,

the most honest a hedge of thorn.^f

Today will come their ordeal from the North,^g

now is the time for their confusion.

For my part, I look to Yahweh,

my hope is in the God who will save me;

my God will hear me.^h

IV. HOPE FOR THE FUTURE

Zion insulted by her enemyⁱ

Do not gloat over me, my enemy:

though I have fallen, I shall rise;

though I live in darkness,

Yahweh is my light.

I must suffer the anger of Yahweh,

for I have sinned against him,

until he takes up my cause

and rights my wrongs;

he will bring me out into the light and I shall rejoice to see the rightness of his ways.

When my enemy sees it,

she will be covered with shame,

she who said to me, 'Where is Yahweh your God?'

My eyes will gloat over her;

she will be trampled underfoot

like mud in the streets.

An oracle of restoration^j

The day is coming for rebuilding your walls.

Your frontiers will be extended that day,

men will come to you that day

from Assyria as far as to Egypt,

from Tyre as far as to the river,

from sea to sea, from mountain to mountain.^k

The earth will become a desert

by reason of its inhabitants, in return for what they have done.^l

A prayer for the confusion of the pagans

the flock that is your heritage, living confined in a forest with meadow land all around.^m
Let them pasture in Bashan and Gilead as in the days of old.
- 15 As in the days when you came out of Egypt
grant us to seeⁿ wonders.
- 16 The pagans, seeing it, will be confounded for all their power;
they will lay their hands to their mouths,
their ears will be deafened by it.

like things that crawl on the earth.
They will come trembling from their lairs,^o

b. Hebr. adds 'with a net'.

c. Restored, following Greek; Hebr. 'Against evil, hands to prosper'.

d. 'the judge gives judgement' corr.; 'the judge' Hebr.

e. Hebr. adds 'he and they weave it'. V. 4 is transposed to follow v. 6.

f. Lit. 'the most honest like a hedge' Symmachus, Vulg.; 'an honest man outside a hedge' Hebr. 'a hedge of thorn' (mesukah) and 'confusion' (mebukah) are similar in sound.

g. Text corr.: 'On the day of your watchmen your ordeal comes' Hebr. The north is the traditional invasion route, cf. Jr 1:13-14, etc. 'ordeal', lit. 'visit', cf. Is 10:3+.

h. This verse, in which the prophet proclaims his confidence in God's power to save, may have been the conclusion of his book; it presented a suitable opportunity for the addition of the poems of hope that follow; these probably date from the time of the Exile.

i. This enemy would seem to be Edom rather than Babylon, cf. Ezk 35; 25:12-14; Ob 10-15; Ps 137:7; Is 34:5-8, etc.

j. An oracle possibly dating from the Persian period (after 538); it foretells the restoration of the walls of

k. Text corr., cf. Greek.

l. This verse, in isolation, may have been directed against Judah. In its present context it is directed against the heathen peoples, primarily (it would seem) the 'people of the country', the Jews' immediate neighbours who were hostile to the community returned from exile.

m. Lit. 'in the midst of a garden'. The nation is isolated in unproductive land—the situation of the Jews in the region of Jerusalem after their return from exile.

n. 'grant us to see' corr.; 'I shall grant him to see' Hebr.

o. The Hebr. adds 'to Yahweh our God'.

p. This prayer is a psalm of which similar examples occur in the prophetic collections.

q. The Hebr. adds 'for the remnant of his inheritance'.

r. In Hebr. the first two verbs of this verse are in the third person. 'our sins' versions; 'their sins' Hebr.

s. The salvation of Israel is the fulfilment of the covenant and of the Promise, the foundations of hope and the focus of faith for the people of God.

PRELUDE

Psalm. The wrath of Yahweh^a

Ex 20:5-6 Dt 4:24 + Ps 94:1	Aleph	Yahweh is a jealous and vengeful God, Yahweh avenges, he is full of wrath; Yahweh takes vengeance on his foes, he stores up fury for his enemies.	2
Ex 34:6-7 +		Yahweh is slow to anger but immense in power. Most surely Yahweh will not leave the guilty unpunished. ^b	3
	Beth	In storm and whirlwind he takes his way, the clouds are the dust stirred up by his feet.
Ps 77:16-17; 106:9 Is 50:2	Ghimel	He rebukes the sea and drains it, he dries up all the rivers.	4
Am 1:2	Daleth	... ^c Bashan and Carmel wither, the green of Lebanon fades.
	He	The mountains tremble before him, the hills reel;	5
Jr 4:24	Waw	the earth collapses before him, the world and all who live in it. ^d
Ps 76:7; 130:3 Jl 2:11 Rv 6:17	Zain	His fury—who can withstand it? Who can endure his burning wrath?	6
	Heth	His anger pours out like fire and the rocks break to pieces before him.
	Teth	Yahweh is good; he is a stronghold in the day of distress;	7
	Yod	he calls to mind those who trust in him when the flood ^e overtakes them.
Gn 6:7f; 8:1	Kaph	Those who defy him he will destroy utterly, ^f he will pursue his foes into the darkness.	8

Prophecies addressed alternately to Judah and Nineveh

	to Judah	How do you imagine Yahweh? ^g He it is who utterly destroys: oppression will not lift its head a second time. They will be consumed like a thicket of thorns, ^h like dry straw, utterly.	9

Though I have disciplined you,
I will discipline you no more.
- 13 And now I am going to break that yoke of his that weighs you down,
and I will burst your chains.
- 14 to the king of Nineveh For you, here is Yahweh's decree:
There will be no more offspring to bear your name;
from the temple of your gods I mean to take away
the carved and the cast image, and I intend to make your tomb an object of shame.^g
- 15 ¹2 to Judah See, over the mountains the messenger hurries!
'Peace!' he proclaims.
Judah, celebrate your feasts,
carry out your vows,
for Belial will never pass through you again;
he is utterly annihilated.^h

Is 5:26-30
Jr 5:15-17;
6:22-30

1 a. This alphabetical psalm, cf. Pr 31:10+, (though the alphabetic series is incomplete) develops the traditional theme of the wrath of Yahweh (Nb 11:33; 2 S 6:7; 21:14; 24:1; Ps 2:12; 60:1; 79:5; 110:4, etc.) and is therefore an apt prelude to the oracle against Nineveh.

b. The last four lines are apparently a later commentary on v. 2a, intended to forestall misunderstanding of the nature of God's anger.

c. The beginning of the verse is missing.

d. 'collapses' corr.; 'rises' Hebr. To describe the wrath of God, the poet combines themes from the ancient cosmogonies (the creation as a divine victory over the waters, Jb 7:12+) and from salvation history (Red Sea; Sinai; cf. Ps 114:3-8; Is 51:10, etc.).

e. Probable allusion to the Flood (according to Gn 5:29 Noah was, like Nahum, a 'comforter'). The divine anger has a purpose, vv. 7-8; it is not a 'blind fury but a deliberate judgement distinguishing between the faithful and the godless.

f. 'those who defy him' Greek; 'her place' Hebr.

g. Or possibly translate 'What do you plot against Yahweh?'

h. 'like a thicket' corr.; 'for until' Hebr. The Hebr. adds 'and like men drunk with their drink' (?).

i. This godless man from Assyria may be Sennacherib, cf. 2 K 18-19.

j. 'an object of shame' corr.; 'for you are light' Hebr.

2 a. We read v. 2 after v. 3.

b. 'vineyard' corr.; 'magnificence' Hebr.

c. 'horsemen' Greek, Syr.; 'cypresses' Hebr.

like lightning they dash to and fro.
 The picked troops are called out;^d
 the columns clash,
 they hurl themselves against the rampart,
 the mantelet^e is already in place.
 The gates that give on the river are opened,
 in the palace all is panic.
 The Lady^f is carried off, taken into exile,
 her handmaids raise the dirge, with sighs
 like the moaning of doves,
 and beat their breasts.
 Nineveh is like a pool
 whose waters^g are draining away.
 'Stop! Stop!'
 But no one turns back.
 'Plunder the silver! Plunder the gold!'
 There are endless treasures, tons^h of valuables.
 Raid and ravage and ruin!ⁱ
 Heart fails and knees give way, fear is in the loins of all
 and every face grows pale.

 flash of swords,

Jr 51:30

d. 'are called out' following Greek; 'he remembers' Hebr.

e. 'protector' (?); presumably a machine to shelter the besiegers attacking the rampart.

f. 'is carried off' corr.; 'is set in place' Hebr. The 'Lady' may be the queen with her entourage, but more probably the reference is to the statue of the goddess Ishtar, 'queen of Nineveh', the 'handmaids' being her sacred prostitutes.

g. 'whose waters', following Greek; 'from the days of her; and they' Hebr.

h. 'heaps' Syr. (lit. 'all weighing'); 'weight more than all' Hebr.

i. Assonance: buqa, umebuqa, umebullaqa.

j. 'the cave' corr.; 'the pasture' Hebr.

3 a. Another picture of the destruction of Nineveh supplemented by a verdict on the crimes that called down this punishment.

e. When Nahum describes Nineveh as a prostitute who is to undergo the punishment meted out to adulterers, he is thinking less of her idolatry (Israel, not Nineveh, is the 'spouse' of Yahweh) or of her practice of ritual prostitution than of the rapacity and cunning by which she has established her ascendancy over every nation, to plunder them.

d. 'her' Greek; 'you' Hebr.

e. Probably Thebes in Upper Egypt, 'the city of Amon'; in 663 it was sacked by the armies of Assurbanipal, who may already have attacked the city in 667.

f. Hebr. adds 'waters surrounded her'.

g. 'who had... for outer wall' corr. (lit. 'her outer wall'). 'the waters' corr.; 'of the sea' Hebr. The 'sea' is evidently the Nile in flood.

h. 'her auxiliaries' Greek, Syr.; 'your auxiliaries' Hebr.

i. This oracle appears to allude to reverses already suffered by the Assyrian armies (capture of Tarbis and of Assur in 614?).

b. Lit. 'who sold nations'; the metaphor is the opposite of redemption, 'buying back' meaning libera-

The gates of your country
stand wide open to the foe;
fire has burnt up your locking beams.
Draw water for the siege,
strengthen your bulwarks,

l. 'multiply' corr.; 'you are multiplied' Hebr.

k. 16b is transposed.

m. 'Alas! ...' corr., following Greek; 'Where are they?' Hebr.

n. 'slumber' Greek; 'they remain' Hebr.

HABAKKUK

Title

- 1 The oracle^a that Habakkuk the prophet received in a vision.

I. DIALOGUE BETWEEN THE PROPHET AND HIS GOD

First complaint of the prophet: lawlessness prevails^b

- 2 How long, Yahweh, am I to cry for help
while you will not listen;
to cry 'Oppression!' in your ear
and you will not save?
- 3 Why do you set injustice before me,
why do you look on where there is tyranny?
Outrage and violence, this is all I see,
all is contention, and discord flourishes.
- 4 And so the law loses its hold,
and justice never shows itself.
Yes, the wicked man gets the better of the upright,
and so justice is seen to be distorted.

Ps 55:9-11
Jr 6:7; 9:2f
Am 3:9-10

Is 59:14
Mi 7:2-3

First oracle. The Chaldeans the instrument of God's justice^c

- 5 Cast your eyes over the nations, look,
and be amazed, astounded.
For I am doing something^d in your own days that you would not believe if you were told of it.
- 6 For now I am stirring up the Chaldeans, that fierce and fiery people^e who march miles across country to seize the homes of others.

Ac 13:41

Is 29:9

1 a. Lit. 'burden', cf. Is 13:1, etc., and Jr 23:33-40.

b. Speaking in the name of his people, cf. Jr 10:23-25; 14:2-9, 19-22; Is 59:9-14, the prophet complains to Yahweh about the miseries they suffer. This passage, similar to the laments in Ps and in Jr, could refer, if taken by itself, to internal dissension; but there is no doubt that, given the context of vv. 12-17, it relates to the tyranny of the Chaldeans. Why does the justice and kindness of Yahweh (and his holiness, v. 13) allow the wicked to triumph? After all, Judah, though sinful, is still on the side of 'justice' since it has the knowledge of the true God; yet God permits the heathen to triumph. The answer lies with Yahweh, cf. 2:1.

c. First reply. The Chaldaean scourge is the present instrument of God's justice. Cf. Am 3:11; Is 10:5-27; Jr 5:14-19; 25:1-13; 27:6-22; 51:20-23; Dt 28:47f; 2 K 24:2-4. Cf. Nebuchadnezzar, 'my servant', Jr 25:9; 27:6; 43:10.

d. Following Greek; the Hebr. could also be translated '(a deed) is being done'.

e. The dramatic images in this description of invasion occur frequently in the prophetic books, cf. Is 5:26-29; 13:17-18; Jr 4:5-7, 13, 16-17; 5:15-17; 6:22-24; Na 3:2-3; Ezk 23:22-26; 28:7-10.

- 1:11 A people feared and dreaded, 7
from their might^f proceeds their right, their greatness.
- Zp 3:3 Their horses are swifter than leopards, 8 fiercer than wolves in the dark;
their horsemen gallop on,
their horsemen advance from afar,
swooping like an eagle to stoop on its prey.
- They come for plunder, all of them, 9
their faces scorching like an east wind;^g
they scoop up^h prisoners like sand.

They make light of all fortresses:
they heap up earth^j and take them.
- Then the wind changes and is gone. . . .^k 11
Sinful, he who makes his own strength his god.

Second complaint of the prophet: the tyranny of the conqueror^l

- Lv 17:1 +
Dt 33:27
Ps 90:1-2 Are not you, from ancient times^m Yahweh, 12
my God, my Holy One, who never dies?ⁿ Yahweh, you have made this people^o an instrument of justice, set it firm as a rock^p in order to punish. ^q
- Ps 5:5-6 Your eyes are too pure to rest on wickedness, 13
you cannot look on at tyranny.
Why do you look on while men are treacherous, and stay silent while the evil man swallows a better man than he?
- Ps 35:22f

like creeping, masterless things.

who draw them with their net,
in their dragnet gather them,
and so, triumphantly, rejoice.
- At this, they offer a sacrifice to their net, 16
and burn incense to their dragnet, for providing them with luxury and lavish food. ^s
- Are they then to empty their net unceasingly,^t 17 slaughtering nations without pity?
- 2:10

Second oracle: the upright man will live by faithfulness

- Nb 23:1-6 2 I will stand on my watchtower, 1
and take up my post on my battlements,
watching to see what he will say to me,
what answer he will make to my complaints. ^a
- Then Yahweh answered and said, 2

since this vision is for its own time only:^b eager for its own fulfilment,^c it does not deceive; 3

II. CURSES ON OPPRESSORS

Prelude

5 Wealth^f is indeed a treacherous thing.
Haughty and unable to rest is he who is as greedy as Sheol,
who is like death, insatiable,
who assembles all the nations for his own ends,
collects all the peoples to his own advantage.
6 On him, will not all men make satires,
and turn an epigram against him?
They will say:^g

Five imprecations

I

Trouble^h is coming to the man who amasses goods that are not his,
(for how long?)
and loads himself with pledges.

Is 5:8+
Rv 8:13+

f. Lit. 'from itself'. The Chaldaeans do not acknowledge God or any human master: they attribute their victories to their own valour. Cf. v. 11b.

g. Text uncertain. 'their faces scorching' conj.; 'the scorching (or: eagerness) of their faces' Hebr. 'an east wind' with 1 QpHab (the commentary on Habakkuk discovered at Qumran in 1947) and Vulg.; 'to the east' M.T. The scorching wind from the eastern desert sometimes symbolises invasions from the east, cf. Ho 12:2; 13:15; Jr 18:17; Ezk 17:10f.

h. 'they scoop up' cf. Greek, Vulg.; 'he scooped up' Hebr.

i. Lit. 'It scoffs at kings'.

j. Ramps or earthworks used in sieges.

k. The invasion comes like a storm and passes on, leaving ruin behind. Others interpret 'Then the spirit passes by and is gone' (referring to the passing of a period of prophetic inspiration), or 'Then he (the invader) changes his mind, having exceeded (his mission?)'.

l. This passage resumes the complaint of vv. 2-4; if it is true that the Chaldaean triumph is ultimately due to Yahweh, vv. 5-6, this only moves the problem back to Yahweh himself who must give the answer. How is it that a just and holy God, the custodian of justice, vv. 12a,b, 13, can treat nations thus, v. 14, and the chosen people in particular? Will he allow the wicked to engulf the virtuous? V. 13, cf. v. 4 and vv. 15-17.

m. From the time of the Exodus, referred to in ch. 3, the event on which Habakkuk builds his confidence.

n. 'who never dies' corr.; 'We shall never die' Hebr.

o. Lit. 'it'. The Chaldaeans.

p. Lit. 'and a rock'. Or possibly 'O Rock!', cf. Dt. 32:4.

q. The Chaldaeans, charged with a mission of justice which they must not exceed, cf. 1:5+. Others take this to refer either to Israel, appointed arbiter of the nations, or to Jehoiaakim king of Judah who betrayed his mission, to whom 1:2-4, 12-17 and 2:6-19 would then refer.

r. Lit. 'It takes all with a hook'.

s. 'lavish' corr.

t. 'unceasingly' 1 QpHab; 'and unceasingly slaughtering' M.T.

2 a. 'my watchtower' 1 QpHab; 'the watchtower'

M.T. 'he will make' corr. following Peshitto; 'I shall make' M.T. The prophet keeps watch like a sentry on behalf of his people, cf. Ho 9:8; Is 21:6-12; Jr 6:17; Ezk 3:17; 33:1-9; Ps 5:3.

b. Hence the command to write it down. The vision will be fulfilled 'at the appointed time', cf. Dn 8:19,26; 10:14; 11:27,35; the written document pledges the word of Yahweh to fulfil it at this appointed time, cf. 2 P 3:2, and will later stand as a witness to its veracity. Cf. Is 8:1,3; 30:8.

c. The vision has an energy of its own, since it is the expression of a divine word moving to fulfilment, cf. Is 55:10-11. The Advent liturgy uses this verse to express expectation of the Messiah. See also Heb 10:37.

d. 'he flags, he' corr.; M.T. 'It is distended (=full of pride?), it is not at rights, his soul within him'; Vulg. 'He who is unbelieving'. Greek 'If he flags, my soul is not pleased with him; but the upright man will have life for his faith in me'.

e. This maxim, of universal application, cf. Is 3:10-11, here sums up the content of the vision. 'Faithfulness' to God (cf. Ho 2:22; Jr 5:1,3; 7:28; 9:2, etc.), i.e. to his word and to his will, is characteristic of the 'upright' man, and assures him security and life here on earth (cf. Is 33:6; Ps 37:3; Pr 10:25, etc.). The wicked man, who does not have this 'uprightness', runs to ruin. The upright and the wicked in this context (1:2-4, 12-17; 2:5-18) are respectively Judah and the Chaldaeans: the former will live, the others perish. In the LXX, where 'faithfulness' is rendered 'faith', St Paul finds the doctrine of justification by faith.

f. 'Wealth' 1 QpHab; 'Wine' M.T.

g. 'turn an epigram' corr. 'They will say' 1 QpHab and Greek; 'He will say' M.T. The 'satire', mdshal, is a mocking couplet form using metaphor. The 'epigram', mdtsah, is a riddle demanding interpretation. The two words describe the literary form of the five imprecations: their style has the solemn form of prophecy but the terms are enigmatic.

h. An attack on the cupidity of the conquerors. There is an ironical change of situation: the Chaldaeans become debtors to the nations they plundered and the prey of these same nations who now become creditors —an application of the lex talionis, Ex 21:25+.

Will not your creditors suddenly rise, 7
will not your duns awake?
Then you will be their victim.

Is 33:1 Since you have plundered many nations, 8
all that remains of the peoples^l will plunder you;
=2:17 for you have shed men's blood and ravished the country,
the city and all who live in it.

II

Jr 22:13-17 Trouble^l is coming to the man who grossly exploits others for 9
Is 14:13 + the sake of his House,
Jr 49:16 to fix his nest on high
Ob 4 and so evade the hand of misfortune.

1:17 You have contrived to bring shame on your House; 10
Is 14:20 by making^k an end of many peoples
you have worked your own ruin.

For the stone from the very walls cries out, 11 and the beam responds from the framework.^l

III

Jr 22:13 Trouble^m is coming to the man who builds a town with blood 12
Mi 3:10 and founds a city on crime.

Is it notⁿ the will of Yahweh Sabaoth 13
that the labouring of peoples should end in fire, ||Jr 51:58 and the toiling of nations come to nothing?

Nb 14:21 + For the country shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of Yahweh 14
Is 11:9 as the waters swell the sea.

IV

Gn 9:20-25 Trouble^o is coming to the man who makes his neighbours drink, 15 who pours his poison^p until they are drunk, to look at their nakedness.

You are drunk with ignominy, not with glory. 16

Your turn now to drink and show your foreskin.^q

Ps 75:8 + The cup from Yahweh's right hand comes round to you, 17
Is 51:17 + and disgrace will overshadow your glory.

For the violence done to Lebanon^r is going to overwhelm you, 17
so will the slaughter of terrified beasts,
=2:8 for you have shed men's blood and ravished the country,
the city and all who live in it.^s

Is 40:20 + Trouble^l is coming to the man who says to the piece of wood, 19
'Wake up!'

to the dumb stone, 'On your feet!'

(And that is the oracle.)^u

Plated it may be with gold and silver,
but not a breath of life inside it.

What is the use of a carved image, or for its maker to carve it at all? 18
It is a thing of metal, a lying oracle.

What is the use of its maker trusting this and fashioning dumb idols?

- 20 But Yahweh is in his holy Temple:^v
let the whole earth be silent before him.^w

III. PLEA TO YAHWEH FOR DELIVERANCE

- 1 3 A prayer^a of Habakkuk the prophet;^b tone as for dirges.

Ps 29

- 2 Yahweh, I have heard of your renown,^c

that is where his power lies hidden.

- 5 Plague goes in front of him,
fever^j follows on his heels.

- 6 When he stands up he makes the earth tremble,
with his glance he makes the nations quake.

Ex 15:14-16

Then the ancient mountains are dislodged,

i. Not 'of the oppressed peoples' nor 'of the peoples who have escaped oppression' but of every race, other than the Chaldeans, whether oppressed or not.

j. The fate of the Chaldeans will be that of the man who has built his fortune on ill-gotten gains: final impoverishment.

k. 'by making' versions; 'to make' M.T.

l. The Chaldaean dynasty or 'House' paid for by extortion: its stone and wood call down vengeance on the occupier.

m. Against rule by violence.

n. 'Is it not' (versions; 'Behold' M.T.): formula prefacing a quotation, cf. 2 Ch 25:26; here introducing a word of Yahweh in the two following lines.

o. The cynicism of the conqueror is like that of a man who encourages others to get drunk, to degrade them; their shame will soon be his. In Jr 51:7 Babylon does the same and, in Na 3:4-7, Nineveh.

p. 'his neighbours' 1 QpHab; 'his neighbour' M.T. 'pours' meaning uncertain. 'his poison' (cf. Dt 32:24,33; Ps 58:4; 140:3; or 'his anger') 1 QpHab, Symmachus and Vulg.; 'thy poison' M.T.

q. The uncircumcised and debauched Chaldaean is himself made drunk and disgraced.

r. Lebanon despoiled, cf. Is 37:4; its cedars felled by Nebuchadnezzar for building purposes, cf. Is 14:8, may also symbolise Israel, cf. Is 33:9; Jr 21:14; 22:6-7, 20-23.

s. We read v. 18 after v. 19.

t. Against Chaldaean idolatry.

u. Possibly a gloss on 18b transposed to 19.

v. The Temple in Jerusalem, but primarily the heavenly palace, whence Yahweh will come, cf. 3:3f.

w. This silence precludes the theophany of 3:3-15. Cf. Is 41:1; Ps 76:8-9.

3 a. As in many of the Psalms, this prayer combines supplication with a hymn to the omnipotence of God. The word 'Pause' and the note of v. 19d show that it was used in the liturgy.

b. As in Ps, the inscription may indicate not the author of the prayer but the fact that it belongs to a collection, in this case Hab.

c. Lit. 'what you make heard'.

d. All the exploits of Yahweh on behalf of his people in Mosaic times (cf. 1:12). Cf. Ps 44:1-8; 77:11-12; 95:9; Jg 2:7; Dt 11:7.

e. Lit. (here and in next line) 'in the middle of years'.

f. For this and the preceding line Greek has 'In the middle of two living things you will make yourself known; when the years draw near you will be recognised; when the time comes you will appear', a text which, in conjunction with Is 1:3, gave rise to the tradition of the two animals by the crib at Bethlehem.

g. 'Eloah', an ancient name for God. Teman, a N. district of Edom. Paran, a mountain in Edom. The theophany, cf. Ex 19:16+, now begins: it describes the coming, vv. 3-7, and battle, vv. 8-15, of Yahweh. Several details in this epic vision suggest the victorious march of Yahweh at the head of his people during the Exodus, a type, cf. Is 40:3+, of the deliverance to come. Yahweh ('the Holy One', cf. Dt 33:3; Is 6:3+) advances from Sinai, cf. Ex 24:9-11, towards Canaan, cf. Nb 20:14f, through the region S.S.E. of Palestine from which the storms also come. His coming is described, vv. 3f, in terms of an advancing storm cloud, cf. Ps 18:7f; 29. The expressions refer sometimes to the cloud, sometimes to Yahweh who is present in it.

h. 'His brightness' versions; 'The brightness' Hebr.

i. Strictly 'horns', but cf. Ex 34:29-30,35.

j. resheph: the word is derived from the name of the Phoenician god of lightning and means thunderbolt, hailstone, calamity and, here (being parallel with 'plague', and cf. Dt 32:24) burning fever.

3 k. 'ancient mountains' and 'everlasting hills' have here a cosmic sense, cf. Ps 90:2; Pr 8:25; Jb 15:7; in Gn 49:26; Dt 33:15 they indicate the places where the patriarchs once lived.

l. Midian, cf. Ex 2:15+. Cushan is apparently an ancient name for the same region.

m. Hebr. 'Is it against the rivers there blazes, Yahweh, against the rivers your anger?'

n. As in Jg 5:4-5; Ps 77:16-19; 114:3-7, cosmic disturbances accompany an intervention of Yahweh, cf. Am 8:9+. (Use is perhaps made here of ancient traditions of the creation conceived as a struggle between God and the rebellious elements, the Abyss, the Sea, the River, etc.), cf. Jb 7:12+. Here the struggle ends in defeat for 'the wicked', the Chaldaeans, vv. 13-15.

o. 'ply its string with arrows' corr. The arrows are the lightning flashes, cf. v. 4 and Ps 29:7; 77:17. For Yahweh as bowman, cf. Dt 32:23; Ex 5:16, etc. The bow is a symbol of strength, cf. Gn 49:24; Jb 29:20, etc.

p. The torrential rain accompanying the storm, cf. Ps 77:16-18; Jg 5:4.

q. The Abyss under the earth, the primordial Ocean, which unites its waters with the rain from above. Its 'hands' are the waves.

r. Here the nation, cf. Ps 28:8 (Ex 19:6) rather than its king. 'to save ...' Greek; 'to salvation, your own anointed' Hebr.

s. Text corr.

t. Text corr.

u. Cf. v. 2 and Is 21:3-4; Jr 23:9; Dn 8:18,27; 10:8. The supernatural awe and the anguish of the prophet, as he watches the battle of Yahweh and the concurrent calamities, vv. 16-17, are replaced by joy in the rescue and security coming from Yahweh, vv. 18-19, cf. 16e.

v. Text corr.

w. This verse which, despite a context of cosmic struggle, paints a picture of agricultural depression, may well be a gloss (to emphasise the lesson of trust in Yahweh); possibly, however, it is meant to describe the effects of the war as felt in Judah.

x. 'the heights' Greek; 'my heights' Hebr.

y. 'On' corr.; 'My' Hebr. Indications of this kind usually appear at the beginning of Psalms.

ZEPHANIAH

Jr 1:2 1 The word of Yahweh that was addressed to Zephaniah son of Cushi, son of Gedaliah, son of Amariah, son of Hezekiah, in the reign of Josiah son of Amon, king of Judah.

I. THE DAY OF YAHWEH FOR JUDAH

Prelude: judgement on all creation

I mean to sweep away everything 2 off the face of the earth
—it is Yahweh who speaks.
Mt 13:41 I mean to sweep away men and beasts, 3
Ho 4:3+ the birds of the air and the fish of the sea,
I mean to send the wicked staggering,^a and wipe man off the face of the earth
—it is Yahweh who speaks.

Against the worship of alien gods

I am going to raise my hand against Judah 4
and against all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and from this place I will wipe out Baal,
to the very last vestige of him,
even to the name of his spurious priests,^b
2 K 23:4f,12 those who prostrate themselves on the roofs 5 before the array of heaven,
those who prostrate themselves before Yahweh^c
but swear by Milcom,^d
1 K 11:7,33 those who turn aside from Yahweh, 6
2 K 23:13 who do not seek Yahweh, who will not bother with him.
Am 6:10 Silence before the Lord Yahweh! 7
Hab 2:20 For the day of Yahweh is near.
Zc 2:17 Yes, Yahweh has prepared a sacrifice,
Rv 8:1 he has consecrated his guests.^e

Against the dignitaries of the court^f

On the day of Yahweh's sacrifice, 8
I will punish the ministers,
the royal princes,
and all those who dress themselves

in foreign style.

- 9 On that day I mean to punish all those who are near the throne,^g
those who fill the palace of their lord with violence and deceit.

Against the merchants of Jerusalem

- 10 On that day—it is Yahweh who speaks—
a shout will be raised from the Fish Gate,
from the new town, howls,
from the hills, a great uproar.
11 Men of the Mortar,^h howl!
For the whole brood of Canaanⁱ has been destroyed,
the weighers of silver are all wiped out.

Against unbelievers

- 12 When that time comes
I will search Jerusalem by torchlight, and punish the men who are stagnating on their lees,
those who say in their hearts,
'Yahweh has no power
for good or for evil'.
13 Then their wealth will be given up to looting, their households to plundering.
They built houses, did they? They will not live in them.
They planted vineyards, did they? They will not drink their wine.

The day of Yahweh^j

- 14 The great day of Yahweh is near,
near, and coming with all speed.
How bitter the sound of the day of Yahweh,
the day when the warrior shouts his cry of war.^k 15 A day of wrath, that day,
a day of distress and agony,
a day of ruin and of devastation,
a day of darkness and gloom,
a day of cloud and blackness,
a day of trumpet blast and battle cry against fortified town
and high corner-tower.
17 I am going to bring such distress on men that they will grope like the blind

1 a. 'I mean to send... staggering' corr.; 'the stumbling-blocks' Hebr.

b. The word translated 'spurious priests' is used only of the priesthood of idols. Hebr. adds 'and the priests'.

c. Hebr. adds 'and who swear'.

d. 'Milcom' some Greek MSS, Syr., Vulg.; 'their king' Hebr. Zephaniah denounces the vestiges of Canaanite religion, v. 4, the star worship of Assyria, and finally the combination of Yahwism with the worship of neighbouring gods (Milcom, god of the Ammonites).

e. 'Silence before the Lord Yahweh' is a liturgical command, the day of Yahweh being represented as a sacrifice in which the people of Judah are the victims. As in the great religious massacres of Elijah, 1 K 18: 19-40, and Jehu, 2 K 10:18-27, the guests are 'consecrated' for the slaughter.

f. The regents, subservient to Assyria, during the minority of King Josiah.

g. Lit. 'those who ascend the step' (here probably the dais of the throne).

h. The precise location of this quarter of Jerusalem is unknown.

i. The 'Canaanites' are the merchants, Ho 12:8; Is 23:8; Pr 31:24, etc.

j. As in Amos, 5:18-20+, and Isaiah, 2:6-22, the day is a terrifying manifestation of the power of Yahweh. God is represented as a warrior (cf. Ex 15:3; 2 S 5:24; Ps 18:7-14, etc.) but here he fights against his own people. This poem inspired Joel, 2:1-11, and the mediaeval author of the Dies Irae.

k. A common translation is 'even the hero utters cries of fear'.

(because they have sinned against Yahweh);
 their blood will be scattered like dust,
 their corpses like dung.
 Neither their silver nor their gold will have any power to save them.

18

On the day of the anger of Yahweh,
 in the fire of his jealousy,
 all the earth will be consumed.
 For he means to destroy, yes, to make an end of all the inhabitants of the earth.

Conclusion: a call to conversion^a

2

.....^b
 nation without desire,^c before you are driven^d
 like chaff that is blown away in a day, before there descends on you
 the fierce anger of Yahweh
 (before there descends on you
 the day of the anger of Yahweh).
 Seek Yahweh,
 all you, the humble of the earth,^e
 who obey his commands.
 Seek integrity,
 seek humility:
 you may perhaps find shelter
 on the day of the anger of Yahweh.

II. AGAINST THE PAGANS

The enemy to the west: the Philistines^f

Yes, Gaza is going to be reduced to desert,
 Ashkelon to waste.
 Ashdod will be stormed in broad daylight,
 and Ekron rooted out.
 Woe to the members of the Confederacy of the Sea,
 to the nation of the Cherethites!
 This is the word of Yahweh against you:
 I mean to bring you down,^g land of the Philistines,
 I am going to ruin you, empty you of inhabitants;
 and you will be reduced^h to pasture land,
 to grazing grounds for the shepherds,
 to folds for the sheep.
 It will be included in the property of the remnant of the House of Judah;
 they will lead flocks there to pasture;
 among the houses of Ashkelon they will rest at evening;
 for Yahweh their God is going to deal kindly with them and restore their fortunes.

2 a. The threat of the day of Yahweh does not preclude hope of conversion. Salvation is promised to the 'humble' (or the 'poor'), v. 3.

b. Text obscure and variously interpreted 'Assemble together', 'Enter into yourselves', 'Bow down', 'Heap yourselves up', i.e. for the threshing, v. 2.

c. Meaning uncertain.

d. 'before you are driven' corr.; 'the birth of the decree' Hebr.

e. The 'humble' or 'poor', anawim in Hebr. These play a large part in the Bible. Though wisdom literature looks on poverty, resh, as the result of idleness, Pr 10:4, the prophets are aware that the poor are usually the oppressed, aniyyim; they demand justice for the weak and lowly, dallim, and for those in need, ebionim, Am 2:6f; Is 10:2; cf. Jb 34:28f; Si 4:1f; Jm 2:2f. The humane legislation of Dt shows the same attitude of mind, Dt 24:10f. With Zephaniah 'poverty' assumes a moral and eschatological significance, 3:11f, cf. Is 49:13; 66:2; Ps 22:26; 34:2f; 37:11f; 69:33; 74:19; 149:4, and see Mt 5:3+; Lk 1:52; 6:20; 7:22. In short, the anawim are those Israelites who submit to the will of God. In the LXX period, the word anaw (or ani) has the added meaning of thoughtfulness for others, Zc 9:9, cf. Si 1:27. It is to the 'poor' that the Messiah will be sent, Is 61:1, cf. Lk 4:18. He himself will be humble and gentle, Zc 9:9, cf. Mt 21:5, and the victim of oppression, Is 53:4; Ps 22:24.

f. Except for Gath (perhaps already in ruins) the federated Philistine towns are listed, the 'Confederacy of the Sea'. Following the precedent of Is 10:29-31 and Mi 1:10-15, Zephaniah plays on the names 'Gaza' and 'Ekron', making them omens of disaster.

g. 'I meant to bring you down' corr.; 'Canaan' Hebr.

h. 'you will be' corr.; 'she will be' Hebr. Hebr. inserts 'Confederacy of the Sea', absent from Greek.

i. According to Gn 19:30-38, Lot became father of Ammon and Moab after his escape from Sodom.

j. This promise of conversion for the 'islands' is probably an addition, since it envisages a wider horizon than Moab and Ammon. It seems to be based on Is 41:1,5; 42:4,10,12; 49:1; 51:5.

k. Ethiopia is used here for Egypt where an Ethiopian dynasty ruled shortly before the time of Zephaniah (from 715 to 663: the 25th dynasty). The oracle seems to be incomplete.

l. The great enemy and oppressor of Judah for nearly a century.

m. 'the valley' corr.; 'the people' Hebr. 'the owl' corr.; 'a voice' Hebr. 'the raven' Greek; 'desolation' Hebr. The line that follows is, in this context, obscure: 'for he has torn up the cedar' or, after correction, 'for I shall destroy the city'.

||Is 47:8,10

'Here am I, with none to equal me'?
 What a ruin she is now,
 a lair for beasts!
 All those who pass by her whistle and shake their fists.

Ps 55:9

'At least,' I used to say 'you will fear me now,
 you will learn the lesson;

 to see that all they did was corrupt.

7

Therefore, expect me—it is Yahweh who speaks—
 on the day I stand up to make my accusation;
 for I am determined to gather the nations,
 to assemble the kingdoms,
 and to pour out my fury on you,
 the whole heat of my anger.^c

Return of the exiles^j

I have taken away your misfortune,

3 a. 'he knows no injustice' corr.; 'the unjust man knows no shame' Hebr.

b. Lit. 'from her eyes cannot be cut off'. 'from her eyes' Greek, Syr.; 'her dwelling' Hebr.

c. 'to accuse' Greek, Syr.; 'for plunder' (or 'for ever') Hebr. 'to gather' Greek, Syr.; 'that I may gather' Hebr. 'on you' corr.; 'on them' Hebr. Hebr. adds at the end 'for by the fire of my jealousy the whole earth will be consumed', cf. 1:18. This emended text of v. 8 makes a conclusion to vv. 6-7 by declaring that Judah will be punished before the eyes of the pagans, as in Am 3:9-11. The Hebr. text as it stands speaks of the punishment of the nations.

d. Thus Greek and Syr.; Hebr. lit. 'with one shoulder'.

e. After 'my suppliants', Hebr. adds 'my Dis-person'. This promise of the conversion of Ethiopia, cf. Is 18:7; 19:18-25; 45:14, is probably not authentic. The Hebr. gloss ('my Dispersion') turns it into a promise to the Jews in exile.

f. This oracle prophesies that the ideal proposed in 2:3 will become a reality, and is one of the most perfect descriptions of 'the spirit of poverty' in the O.T.

g. The oracles of Zephaniah originally ended with these two psalms.

h. 'he will renew you' Greek, Syr.; 'he will be silent' Hebr.

i. The ritual dance played a large part in ancient ceremonial. 'as on a day of festival' Greek, Syr.; 'grieved far from the festival' Hebr.

j. V. 20 is a variant of v. 19, the latter being based on Mi 4:6. These oracles probably date from the exilic period.

no longer need you bear the disgrace of it.^k

I am taking action here and now

19 against your oppressors.

Mi 4:6

When that time comes I will rescue the lame, says Yahweh.

3 k. 'misfortune' corr.; 'they were' Hebr. 'no longer need you bear' following Greek, Syr., Targ.; 'a burden on her' Hebr.

l. 'when I restore their fortunes' corr.; 'their shame' Hebr.

m. Lit. 'at that time' corr.; 'at the time' Hebr.

HAGGAI

The movement to rebuild the Temple

1 I In the second year of King Darius, on the first day of the sixth month,^a the word of Yahweh was addressed through the prophet Haggai to Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, high commissioner of Judah, and to Joshua son of Jehozadak, the high priest, as follows, •Yahweh Sabaoth says this, "This people says: 2 The time has not yet come^b to rebuild the Temple of Yahweh. •(And the word of Yahweh was addressed through the prophet Haggai, as follows:) •Is this a time for you to live in your panelled houses, when this House lies in ruins? 3 So now, Yahweh Sabaoth says this: Reflect carefully how things have gone for you. •You have sown much and harvested little; you eat but never have enough, drink but never have your fill, put on clothes but do not feel warm. The 4 wage earner gets his wages only to put them in a purse riddled with holes. •So go to the hill country,^c fetch wood, and rebuild the House: I shall then take pleasure in it, and be glorified there, says Yahweh. •Yahweh Sabaoth says this: Reflect 5 carefully how things have gone for you. •The abundance you expected proved to be^d little. When you brought the harvest in, my breath spoilt it. And why?—it is Yahweh Sabaoth who speaks. Because while my House lies in ruins 6 you are busy with your own, each one of you. •That is why the sky has withheld the rain^e and the earth withheld its yield. •I have called down drought on land and hills, on wheat, on new wine, on oil and on all the produce of the ground, on man and beast and all their labours." 7

12 Now Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, Joshua son of Jehozadak, the high priest, and all the remnant^f of the people, paid attention to the voice of Yahweh their God and to the words of the prophet Haggai, Yahweh having sent him to them.^g 13 And the people were filled with fear before Yahweh. •Haggai, the messenger of Yahweh, passed on the message of Yahweh to the people, as follows, 'I am with you—it is Yahweh who speaks'. •And Yahweh roused the spirit of Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, high commissioner of Judah, the spirit of Joshua son of Jehozadak, the high priest, and the spirit of all the remnant of the people; and they came and set to work on the Temple of Yahweh Sabaoth their God. 14 This was on the twenty-fourth day of the sixth month.

The glory that is to come to the Temple

1 In the second year of King Darius, 2 on the twenty-first day of the seventh month,^a the word of Yahweh was addressed through the prophet Haggai,

1 a. August 520.

b. 'has not yet come' Greek, Vulg.; Hebr. unintelligible.

c. Probably the hill country of Judah.

d. Lit. 'and it was' Greek, Syr., Targ.; 'and behold' Hebr.

e. 'the rain' Targ.; 'the dew' Hebr.

f. In Hg and Zc 'the remnant of the people' means the faithful grouped round Jerusalem. Cf. Is 4:3 +.

g. Lit. 'as Yahweh had sent him to them' Greek; 'as Yahweh their God had sent him' Hebr.

2 a. October 520, the last day of the feast of Tabernacles.

as follows, •You are to speak to Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, the high 2 commissioner of Judah, to Joshua son of Jehozadak, the high priest, and to all^b the remnant of the people. Say this, •“Who is there left among you that saw 3 this Temple in its former glory? And how does it look to you now? Does it seem nothing to you? •But take courage now, Zerubbabel—it is Yahweh who 4 speaks. Courage, High Priest Joshua son of Jehozadak! Courage, all you people of the country!—it is Yahweh who speaks. To work! I am with you—it is Yahweh Sabaoth who speaks—• and my spirit remains among you. Do not 5 be afraid! •For Yahweh Sabaoth says this: A little while now,^d and I am going 6 to shake the heavens and the earth, the sea and the dry land.^e •I will shake all 7
 the nations and the treasures of all the nations shall flow in,^f and I will fill this Temple with glory, says Yahweh Sabaoth. •Mine is the silver, mine the gold! 8
 —it is Yahweh Sabaoth who speaks. •The new glory of this Temple is going to 9 surpass the old, says Yahweh Sabaoth, and in this place I will give peace—it is Yahweh Sabaoth who speaks.”^g

The prophet consults the priests

On the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month, in the second year of Darius,^h 10
 the word of Yahweh was addressed to the prophet Haggai as follows, •Yahweh 11 Sabaoth says this: Ask the priests for a decision on this question, •“If a man 12 carries consecrated meat in the fold of his gown and with this fold touches bread, broth, wine, or food of any kind, does such food become holy?”’ The priests answered, ‘No, it does not’. •Haggai then said, ‘If a man made unclean 13 by contact with a corpse touches any of this, does it become unclean?’ The priests answered, ‘Yes, it does!’ •Haggai then spoke out. ‘It is the same with 14 this people,’ he said ‘the same with this nation as I see it—it is Yahweh who speaks—the same with everything they turn their hands to;^j and what they offer here^k is unclean.’^l

A promise of agricultural prosperity^m

•Reflect carefully from today onwards. Before one stone had been laid on 15 another in the sanctuary of Yahweh, •what state were you in? A man would 16 come to a twenty-measure heap and there would be ten; he would come to a vat to draw fifty measures and there would be twenty.ⁿ •I struck with blight and 17 mildew and hail everything you turned your hands to. And still you would not return to me^o—it is Yahweh who speaks. •Reflect carefully from today onwards 18 (from the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month, from the day the foundation of the sanctuary of Yahweh was laid, think carefully)^p •if grain is still short 19 in the barn, and if vine and fig tree, pomegranate and olive, still bear no fruit.^q
 From today onwards I intend to bless you.’

The promise to Zerubbabel

On the twenty-fourth day of the month the word of Yahweh was addressed 20 a second time to Haggai, as follows, •Speak to Zerubbabel, the high commis- 21 sioner of Judah. Say this, “I am going to shake the heavens and the earth. •I will 22 overturn the thrones of kingdoms and destroy the power of the kings of the nations. I will overthrow the chariots and their charioteers; horses and their riders will be brought down; they shall fall,^r each to the sword of his fellow.
 When that day comes—it is Yahweh Sabaoth who speaks—I will take^s you, 23
 Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, my servant—it is Yahweh Sabaoth who speaks—and make you like a signet ring.^t For I have chosen you—it is Yahweh Sabaoth who speaks.”’

2 b. 'all' Greek.

c. Hebr. here inserts a gloss, absent from Greek 'This is the covenant (corr.) which I made with you when you went out of Egypt'.

d. Hebr. adds 'soon'.

e. For Haggai, God is the sole master of history. While the prophet is foretelling the disaster, cf. Am 5: 18+; 8:9+, which is to introduce the new era, the world is at peace under the rule of Darius. The imminent worldwide catastrophe and the rebuilding of the Temple will herald the messianic age.

f. The Vulg. translation alludes to the Messiah 'And the Desired of all nations will come'; hence the liturgical use of this text during Advent.

g. The Temple, cf. 2 S 7:13+, has become a focal point of the messianic hope, as for Ezekiel. And in fact it was in this second Temple, restored by Herod, that Christ taught. Greek adds 'and peace of soul, to save all those who laid the foundations for the rebuilding of this Temple'.

h. December 520.

i. 'Uncleanness' is apparently more contagious than holiness, i.e. from the ritual point of view.

j. I.e. the harvests.

k. Worship continued on the site of the Temple, where the altar of holocausts had been rebuilt since 538. Haggai points the lesson from the ruling of v. 13: the nation is unclean, and its sacrificial offerings are too.

This accusation, contrasting with 2:1-9 in its severity, may possibly be directed against the Samaritans, cf. Ezr 4:1-5.

l. Greek adds 'because of their quickly won gains, they will suffer for their labours, and you hated those dispensing justice at the city gate' (cf. Am 5:10).

m. This passage, which completes 1:1-15, should perhaps be read after 1:15a.

n. 'What state were you in?' Greek. 'A man (lit. 'they') would come' corr.; 'He would come' Hebr.; 'You would come' Greek. After 'vat', Hebr. adds 'press'.

o. 'I struck' corr.; 'I struck you' Hebr. 'And ... to me' Greek.

p. A partly inaccurate gloss, cf. 1:15.

q. We insert 'is short'. 'and if still' Greek.

r. 'kings' Greek; 'kingdoms' Hebr. 'they shall fall' corr.

s. The expression implies election to a notable function in the history of salvation. Thus Yahweh 'takes' Abraham, Jos 24:3, the Levites, Nb 3:12, David, 2 S 7:8. Zerubbabel, a successor of David, is now associated with traditional royal messianism, cf. 2 S 7:1+; Is 7:14+, and the messianic expectation takes shape about his person. Cf. Zc 6:12.

t. The signet ring, used for the sealing of documents or letters, 1 K 21:8, was kept carefully hung from the neck, Gn 38:18, or worn on the finger, Jr 22:24.

ZECHARIAH

FIRST PART

A summons to conversion

1 In the second year of Darius, in the eighth month,^a the word of Yahweh ¹ was addressed to the prophet Zechariah (son of Berechiah),^b son of Iddo, ² as follows,^c •“Cry out to the remnant of this people and say to them, “Yahweh ³
Sabaoth says this: Return to me,^d and I will return to you, says Yahweh Sabaoth. ⁴
Do not be like your ancestors, to whom the prophets in the past cried: Yahweh ⁵ Sabaoth says this: Turn back from your evil ways and evil deeds. But—it is ^{6a} Yahweh who speaks—they would not listen or pay attention to me. •Where are ⁷⁻¹⁴ your ancestors now? Are those prophets still alive? •Did not my words and my ⁸ orders, with which I charged my servants the prophets, overtake your ancestors?^e ⁹ Yahweh was stirred to anger against your ancestors.”’ •This reduced them to ¹⁰ such confusion^f that they said, ‘Yahweh Sabaoth has treated us as he resolved ¹¹ to do, and as our ways and deeds deserved.’ ¹²

6:2-7 Rv 6:2-8 First vision: the horsemen

On the twenty-fourth day of the eleventh month (the month of Shebat), ¹ in the second year of Darius,^g the word of Yahweh was addressed to the prophet ² Zechariah (son of Berechiah), son of Iddo, as follows, •I saw a vision during ³ the night. It was this: a man was standing^h among the deep-rooted myrtles; ⁴ behind him were horses, red and sorrel and black and white.ⁱ •I said: What are ⁵ these, my lord? (And the angel who was talking to me said, “I will explain to ^{6:4f} you what they are”.) •The man standing among the myrtles answered, “They ⁷ are those whom Yahweh has sent to patrol throughout the world”. •They then ⁸ spoke to the angel of Yahweh^j standing among the myrtles; they said, “We have ⁹ been patrolling the world, and see, the whole world is at peace and rest”.^k •The ¹⁰ angel of Yahweh then spoke and said, “Yahweh Sabaoth, how long will you ¹¹ wait before taking pity on Jerusalem and the cities of Judah, on which you have ¹² inflicted your anger for the past seventy years?” •Yahweh then replied with very ¹³ consoling words to the angel who was talking to me. •The angel who was talking ¹⁴ to me then said to me, “Make this proclamation: Yahweh Sabaoth says this: ¹⁵
I feel most jealous love for Jerusalem and Zion, •but very bitter anger against ¹⁶
the proud nations;^l for my part I was only a little angry, but they have over- ¹⁷ stepped all limits. •Yahweh, then, says this. I turn again in compassion to ¹⁸ Jerusalem; my Temple there shall be rebuilt—it is Yahweh Sabaoth who speaks— ¹⁹ and the measuring line will be stretched over Jerusalem. •Make this proclamation ²⁰ too: Yahweh Sabaoth says this: My cities are once more going to be very ²¹ prosperous. Yahweh will again take pity^m on Zion, again make Jerusalem his ²² very own.”’

Second vision: the horns and the smiths

¹ Then, raising my eyes, I saw a vision. It was this: there were four horns.^a Ps 75:4-5
¹⁸ I said to the angel who was talking to me, 'What are these horns, my lord?'^b Dt 33:17
² He said to me, 'These are the horns which have scattered Judah (Israel) and Dn 7:8
^{3,4} Jerusalem'. 'Yahweh then showed me four smiths'.^c • And I said, 'What are Jr 48:25
^{20,21} these coming to do?' He said to me, '(Those are the horns which have so scattered Judah that no one has dared to raise his head; but) these have come to lay them low^d (to strike down the horns of the nations who lifted their hands against the land of Judah, in order to scatter it)'.

Third vision: the measurer

⁵ Then, raising my eyes, I saw a vision. It was this: there was a man with a measuring line in his hand. • I asked him, 'Where are you going?' He said, 'To I:16
¹ measure Jerusalem, to find out her breadth and her length'.^e • And then, while Jr 31:38-39
⁶ the angel who was talking to me stood still,^f another angel came forward to Ezk 41:13 ² meet him. • He said to him, 'Run, and tell that young man^g this, "Jerusalem is Rv 11:1;
⁷ to remain unwallled, because of the great number of men and cattle there will be 21:15
⁸ in her. • But I—it is Yahweh who speaks—I will be a wall of fire for her all Is 49:19-20;
⁹ round her, and I will be her glory in the midst of her."^h Jr 31:27
⁵ Rv 21:3;
^{22:3}

Two exhortations to the exiles

¹⁰ Up, up, and leave the land of the North (it is Yahweh who speaks)! Is 48:20
⁶ (For to the four winds of heaven Jr 50:8; ¹¹ I have scattered you—it is Yahweh who speaks.) 51:6
⁷ Zion,ⁱ up! Dweller in^j Babylon, flee!
¹² For Yahweh Sabaoth says this ⁸ (he whose glory has sent me here)
 as regards the nations who despoiled you (for whoever touches you touches the apple of my eye):^k Dt 32:10
¹³ See now, I raise my hand over them, Jr 17:8
⁹ for them to be plunder for their slaves.
 (And you will know that Yahweh Sabaoth has sent me.) Is 14:2
¹⁴ Sing, rejoice, Zp 2:9
¹⁰ daughter of Zion;
 for I am coming to dwell in the middle of you
 —it is Yahweh who speaks.

1 a. October-November 520, two months after the first prophecy of Haggai.

b. A gloss suggested by Is 8:2. According to Ezr 5:1; 6:14; Ne 12:16, Zechariah was the son of Iddo. c. Read v. 2 between 6a and 6b.

d. 'Cry out to the remnant of this people' corr., cf. 8:6,11,12. After 'Return to me' Hebr. adds 'it is Yahweh Sabaoth who speaks' (lit. 'oracle of Yahweh Sabaoth'), absent from Greek.

e. Man dies but the word of God remains (here personified as in Ps 147:15; Is 55:11; Ws 18:14-15). Cf. Is 40:7-8.

f. Hebr. 'This brought them to conversion'.

g. The middle of February, 519.

h. Hebr. adds 'was riding a red horse'.

i. 'black' corr. The vision makes a monotheistic use of certain elements the origins of which seem to be mythological. The myrtle trees appear to have their roots in the depths of the abyss. The standing man is the angel of Yahweh. The horses, a symbol representing the angels who have the world under their surveillance, probably form four groups (cf. 6:2f) associated with the four points of the compass or the four winds; according to v. 11, they have riders.

j. In the ancient texts, cf. Gn 16:7+, the 'angel of Yahweh' was Yahweh himself in visible form; subsequently this 'angel' became, as here, a separate individual to whom men and angels must have recourse for access to God.

k. In February 519, under the rule of Darius, there is worldwide peace. Israel finds this peace disquieting since the new era is to be heralded by great disturbances.

l. Those especially who were neighbours of Judah.

m. 'will take pity' Greek; 'will comfort' Hebr.

2 a. The horns, symbolic of strength, Ps 75:4+, are the nations hostile to Judah. The number four symbolises their universality.

b. 'my lord' Greek and Syr.

c. Symbolising the angelic powers.

d. 'to lay them low' corr.; 'to terrify them' Hebr.

e. As in Ezk 41:13, the measurements are taken with a view to rebuilding. The measurer is an angel.

f. 'stood still' Greek; 'came forward' Hebr.

g. The angel with the measuring line.

h. 'he whose glory has sent me here' corr.; 'after Yahweh himself, having returned to his Temple, cf. Ezk 43:1f.

i. Zion here means the exiles, as in Is 51:16.

j. Hebr. has 'Dweller with the daughter of Babylon'.

k. 'he whose glory has sent me here' corr.; 'after the glory (i.e. the vision) he has sent me here' Hebr. 'my eye' corr.; 'his eye' Hebr.

Is 45:22 Many nations will join Yahweh, 15
 on that day; 11
 they will become his people.^l
 (But he will remain^m among you, and you will know that Yahweh Sabaoth has sent me to you.)
 But Yahweh will hold Judah 16
 as his portion in the Holy Land,ⁿ 12
 and again make Jerusalem his very own.
 Let all mankind be silent before Yahweh! 17
 For he is awaking and is coming from his holy dwelling.^o 13

Fourth vision: the investiture of Joshua

Jb 1:6+; 30:12 3 He^a showed me Joshua the high priest, standing before the angel of Yahweh, 1
 Hg 1:1 with Satan standing on his right to accuse him.^b •The angel of Yahweh^c 2
 Jude 9 said to Satan, 'May Yahweh rebuke you, Satan, may Yahweh rebuke you, he

Sixth vision: the flying scroll

1 Again I raised my eyes, and this is what I saw: a flying scroll. • The angel who was talking to me^a said, 'What can you see?' I replied, 'I can see a flying
3 scroll; it is twenty cubits long and ten cubits broad'.^b • He then said to me, 'This is the Curse sweeping across the face of the whole country. According to what it says, every thief will be banished; according to what it says, everyone

1. 'his' Greek; 'my' Hebr. The covenant is here extended to all the nations: Jerusalem is to be the religious centre of the whole world, cf. Is 45:14+.

m. 'he will remain' corr.; 'I shall remain' Hebr.; 'they will remain' Greek.

n. The first occurrence of this expression in the Bible. Cf. 2 M 1:7.

o. Yahweh will return from his heavenly temple to his earthly one. Cf. Ezk 43:1f.

3 a. Yahweh.

b. At the gate of heaven the angel of Yahweh presides over a court of justice. At the right hand of the High Priest Joshua stands a malevolent angel, Satan (lit. 'the satan', i.e. 'the accuser'), who is the enemy of man, cf. Jb 1:6+.

c. 'The angel of Yahweh' Syr.; 'Yahweh' Hebr.

d. Joshua represents the Jewish people.

e. A sign of mourning, either for one dead or for a national calamity; in the latter case it implies admission of guilt, cf. v. 4b.

f. 'of Yahweh' Greek and Syr.

g. 'clothe him' Greek; 'I shall clothe you' Hebr.

h. Following the Greek. 'splendid' corr. The national mourning since 587 is now over.

i. Here Joshua is no longer addressed as the representative of the people: the promise is made to Joshua personally and to a future priesthood which he portends, cf. 3:8.

j. The priests are to have access to God, sharing the mediating function of the angels, cf. Ml 2:7. V. 8 is read between 9a and 9b.

k. This stone presumably stands for the Temple. The seven eyes are symbolic of the watchful presence of Yahweh, 4:10. The inscription ('Sacred to Yahweh') has not yet been cut: the building is not finished.

l. 'you are' Syr.; 'they are' Hebr. The reconstitution of the priesthood is an omen of the messianic age.

m. This messianic title, cf. Jr 23:5+, does not yet seem to be applied to Zerubbabel, as it is in 6:12. For 'Branch', Greek reads 'rising Sun', cf. Lk 1:78.

4 a. 'I answered' Greek and qere; 'he answered' ketib.

b. The upper part of the lamp-stand was a bowl with a broad rim on which were seven lamps of clay or metal, each with seven protuberances ('lips') where the wicks rested. Possibly the bowl was filled with water to extinguish the falling pieces of wick.

c. 'to the right of it' (i.e. of the lamp-stand) corr.; 'to the right' (of the bowl) Hebr.

d. Vv. 6b-10a are read after v. 14.

e. Symbol of the omniscience and watchfulness of God.

f. 'the oil' corr.; 'the gold' Hebr.

g. Man is frequently compared to a tree, Jr 11:19; Ps 1:3; Jb 29:19; Ezk 31. The two anointed ones (lit. 'sons of the oil') are Joshua and Zerubbabel, representing the spiritual and temporal power respectively. Joshua is anointed to the priesthood, Lv 4:3,5,16, and Zerubbabel, it is hoped, will be anointed king. This will fulfil Jr 33:14-18: the spiritual and the temporal power are to be closely associated in the messianic age.

h. Possibly the mountain of debris from which the keystone of the old Temple will be recovered, cf. vv. 9-10.

i. The day Zerubbabel re-lays the foundations, Hg 2:3, Zerubbabel will also complete the building by placing the stone of v. 7.

j. 'the chosen stone' corr.; 'the stone, the plummet' Hebr.; 'the plummet stone' Greek.

5 a. 'The angel who was talking to me' corr.

b. The scroll is of immense size: its measurements are those of the Ulam or vestibule of the Temple of Solomon, 1 K 6:3.

c. 'falsely by my name' added in accordance with v. 4. The curse is conceived as having a force of its own. It overtakes all sinners, of whom the Holy Land will be free in the messianic age.

d. 'I am going to let it loose' Greek; 'I did let it loose' Hebr.

e. Lit. 'an ephah'. But here it is much larger than the common ephah.

f. 'their iniquity' Greek; 'their eyes' Hebr.

g. 'I saw' corr. following Greek.

this is what I saw: two women appearing. The wind caught their wings—they had wings like a stork's; they raised the bushel midway between earth and heaven. •I then said to the angel who was talking to me, 'Where are they taking the bushel?' •He replied, 'They mean to build a temple for it in the land of Shinar, and to make a plinth on which to place it'.^a

Eighth vision: the chariots

6 Again I raised my eyes, and this is what I saw: four chariots coming out between the two mountains, and the mountains were mountains of bronze.^a
 ✎ Rv 6:2-8 The first chariot had red horses, the second chariot had black horses, •the third chariot had white horses and the fourth chariot had (vigorous) piebald horses. •I asked the angel who was talking to me, I said, 'What is the meaning of these, my lord?' •The angel answered, 'These are going out to^b the four winds of heaven after standing before the Lord of the whole world. •The red horses are going out to the country of the East; the black horses are going out to the country of the North; the white are going out to the country of the West^c and the piebald are going out to the country of the South.' •They came out vigorously, eager to patrol the world. He said to them, 'Go and patrol the world'. And they patrolled the world. •He called me and said to me, 'See, those going northward will make the spirit of Yahweh^d descend on the country of the North.' •And those who are far away will come and rebuild the sanctuary of Yahweh. (And you will learn that Yahweh Sabaoth has sent me to you.) (This will happen if you listen carefully to the voice of Yahweh your God.)

The votive crown

And the word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •'Take the offerings of the captives,^f of Heldai, Tobijah and Jedaiah, and go to the house of Josiah son of Zephaniah, who has arrived from Babylon.^g •Take the silver and gold, make a crown^h and set it on the head of Joshua son of Jehozadak, the high priest.ⁱ •And say this to him, "Yahweh Sabaoth says this: Here is a man whose name is Branch; where he is, there will be a branching out^j (and he will rebuild the sanctuary of Yahweh). •It is he who is going to rebuild the sanctuary of Yahweh. It is he who is going to wear the royal insignia. He will sit on his throne as ruler. And a priest shall be at his right hand.^k Perfect peace will reign between these two; •while the crown will be a glorious memorial to Heldai, Tobijah and Jedaiah, and to Josiah, son of Zephaniah, in the sanctuary of Yahweh."'

A question on fasting

7 In the fourth year of King Darius (the word of Yahweh was addressed to Zechariah), on the fourth day of the ninth month^a (the month of Chislev), Bethel sent Sharezer and his men to entreat the favour of Yahweh •and to say to the priests in the Temple of Yahweh Sabaoth, and to his prophets, 'Ought I to go on mourning and fasting in the fifth month as I have been doing for so many years past?'^b

The nation's past surveyed^c

Then the word of Yahweh Sabaoth was addressed to me as follows, •'Say to all the people of the country, and to the priests, "While you have been fasting and mourning in the fifth and seventh months for the past seventy years, was it for my sake you fasted so rigorously? •And when you were eating and drinking, were not you the eaters and you the drinkers?^d •Do you not know the words which Yahweh proclaimed through the prophets in the past, when Jerusalem was inhabited and secure, with her surrounding towns, and when the Negeb and the Lowlands were inhabited? (•The word of Yahweh was addressed to Zechariah as follows: •Yahweh Sabaoth says this.) He said: Apply the law fairly, and practise kindness and compassion towards each other. •Do not

- 10 oppress the widow and the orphan, the settler and the poor man, and do not 11 secretly plan evil against one another. •But they would not pay attention; they 12 turned a petulant shoulder; they stopped their ears rather than hear;• they made their hearts adamant rather than listen to the teaching and the words that Yahweh Sabaoth had sent by his spirit through the prophets in the past. This aroused 13 great anger on the part of Yahweh Sabaoth. •And this is what happened, since he kept calling them and they would not listen (similarly they will call and 14 I shall not listen, says Yahweh Sabaoth): •he scattered them* throughout nations unknown to them; hence the country was reduced to desolation behind them, and no one came or went. They turned a land of delights into a desert.” ’

h. Text corr. following Greek. In the messianic age the Holy Land will be rid of Wickedness (impiety personified). Wickedness now becomes a false goddess for whom a temple is built in Shinar (Babylon), which here symbolises the centre of the pagan world.

6 a. The image is borrowed from Babylonian mythology; these mountains flanked the approach to the abode of the gods.

b. ‘to’ conj. in accordance with the following verses.

c. ‘The red are going out to the country of the East’ and ‘to the country of the West’: corr.

d. ‘the spirit of Yahweh’ corr.; ‘my spirit’ Hebr.

e. Where the exiles are. Impelled by the spirit of Yahweh, these will return and rebuild the Temple, cf. v. 15, which must be transposed here.

f. With the Greek. Hebr. ‘Take from the captives’. These are the exiles who have come back to Palestine.

g. These people are otherwise unknown. Hebr. inserts ‘and go the same day’ before ‘and go to the house’.

h. Hebr. ‘crowns’, but cf. v. 14.

i. It is evident from vv. 12-13 that the original text read ‘Zerubbabel’, Joshua son of Jehozadak the high priest’ having been substituted at a later period when the high priest had become head of the community.

j. Playing on the messianic title, ‘Branch’, Jr 23:5+, and promising successors to Zerubbabel who is now associated with the dynastic messianism of 2 S 7, cf.

Hg 2:23+. The prophet foresees the future of the Royal House and presumably of the Temple.

k. ‘at his right hand’ Greek; ‘on his throne’ Hebr.

l. ‘the crown’ Greek; ‘the crowns’ Hebr. ‘Heldai’ Syr.; ‘Helem’ Hebr. ‘Josiah’ conj., cf. v. 10; ‘Hen’ Hebr. For v. 15 cf. after v. 8.

7 a. November 518.

b. The destruction of Jerusalem and of the Temple in June-July 587 had been commemorated by a fast in the month of July. Now that the rebuilding has begun fasting seems out of place, hence the question put to the authorities in Jerusalem. The answer is apparently not given until 8:18-19.

c. This oracle has been arbitrarily attached to the incident of the embassy from Bethel because of the mention of fasting, v. 5. The September fast commemorated the murder of Gedaliah, 2 K 25:25; Jr 41:1f.

d. Whether fasting or feasting they were motivated by self-interest.

e. Hebr. ‘and I scattered them’.

8 a. This chapter is a collection of short independent oracles; with the exception of 8:16-17, which is an instruction, they all deal with the messianic age, described as an age of simple happiness and of peace under the blessing of Yahweh, present in Zion. The perspective is widened in vv. 20f.

b. ‘Yahweh Sabaoth’ Greek and Vulg.

‘Yahweh Sabaoth says this.

Now I am going to save my people from the countries of the East and from the countries of the West.
I will bring them back^c
to live inside Jerusalem.

They shall be my people and I will be their God
in faithfulness and integrity.

‘Yahweh Sabaoth says this. Let your hands be strong, you who here and now listen to these words from the mouths of the prophets who have been prophesying since^d the day when the Temple of Yahweh Sabaoth had its foundation laid for the rebuilding of the sanctuary. •For before the present day men were not paid their wages and nothing was paid for the animals either;
and because of the enemy there was no security for a man to go about his business;
I had set^e every man against everyone else. •But now, with the remnant of this people, I am not as I was in the past. It is Yahweh Sabaoth who speaks. •For I mean to spread peace everywhere;^f the vine will give its fruit, the earth its increase, and heaven its dew. I am going to bestow all these blessings on the remnant of this people. •Just as once you were a curse among the nations, you House of Judah (and House of Israel), so I mean to save you for you to become a blessing. Do not be afraid; let your hands be strong.

For Yahweh Sabaoth says this. Just as I once resolved to inflict evil on you when your ancestors provoked me—says Yahweh Sabaoth—and as I did not then relent, •so now I have another purpose, and I intend in the present day to confer benefits on Jerusalem and on the House of Judah. Do not be afraid.

‘These are the things that you must do. Speak the truth to one another;
let the judgements at your gates be such as conduce to peace; •do not secretly plot evil against one another; do not love false oaths; since all this is what I hate. It is Yahweh who speaks.’

7:1-3 The answer to the question on fasting

The word of Yahweh Sabaoth was addressed to me as follows:

‘Yahweh Sabaoth says this. The fast of the fourth month, the fast of the fifth, the fast of the seventh and the fast of the tenth are to become gladness and happiness and days of joyful feasting for the House of Judah.^g But love the truth and peace!

1 K 8:43 Is 2:2 A prospect of messianic salvation

‘Yahweh Sabaoth says this. There will be other peoples yet, and citizens of great cities. •And the inhabitants of one city will go to the next and say, “Come, let us go and entreat the favour of Yahweh, and seek Yahweh Sabaoth; I am going myself”. •And many peoples and great nations will come to seek Yahweh Sabaoth in Jerusalem and to entreat the favour of Yahweh.

‘Yahweh Sabaoth says this. In those days, ten men of nations of every language will take a Jew by the sleeve and say, “We want to go with you, since we have learnt that God is with you”.’

SECOND PART

9 An oracle.

The new promised land^a

Yahweh has passed^b
through the land of Hadrach

and Damascus is his dwelling place;
 for the cities of Aram^c belong to Yahweh
 no less than all the tribes of Israel;
 Hamath too, which borders on it,
 (Tyre) and Sidon also, despite her acumen.
 Tyre has built herself a rampart, has heaped up silver like dust
 and gold like the dirt of the streets.
 And now the Lord is going to take possession of her;
 he will topple her power into the sea;
 she herself will be consumed by fire.
 Seeing this, Ashkelon will be terrified,
 and Gaza be seized with trembling,
 so will Ekron, at the ruin of her prospects;
 the king will vanish from Gaza
 and Ashkelon remain unpeopled,
 but the bastard^d will live in Ashdod!
 I mean to destroy the arrogance of the Philistine;
 I intend to take his blood out of his mouth and his abomination from between his teeth.^e
 He too will become a remnant for our God and be like a family^f in Judah:
 Ekron shall be like the Jebusite.^g
 Near my house^h I will take my stand like a watchman on guard against prowlers;
 the tyrant shall pass their way no more,
 because I have now taken notice of its distress.ⁱ

c. Not, as in 2:10f, the exiles from Babylon only, but the Jews scattered throughout the world. Their return will be followed by a renewal of the covenant, cf. Jr 31:31 +.

d. 'since' Greek; 'on' Hebr.

e. 'I had set' corr.; 'I shall set' Hebr.

f. 'I mean to spread peace everywhere' corr.; 'sowing of peace' Hebr.

g. To the fasts of the 5th and 7th months, cf. 7:3,5, there are here added those of the 4th and 10th which commemorated the breaching of the walls of Jerusalem, 2 K 25:1,4, and the beginning of the siege.

9 a. The Promised Land will embrace not only Israelite territory, cf. Jg 20:1+, but Aramaean, Phoenician and Philistine cities. The oracle alludes to a victorious campaign (probably that of Alexander after Issus, 333) interpreted as a campaign of Yahweh himself as prelude to the messianic age.

b. 'Yahweh has passed' corr.; 'Word of Yahweh' Hebr.

c. 'the cities of Aram' corr.; 'the eye of Adam (or, 'of man') Hebr.

d. A mixed population resulting from forced colonisation.

e. Alluding to the pagan practice of eating flesh with the blood in it, cf. Lv 1:5+, and of eating forbidden meat, such as pork, cf. Is 65:4; 66:17.

f. 'a family' corr.; 'a tribal chief' Hebr.

j. The first adjective (lit. 'upright'; 'just') does not mean that he dispenses justice, cf. Is 11:3-5, but that he is the recipient of God's 'justice', i.e. of God's powerful protection, cf. Is 45:21-25. The second (lit. 'saved') has much the same meaning here.

k. The Messiah is to be 'humble' (ani), a characteristic attributed in Zp 3:12 to the future people of God, cf. Zp 2:3+. Renouncing the panoply of the historic kings, Jr 17:25; 22:4, the messianic king will ride the traditional mount of princes, Gn 49:11; Jg 5:10; 10:4; 12:14. Compare also 1 K 1:38 with 1 K 1:5. With this prophecy in mind Jesus entered Jerusalem riding on a donkey.

d. This passage is a mixture of fragments in which Yahweh speaks, vv. 3a,6,8-11, and others in which Yahweh is spoken of in the third person, vv. 3b,5,7,12, 11:1-3.

e. 'will take care of' Greek; 'has taken care of' Hebr. The verb (often translated 'visit') in this line has a favourable sense, though in the preceding line the sense of 'punishment': the 'shepherds', cf. Is 44:28; Jr 25:34f; Na 3:18, and 'he-goats', cf. Dn 8:5f, are the foreign tyrants ruling the people of God.

the mighty ones have been brought low!)
 Wail, oaks of Bashan,

 The wailing of the shepherds is heard;
 their glorious pastures^b have been ruined.
 The roaring of the young lions is heard;
 the thickets of the Jordan have been laid waste.

Ezk 34:1 + The two shepherds^c

Jr 12:3 This is how Yahweh spoke to me,^d 'Pasture the sheep bred for slaughter, •whose 4 buyers kill them and go unpunished, whose sellers say of them, "Blessed be 5 Yahweh; now I am rich!" and their shepherds handle^e them without kindness.
 (For no longer am I going to show kindness to the inhabitants of the world—it is 6 Yahweh who speaks. But instead I mean to hand over every man to the next, and to his king. They shall devastate the world and I will not deliver them 7 from their hands.)^f •Then I began to pasture these sheep bred for slaughter for 7 the sheepdealers.^g I took two staves: one I called Goodwill, the other Union. 8
 And so I began to pasture the sheep. •I dismissed the three shepherds in one 8 month.^h But I began to dislike the sheep, and they equally detested me.ⁱ •I then 9 said, 'I am going to pasture you no longer; let those that wish to die, die; let 9 those that wish to perish, perish; and let those that are left devour each other's 10 flesh!' •I then took my staff, Goodwill, and broke it in half, to break the covenant 10 Yahweh had made with all the peoples.^j •When it was broken, that day the 11 dealers, who were watching me, realised that this had been a word of Yahweh.
 I then said to them, 'If you think it right, give me my wages; if not, never mind'. 12
 And they weighed out my wages: thirty shekels of silver.^k •But Yahweh told me, 13
 'Throw it into the treasury, this princely sum at which they have valued me'.^l
 Taking the thirty shekels of silver, I threw them into the Temple of Yahweh, 13 into the treasury. •I then broke my second staff, Union, in half, to break the 14
 brotherhood between Judah and Israel.^m

Ezk 34:2-4 Next, Yahweh said to me, 'Now take the gear of an incompetent 15 shepherd.ⁿ •For I am now going to raise an incompetent shepherd in this country. 16
 He will not bother about the lost; he will not look for the stray; he will not 16 heal the wounded; he will not support the weary; but he will only eat the flesh of the fat beasts and tear off their hoofs.

Jn 10:12-13 'Trouble is coming to the worthless shepherd 17 who deserts the flock!
 May the sword strike his arm
 and his right eye!
 May his arm wither entirely,
 may his eye be totally blinded!'

Jl 4:1 The deliverance and restoration of Jerusalem

Gn 2:7
Ps 33:15
Is 42:5
12 An oracle. The word of Yahweh about Israel. It is Yahweh who speaks, 1 who spread out the heaven and founded the earth and formed the spirit of man within him:

Is 51:17 + 'Look, I am going to make Jerusalem an intoxicating cup to all the surrounding 2 peoples. . .^a

'When that day comes, I mean to make Jerusalem a stone to be lifted by all 3 the peoples; all who try to lift it will hurt themselves severely. (And all the nations of the earth will mass against her.) •When that day comes—it is Yahweh 4 who speaks—I intend to strike all the horses with confusion and their riders with madness. (But on the House of Judah I will open my eyes.) And I will strike all the horses of the peoples with blindness. •Then the clans of Judah will say 5 in their hearts, "Strength for the citizens of Jerusalem is in Yahweh Sabaoth

- 6 their God".^b •When that day comes I mean to make the clans of Judah like a brazier burning in a pile of wood, like a flaming torch in stubble; and they will consume the peoples round them to right and left. And Jerusalem shall stand =14:10
- 7 firm in her place.^c •Yahweh will save the tents of Judah first to forestall the arrogance of the House of David and the arrogance of the citizens of Jerusalem
- 8 from rising to the detriment of Judah. •When that day comes, Yahweh will spread his protection over the citizens of Jerusalem; the one among them who was about to fall will be like David on that day, and the House of David^d will be like God (like the angel of Yahweh) at their head.
- 9 •When that day comes, I shall set myself to destroy all the nations who 14:3
- 10 advance against Jerusalem. •But over the House of David and the citizens of Mt 24:30
- Jerusalem I will pour out a spirit of kindness and prayer. They will look on the Jn 3:14+; 19:37

- will be great mourning in Judah, like the mourning of Hadad-rimmon in the 3:16
- 12 plain of Megiddo. •And the country will mourn clan by clan; the clan of the Col 1:15,18
- 13 House of David apart, with their wives by themselves; •the clan of the House of Nathan^f apart, with their wives by themselves; the clan of the House of Levi apart, with their wives by themselves; the clan of Shimei^g apart, with their
- 14 wives by themselves. •All the clans that remain, clan by clan, with their wives

b. 'glorious pastures' corr.; cf. Jr 25:36; 'glory' Hebr.

c. This section on the shepherds, cf. Ezk 34:1+, ends with a messianic prophecy, in 13:7-9. Here, in vv. 4-14, recent events are reviewed allegorically and Providence is vindicated. The prophet acts the part of Yahweh, whose sovereign pastoral charge he has, as it were, taken on himself. But Israel has not understood the benefits God wanted to confer; Yahweh will therefore give them a wicked shepherd, whom the prophet is ordered to mime, vv. 15-17, acting the return to former infidelities.

d. 'Yahweh spoke to me' corr.; 'Yahweh my God spoke' Hebr.

e. 'say', 'handle' corr.; Hebr. reads the singular. The buyers and sellers are the Jewish ruling classes: money and intrigue give them control over the 'shepherds' of the people.

f. This verse, referring to international catastrophe, is a gloss alien to the context.

g. Lit. 'for the Canaanites (a term often used for dealers) of the sheep' following Greek; 'certainly the most wretched of the sheep' Hebr.

h. Alluding to a succession of high priests deposed by Yahweh, whose part is here acted and spoken by the prophet. After the Exile the priests were the heads of the Jewish community. The 'month' symbolises the time of God's favour of which the Jews have not taken advantage.

i. The nation proves to be ungovernable.

j. 'the covenant Yahweh had made' corr.; 'my covenant that I had made' Hebr. Yahweh will no longer protect the Jewish nation from its neighbours.

k. A ruler has a right to remuneration, cf. Ne 5:15. In this allegory the wages given by the ruling classes to the prophet (who represents Yahweh) are insultingly small—the price of a slave, Ex 31:32. In brief, they are laughing at Yahweh. Mt 27:3-10 applies vv. 12-13 to Jesus of whom the prophet (playing the part of Yahweh) is the antetype.

l. 'into the treasury' Syr., Targ.; 'to the potter' Hebr.; 'into the furnace' Greek. According to

2 M 3:4f, private as well as public funds could be deposited in the Temple treasury.

m. This passage may be the earliest evidence we have of the Samaritan schism. According to Josephus, it was in about the year 328 that the Samaritans built a rival temple on Mount Gerizim. In this case, the breaking of the staves symbolises the recrudescence of foreign oppression (v. 10) and the definitive schism at home.

n. 'incompetent' conj.

12 a. Hebr. adds a sentence which is practically untranslatable. It may be considered a double gloss, wrongly inserted here, on the title of v. 1: 'and about Judah, (which) will be besieged'; 'with regard to Jerusalem'. The Greek harmonises 'And in Judah there will be siege-works against Jerusalem'.

b. 'clans' corr.; 'leaders' Hebr.; so also in v. 6. 'for the citizens' corr.; 'for me, the citizens' Hebr.

c. Hebr. adds 'in Jerusalem'.

d. In the messianic age the Davidic dynasty will be restored.

e. 'the one' Theodotion, Jn 19:37; 'me' Hebr. The death of the Pierced One occurs in an eschatological context (cf. Rv 1:7), cf. the raising of the siege of Jerusalem, the national mourning, vv. 10-14, the opening of a fountain of salvation, 13:1. The messianic age thus depends on a passion and a mysterious death comparable to the sufferings of the servant in Is 52:13-53:12. Jn 19:37 sees in this passage the figure of the Passion of Christ, the 'only son' and the 'first-born', cf. Jn 1:18; Col 1:15, whose pierced body will be 'looked on' with the saving eye of faith, cf. Jn 3:14+; Nb 21:8-9, and whose opened side is a fountain of salvation, cf. Jn 19:34; 7:38.

f. I.e. Nathan son of David, 2 S 5:14f.

g. I.e. Shimei, a descendant of Gershom son of Levi, cf. Nb 3:21.

13 a. Prophecy as an institution is to cease, the false prophets having discredited it by their abuses, cf. Jr 23:9f; Ezk 13.

lies in the name of Yahweh". And while he is prophesying, his father and the mother who gave him birth shall run him through. •When that day comes, 4 2 K 1:8 every prophet shall be ashamed of his prophetic vision; they will no longer put

 I am a peasant; the land has been my living^b ever since I was a boy." •And if 6 1 K 18:28 anyone asks him, "Then what are these wounds on your body?" he will reply,
 "These I received in the house of my friends".^c

Invocation to the sword; the new people^d

 it is Yahweh who speaks—

 and the remaining third will be left.

 and refine them as silver is refined,
 test them as gold is tested.
 Ps 91:15 They will call on my name
 Is 65:24 and I shall listen;

The eschatological battle; the splendour of Jerusalem^a 14 See, a day is coming for Yahweh when the spoils taken from you will 1 be divided among you. •Yahweh will^b gather all the nations to Jerusalem 2 for battle. The city will be taken, the houses plundered, the women ravished.

 12:9 Half the city will go into captivity, but the remnant of the people will not be cut off from the city. •Then Yahweh will take the field; he will fight against 3
 Mi 1:4 these nations as he fights in the day of battle. •On that day, his feet will rest on 4
 Ac 1:11 the Mount of Olives, which faces Jerusalem from the east. The Mount of Olives will be split in half from east to west, forming a huge gorge; half the Mount will recede northwards, the other half southwards. •And the Vale of Hinnom will 5 Jr 31:39 be filled up from Goah to Jasol;^c it will be blocked as it was^d by the earthquake Am 1:1 in the days of Uzziah king of Judah. Yahweh your God will come, and all the Mt 16:27p holy ones with him.^e
 1 Th 3:13

When that day comes, there will be no more cold, no more frost.^f •It will 6
 Rv 21:23 be a day of wonder—Yahweh knows it—with no alternation of day and night;
 Ezk 47:1+8, in the evening it will be light. •When that day comes, running waters will issue 8
 J1 4:18 from Jerusalem, half of them to the eastern sea, half of them to the western Jn 4:1+ sea; they will flow^g summer and winter. •And Yahweh will be king of the whole 9
 Ps 22:28 world. When that day comes, Yahweh will be unique and his name unique.^h •The 10
 Rv 11:15 entire country will be transformed into plain, from Geba to Rimmon =12:6 in the Negeb. And Jerusalem will be raised higher, though still in the same place; from the Gate of Benjamin to the site of the First Gate, that is to say to the Gate of the Corner and from the Tower of Hananel to the king's winepress,ⁱ Jr 31:40 people will make their homes. The ban will be lifted; Jerusalem will be safe to 11
 Rv 22:3 live in.

And this is the plague with which Yahweh will strike all the nations who 12
 Is 66:24 have fought against Jerusalem; their flesh will moulder^j while they are still standing on their feet; their eyes will rot in their sockets; their tongues will rot in their mouths. •And such will be the plague on the horses and mules, 15

- 13 camels and donkeys, and all the animals to be found in that camp. •When that day comes, a great terror will fall on them from Yahweh; each man will grab 14 his neighbour's hand and they will hit out at each other. •Even Judah will fight against Jerusalem. The wealth of all the surrounding nations will be heaped together: gold, silver, clothing, in vast quantity.^k Ezk 38:21
- 16 All who survive^l of all the nations that have marched against Jerusalem will go up year by year to worship the King, Yahweh Sabaoth, and to keep the feast
 17 of Tabernacles.^m •Should one of the races of the world fail to go up to Jerusalem
 18 to worship the King, Yahweh Sabaoth, there will be no rain for that one. •Should the race of Egypt fail to go up and pay its visit, on it willⁿ fall the plague which Yahweh will inflict on each one of those nations that fail to go up to keep the 19 feast of Tabernacles. •Such shall be the punishment for Egypt and for all the 20 nations that fail to go up to keep the feast of Tabernacles. •When that day comes, the horse bells will be inscribed with the words, 'Sacred to Yahweh', and in the Temple of Yahweh the very cooking pots will be as fine as the sprinkling 21 bowls at the altar. •And every cooking pot in Jerusalem and in Judah shall become sacred to Yahweh Sabaoth; all who want to offer sacrifice will come and help themselves from them for their cooking; there will be no more traders in the Temple of Yahweh Sabaoth, when that day comes.^o Is 2:2

b. 'the land has been my living' (lit. 'possession') corr.; 'A man has made me his possession' Hebr.

c. 'on your body', lit. 'between your hands'. The prophets of antiquity used to gash their bodies, cf. 1 K 18:28, etc.; the man who bears such scars is accused here of being a prophet; he defends himself by claiming that the wounds were inflicted in a brawl with his companions.

d. A messianic passage. The 'shepherd' here is neither the good shepherd of 11:4-14 nor the bad one of 11:15-16, but, without further definition, the leader of the people, the vicegerent of Yahweh. The sword which is about to strike him will hand over the whole nation to the final ordeal which must precede the messianic age. This ordeal is described in the traditional imagery of the sheep without a shepherd, Ezk 34:5, the 'remnant', Is 4:3+, the 'one-third', Ezk 5:1-4, the refining fire, Jr 6:29-30. The nation will then be ready for the new covenant, cf. Jr 31:31+.

e. 'I am going to strike' conj., cf. some Greek MSS and Mt 26:31; 'Strike' Hebr.

f. 'I shall say' Greek; 'I said' Hebr.

14 a. This chapter is a tissue of elaborations on the eschatological struggle, vv. 1-5, 12-15, and descriptions of the new order which is to follow it.

b. 'Yahweh will' corr.; 'I shall' Hebr.

c. Text corr.

d. 'it will be blocked as it was' Greek; 'you will flee as you fled' Hebr.

e. 'your (thy) God' corr.; 'my God' Hebr. 'with him' Greek; 'with thee' Hebr.

f. Text corr. from Greek: 'there will be no light, no cold, no frost'; Hebr. 'there will be no light; the precious things will be heaped up'.

g. Lit. 'they will be living' corr.; 'it will be' Hebr. Gihon is the only source of fresh water in Jerusalem.

h. Repetition for the sake of solemnity: the 'name' of Yahweh is Yahweh himself. The adoption of monotheism by all the nations of the world is one of the characteristics of the messianic age, cf. Mt 1:11.

i. 'to Rimmon in (of) the Negeb. And Jefusalem' corr.; 'to Rimmon. The Negeb of Jerusalem' Hebr. 'of the Corner' corr. 'from the Tower' corr.

j. 'will moulder' Greek.

k. V. 15 is placed after v. 12.

l. 'all who survive' Greek; 'every one who survives' Hebr.

m. The feast of Tabernacles has been chosen presumably because it celebrates the sovereignty of Yahweh.

n. 'will' Greek; 'will not' Hebr.

o. The author, remembering Ezekiel, foresees the sanctification of everything in the land of Israel in the messianic age.

MALACHI

1 An oracle.
The word of Yahweh to Israel through the ministration of Malachi.^a

The love of Yahweh for Israel

1 I have shown my love for you, says Yahweh. But you ask, 'How have you 2 shown your love?' Was not Esau^b Jacob's brother?—it is Yahweh who speaks; yet I showed my love for Jacob •and my hatred for Esau. I turned his towns into 3 a wilderness and his heritage into desert pastures.^c •Should Edom say, 'We 4 have been struck down but we will rebuild our ruins', this is the reply of Yahweh Sabaoth: Let them build! I will pull down. They shall be known as Unholy Land and Nation-with-which-Yahweh-is-angry-for-ever. •Your eyes are 5 going to see this and you will say, 'Yahweh is mighty beyond the borders of Israel'.

An indictment of the priests

6 The son honours his father, the slave respects^d his master. If I am indeed 6 father, where is my honour? If I am indeed master, where is my respect? Yahweh Sabaoth asks this of you, priests, you who despise my name. You ask, 'How have we despised your name?' •By putting polluted food on my altar. You ask, 7
'How have we polluted it?' By holding the table of Yahweh in contempt.^e •When 8 you bring blind animals for sacrifice, is that not wrong? When you bring the lame and the diseased, is that not wrong? Try offering them to your high commissioner, and see if he is pleased with this^f or receives you graciously, says Yahweh Sabaoth. •Now try pleading with God to take pity on us (this is your own fault);^g 9 do you think he will receive you graciously? says Yahweh Sabaoth. •Oh, is 10
there no one among you who will shut the doors and stop you from lighting useless fires on my altar? I am not pleased with you, says Yahweh Sabaoth; from your hands I find no offerings acceptable. •But from farthest east to farthest 11 west my name is honoured among the nations and everywhere a sacrifice of incense is offered to my name, and a pure offering^h too, since my name is honoured among the nations, says Yahweh Sabaoth. •But you, you profane it 12 by thinking of the Lord's table as defiled and by holding in contemptⁱ the food placed on it. •'How tiresome it all is!' you say; and you sniff disdainfully at 13 me, says Yahweh Sabaoth. You bring a stolen, lame or diseased animal, you bring that as an offering! Am I to accept this from your hand? says Yahweh Sabaoth.^j •Cursed be the rogue who owns a male which he has vowed to offer 14 from his flock, and instead sacrifices a blemished animal to me!^k For I am a great king, says Yahweh Sabaoth, and my name is feared throughout the nations.
2 And now, priests, this warning is for you. •If you do not listen, if you do 1 not find it in your heart to glorify my name, says Yahweh Sabaoth, I will 2

send the curse on you and curse your very blessing.^a Indeed I have already 3 cursed it, since there is not a single one of you who takes this to heart. •Now 4 watch how I am going to paralyse your arm and throw dung in your face—the 4 dung from your very solemnities—and sweep you away with it.^b •Then you
 5 shall learn that it is I who have given you this warning of my intention to abolish
 5 my covenant with Levi,^c says Yahweh Sabaoth. •My covenant was with him;
 6 it stood for life and peace, and these were what I gave him; it stood for fear
 6 and trembling,^d and he respected me and stood in awe of my name. •The teaching
 7 of truth was in his mouth, falsehood was not to be found on his lips; he walked 7 with me in integrity and virtue; he converted many from sinning. •The 8 lips of the priest ought to safeguard knowledge; his mouth is where instruction
 8 should be sought, since he is the messenger of Yahweh Sabaoth. •But you, 9 you have strayed from the way; you have caused many to stumble by your 9 teaching.^e You have destroyed the covenant of Levi, says Yahweh Sabaoth.
 9 And so I in my turn have made you contemptible and vile in the eyes of the whole people in repayment for the way you have not kept to my paths but have shown partiality in your administration.

Mixed marriage and divorce

Ezr 9:1

10 Have we not all one Father? Did not one God create us? Why, then, do we 11 break faith with one another, profaning the covenant of our ancestors? •Judah 11 has broken faith: a detestable thing has been done (in Israel and in Jerusalem.
 Yes, Judah has profaned the sanctuary that Yahweh loves.^f He has married 12 the daughter of an alien god.^g •The man who does this—whoever he be^h—may 12 Yahweh cut him off from the tents of Jacob and from the company of those 13 who present the offeringⁱ to Yahweh Sabaoth. •And here is something else you 13 do: you cover the altar of Yahweh with tears, with weeping and wailing, because 14 he now refuses to consider the offering or to accept it from your hands. •And 14 you ask, 'Why?' It is because Yahweh stands as witness between you and the 15 wife of your youth, the wife with whom you have broken faith, even though 15 she was your partner and your wife by covenant. •Did he not create a single being that has flesh and the breath of life? And what is this single being destined for? God-given offspring. Be careful for your own life, therefore, and do not 16 break faith with the wife of your youth.^j •For I hate divorce, says Yahweh the God of Israel, and I hate people to parade their sins on their cloaks,^k says

The day of Yahweh

You weary Yahweh with your talk. You ask, 'How do we weary him?' When 17 you say, 'Any evil-doer is good as far as Yahweh is concerned; indeed he likes 18 them best'; or when you say, 'Where is the God of justice now?'¹ 3 Look, I am 1 going to send my messenger to prepare a way before me.^a And the Lord you 2 are seeking will suddenly enter his Temple; and the angel of the covenant^b 3 whom you are longing for, yes, he is coming, says Yahweh Sabaoth. •Who will be 2 able to resist the day of his coming? Who will remain standing when he appears? 3
 For he is like the refiner's fire and the fullers' alkali. •He will take his seat 3 as refiner and purifier;^c he will purify the sons of Levi and refine them like 3 gold and silver, and then they will make the offering to Yahweh as it should be 4 made. •The offering of Judah and Jerusalem will then be welcomed by Yahweh 4 as in former days, as in the years of old. •I mean to visit you for the 5 judgement and I am going to be a ready witness against sorcerer, adulterer 5 and perjurer, against those who oppress the wage-earner, the widow and the 6 orphan, and who rob the settler of his rights—no need for you to be afraid of 6 me, says Yahweh Sabaoth.

Temple tithes^d

No; I, Yahweh, do not change; and you, sons of Jacob, you are not ruined 6 yet! •Since the days of your ancestors you have evaded my statutes and not 7 observed them. Return to me and I will return to you, says Yahweh Sabaoth. 7
 You ask, 'How are we to return?' •Can a man cheat^e God? Yet you are cheating 8 me. You ask, 'How are we cheating you?' In the matter of tithes and 8 dues.^f The curse lies on you because you, yes you the whole nation, are cheating 9
 me. •Bring the full tithes and dues^g to the storehouse so that there may be food 10 in my house, and then see if I do not open the floodgates of heaven for you and 10 pour out blessing for you in abundance. •For your sake I will lay a strict 11 injunction on the locust not to destroy the fruits of your soil nor to make the 11 vine in your fields barren, says Yahweh Sabaoth. •All the nations will call 12 you blessed, for you will be a land of delights, says Yahweh Sabaoth.

The triumph of the virtuous on the day of Yahweh

You say harsh things about me, says Yahweh. You ask, 'What have we said 13 against you?' •You say, 'It is useless to serve God; what is the good of keeping 14 his commands or of walking mournfully before Yahweh Sabaoth?' •Now we 15 have reached the point when we call the arrogant blessed; yes, they prosper, 15 these evil-doers; they try God's patience and yet go free.' •This is what those 16 who fear Yahweh used to say to one another. But Yahweh took note and heard 16 them: a book of remembrance was written in his presence recording those who 17 fear him and take refuge in his name.^h •On the day which I am preparing, says 17 Yahweh Sabaoth, they are going to be my own special possession. I will make 17 allowances for them as a man makes allowances for the son who obeys him. 18
 Then once again you will see the difference between an upright man and a wicked 18 one, between the one who serves God and the one who does not serve him. 18
 For the day is coming now, burning like a furnace;ⁱ and all the arrogant and 19 the evil-doers will be like stubble. The day that is coming is going to burn them 19 up, says Yahweh Sabaoth, leaving them neither root nor stalk. •But for you who 20 fear my name, the sun of righteousness^j will shine out with healing in its rays;^k 20 you will leap like calves going out to pasture. •You will trample on the wicked, 21 who will be like ashes under your feet on the day I am preparing, says Yahweh 21 Sabaoth.

THE SYNOPTIC GOSPELS

INTRODUCTION TO THE SYNOPTIC GOSPELS

Of the four canonical books that record the 'Good News' (evangelium, gospel) brought by Jesus Christ, the first three are so alike that they can, in many passages, be placed side by side and viewed as it were at a glance: for this reason they are called 'synoptic' ('with one eye').

Tradition dating from the 2nd century assigns them respectively to Saints Matthew, Mark and Luke. According to the same ecclesiastical tradition Matthew the publican, himself one of the apostles (Mt 9:9; 10:3), was the first to write; he wrote his gospel in Palestine for Christians converted from Judaism. His work, composed in 'the Hebrew tongue', i.e. in Aramaic, was then translated into Greek. John Mark, a disciple from Jerusalem (Ac 12:12) who assisted Paul in his apostolic work (Ac 12:25; 13:5,13; Phm 24; 2 Tm 4:11), and Barnabas his cousin (Ac 15:37,39; Col 4:10) and Peter (1 P 5:13), whose 'interpreter' he was, put Peter's preaching down in writing at Rome. Another disciple, Luke, a medical man (Col 4:14) and, unlike Matthew and Mark, of pagan origin (Col 4:10-14), born at Antioch according to some authorities, accompanied Paul on the latter's second (Ac 16:10f) and third (Ac 20:5f) missionary journeys and was with him during his two Roman captivities (Ac 27:1f; 2 Tm 4:11). For this reason his gospel, the third to be written, could claim the authority of Paul (cf. perhaps 2 Co 8:18) as that of Mark could claim the authority of Peter. Luke composed also a second work—the 'Acts of the Apostles'. The original language of the second and third gospels is Greek.

These traditional data are confirmed and amplified by an internal examination of the three gospels; but before going on with this, it is necessary to say something about the problem of the literary relations between these gospels, i.e. 'The Synoptic Problem'.

All the many solutions offered so far prove inadequate if taken separately, though each contributes an element of truth to the complete solution. In the first place it is highly probable, even certain, that a common oral tradition was committed to writing by each of the three Synoptics independently, and consequently with variations. By itself this tradition would never have been able to account for the many striking similarities which exist not only between details in the text but also in the sequence of passages, resemblances which cannot be explained even by the extraordinary memory of people in the ancient Middle East. As for a written tradition, in one or many forms, this would be a far better explanation. But even supposing the three evangelists did draw independently on some such written source or sources, that could never explain passages where these likenesses and divergencies show that the evangelists were aware of each other, as is obvious from the fact that at times they copy or correct each other. There must have been some direct interdependence and it is clear that Luke depends on Mark. It is not so clear however that Mark depends on Matthew: though this was held for a long time, a number of indications now suggest the reverse. As for Matthew and Luke, no direct dependence in either direction can be considered probable, and the non-Markan passages common to these two probably have their common source or sources outside the second gospel.

Starting from these textual considerations modern critics have worked out a 'Two Source Theory' according to which these sources are: 1. Mark, on whom Matthew and Luke depend for their narrative sections; 2. a source the existence of which is inferred purely from the textual evidence, and which is called 'Q' (initial of the German word Quelle, source). From Q, both the first and third gospels draw the 'Sayings' or discourses of Jesus ('Logia'), which in Mark are reduced to a minimum. This hypothesis is a step towards the solution but it involves some grave difficulties. 1. It abandons the traditional belief in the Aramaic origin of the first gospel and in its priority over Mark. Moreover it does not take sufficient account of textual facts which confirm this tradition, facts which suggest that Matthew is not entirely dependent, even in narrative sections, on Mark and that there are times when Matthew appears to represent an even more primitive text than Mark. 2. As for Q, it is hard to see how such a document could have existed at all (at least in any of the many forms suggested) and if it did it would never have accounted sufficiently for all the complicated relationships that can be established between the first and third gospels.

Particularly in Catholic circles, recent criticism has attempted to answer these two difficulties (the evidence of an Aramaic original and the inadequacy of Q). It maintains: 1. that a primitive form of the first gospel in Aramaic existed as distinct from its later Greek form: this, it is claimed, is a far better explanation of the complicated relationship between Matthew and Mark, because it allows Matthew Greek to depend on Mark, and Mark to depend on Matthew Aramaic, which explains how the first gospel, which usually follows Mark, sometimes deserts him and seems to retain a more primitive flavour—the reason being that Matthew Greek is in these cases closer than Mark to Matthew Aramaic, their common source; 2. that Q is an inadequate hypothesis and to help to supply for this inadequacy, in a way that does not conflict with the literary data, it is necessary to distinguish two different sources for the Logia common to Matthew and Luke. a. Matthew Aramaic which, besides narrative matter, contained Logia (of which Mark omitted the greater part) and was therefore a gospel in the true sense of the word; b. the Supplementary Collection of Logia: supplementary, that is, to Matthew Aramaic, because it was meant either to preserve matter omitted from that gospel or to preserve in some different and more desirable form matter which that gospel already contained. To these two sources, both Matthew Greek and Luke are indebted; they are drawing from Matthew Aramaic when the narrative context in which the Logia are grouped is the same in each gospel, and they are drawing from the Supplementary Collection when each makes use of the Logia in its own characteristic way: Luke, keeping them together, inserts them in blocks in his 'great intercalation' (9:51–18:14); Matthew splits them up and distributes them throughout his gospel in his five main sections. One notable result of this complicated literary process is what are called 'doublets': i.e. the same saying or group of sayings occurs twice in Matthew or in Luke because on each occasion they are quoted from the two different sources, i.e. Matthew Aramaic (either immediately or through the medium of Mark) and the Collection. It should be noticed that both Matthew and Luke would have used these two sources not in their primitive Aramaic but in two different Greek translations, which would sometimes agree with each other and sometimes not; this would explain why the parallel texts of the first and third gospels are at times extraordinarily alike, at other times markedly unlike.

Having stated the purely literary considerations of this view, it is now possible to describe each of the steps in the formation of the first three gospels. This can be done with some degree of probability, but not with complete certainty.

At the heart of the oral preaching of the apostles lies the 'Kerygma' proclaiming the redemptive death and resurrection of the Lord. Peter's discourses in the Acts of the Apostles provide us with typical summaries of this apostolic preaching which would in practice have included more detailed narratives: principally the story of the Passion which must have assumed its stereotyped pattern very early, as the close similarity of the four gospel accounts shows, but also many anecdotes taken from the Master's life, and throwing light on his person, his mission and his power, or else illustrating his teaching by means of some well-remembered episode, saying, miracle, pronouncement or parable etc. In addition to the apostles themselves there were professional narrators like the evangelists (those who enjoyed a special charisma not limited to the writers of our four gospels; cf. Ac 21:8; Ep 4:11; 2 Tm 4:5), who tended to stereotype the anecdotes by constant repetition. Before long, and particularly when the witnesses who had been in touch with the events themselves began to disappear, measures would have been taken to commit this oral tradition to writing. Episodes originally narrated separately and independently of each other would naturally be grouped together either chronologically (e.g. Mk 1:16-39, the Day of Capernaum) or logically (e.g. Mk 2:1-3:6, the Five Disputes); the groupings would be small at first, but would later grow into more extensive collections. This was the stage at which an author intervened who, according to tradition, which there is no reason to doubt, was Matthew the apostle. He was the first to compose a 'gospel' which drew together Christ's deeds and words into a continuous narrative covering the earthly ministry of Jesus from baptism to resurrection. Shortly afterwards a 'Collection', of unknown authorship, appeared side by side with this early gospel; its purpose was to preserve sayings of the Lord which were either not contained in Matthew Aramaic, or were presented there in a different form. This early gospel and this Collection, both written in Aramaic, were soon put into Greek, and eventually various forms of these translations came to exist. Now Peter's preaching of the catechesis (or 'instruction') was probably based on the same Palestinian tradition that Matthew had committed to writing. Consequently, when Peter's disciple Mark set himself to record this catechesis, it was most natural that he should make use of Matthew Aramaic in whatever Greek translation was familiar to him. This would not have prevented Mark from putting into his narratives some of the vivid realism that had come to him from the preaching of his master Peter, which was itself full of that living quality that comes from personal experience of events. It is this realism, loaded with picturesque and true-to-life detail, which endears Mark's narratives to us in spite of his rough Greek style. True to his purpose (of which we shall speak later) Mark decided to put in very few of the Sayings. He shortened or omitted the ones in the early gospel and passed over in silence those in the Collection of which, presumably, he knew nothing. This silence of his was to be remedied by two new gospel editions (though which of them preceded the other it is difficult to say). An anonymous editor, Matthew Greek, decided to rewrite the first Aramaic gospel, which was known to him in one of its Greek translations. This he filled out and made more detailed, using for his narrative parts of the work of Mark his predecessor, to which he added one thing only of importance, i.e. the two chapters of the Infancy Narrative. In general Matthew Greek corrected and followed Mark's text, but at times he went back to the earlier gospel and on these occasions his style, unlike anything in Mark, becomes both original and archaic. For the Sayings, he referred to the earlier gospel in order to record many that Mark omitted, adding to them from the wealth of Sayings in the Supplementary Collection. Hence the impressive blocks of material, each built round some central theme, which make his gospel the remarkable thing it is. But these were not his only sources. The author had access to some information not so generally available, and this not only for his narratives but also for the Sayings: this accounts for the material which is peculiarly his own, notably in the narrative of the Infancy. By setting out to supplement the primitive Aramaic gospel, Matthew Greek clearly did not aim at being a mere translation of it, but at the same time he only developed it according to its own spirit and purpose. The Church has recognised that his work was inspired by accepting his Greek gospel as canonical.

Luke undertook something similar but used a completely different approach. There are three points to notice: 1. like Matthew he also took from the primitive gospel tradition many Sayings that Mark omits, though unlike Matthew he preferred to omit Sayings that would have little interest for his readers who were pagans by birth; moreover, since the Sayings in Luke are derived through channels independent of Matthew Greek they often assume forms in his gospel noticeably different from those they assume in Matthew's. 2. Luke is more careful than Matthew to preserve the order given by his sources: thus, side by side with 'Marcan' sections, in which he follows the second gospel almost exactly (4:31-6:19; 8:4-9:50; 18:15-21:38), he places the Supplementary Collection which he inserts en bloc in a special section that he presents as an ascent to Jerusalem (9:51-18:14). 3. Luke resembles Matthew since, like him, he also has drawn on special sources but he has done this to a greater extent. These special sources of his he discovered by careful enquiry (1:3); to them he owes not only his narrative of the Infancy but many passages that enrich the gospel: the good Samaritan, Martha and Mary, the parables of the prodigal son, of the Pharisee and the publican, etc., which occur for the most part in Luke's Central Section (9:51-18:14), and it is not impossible that this combination of the Collection with the material he has been at pains to find for himself was a stage of Luke's editorial activity independent of, and perhaps prior to, his use of Mark.

The literary process just outlined respects and makes use of the broad data from tradition but is able to fill in details. It does not however make it possible, any more than tradition does, to assign an exact date to each of the Synoptics with complete certainty: at a guess however, the interval required for the development of the oral tradition would make it probable that the primitive Aramaic gospel and the later Supplementary Collection were composed between the years 40 and 50. This early date would be definite if it could be proved that Paul's Letters to the Thessalonians, written about 51-52, made use of the first gospel's Apocalyptic Discourse. If Mark wrote towards the end of Peter's life (according to Clement of Alexandria) or shortly after Peter's death (according to Irenaeus) the date of his gospel would be c. 64; in any case it should be dated before 70 as it does not seem from this gospel that Jerusalem has yet been destroyed. Matthew Greek and Luke are later than Mark but their precise date is more difficult to determine. The existence of Luke's gospel is presupposed by the Acts (Ac 1:1) but the date of Acts is itself uncertain (cf. Introduction to Acts) and can provide no criterion. It is true that neither Matthew Greek nor Luke suggests that the destruction of Jerusalem has already taken place (not even Lk 19:42-44; 21:20-24 which employ clichés from the prophetic books to describe an event that cannot have been hard to foresee) but this is not decisive. If neither of them knew of the destruction, then they would have to be put before 70, but if they deliberately aimed at scrupulously preserving the archaic quality of their respective literary sources, then their works might quite well have been composed after the destruction, say about A.D. 80.

In any case, the apostolic origin, direct or indirect, together with their involved literary formation confirm the historical value of the Synoptics, and not only that but at the same time help us to understand the nature of that historical value, and since the gospels stem from an oral preaching that goes back to the beginnings of the primitive community, their guarantee in this way would ultimately rest on eyewitness. Neither the apostles themselves, however, nor any of the other preachers of the gospel message and tellers of the gospel story ever aimed at writing or teaching history in the modern technical sense of that word; their concern was sacred and theological: they preached to convert and edify, to infuse faith, to enlighten it and defend it against its opponents. For this purpose they could and did appeal to solid evidence that could be checked, and this appeal was demanded quite as much by their own sincerity as by their anxiety not to leave any loopholes for hostile argument. Those who finally composed the gospels, collecting the evidence and putting it into writing, had the same objective fidelity, and equal respect for their sources of information as is suggested by the simple and archaic quality of their work. In this there are no theological developments characteristic of subsequent decades (cf. Paul for example); much less is there any trace of the sort of extravagant legends that are frequent in the apocryphal gospels. The three Synoptics may not be history books but they do set out to give us historical fact.

This does not mean that each of the events or discourses which they record corresponds exactly to what in fact took place. The laws governing witnesses and the spread of evidence warn us against looking for that material sort of precision. Obvious examples can be found in the gospels themselves where the same events or the same discourses are sometimes recorded in different ways. This is true not only of the content of some episodes, but it is even truer of the order in which these episodes are arranged, which is not the same order in each gospel. This is only to be expected in view of their complex origins.

Their component parts, which at first existed separately, were only gradually collected together into groups; and these groups were later joined together or split up more for reasons of logic or neatness than for anything to do with chronology. In this way many of the gospel events or Sayings have been shifted from their proper time or place. For this reason it is often impossible to take editorial connective phrases like 'then', 'after this', 'on that day', 'at that time', etc., in their literal sense.

The belief of Christians in the authority of these inspired books is not of course affected by this. That there was no perfect agreement in detail among those chosen by the Holy Spirit to speak for him merely implies that he attaches no importance, in the sphere of faith, to that sort of material exactitude; it suggests indeed that he actually willed this difference of evidence. Heraclitus said, 'Implicit agreements are worth more than explicit ones' and it is obvious that a fact which comes to us by a variety of discordant traditions (e.g. the apparitions after the resurrection) appears more real and probable than it would if vouched for by witnesses whose evidence was identical in both detail and vocabulary. It is a further advantage when these discrepancies occur, not just accidentally and unavoidably, but as the result of deliberate correction. It is certain that the gospel writers often presented their material in deliberately different ways, and in any case the earlier oral tradition which they inherited did not only hand down reminiscences of the gospel story passively, but at the same time both interpreted them and adapted them in all sorts of ways to the actual requirements of the living faith they taught. This intervention by the community in forming the tradition was directed by responsible members of that community: there is no reason, therefore, to suspect the fidelity of the tradition. On the positive side, this intervention is instructive: since the community was the Church, its intervention shows how the magisterium was exercised from the beginning. Before inspiring the authors of the gospels, the Holy Spirit supervised the preparation of the material, adapted it to the diffusion of the faith and also secured its inerrancy—i.e. guaranteed as inerrant, not so much the facts and the precise circumstances in which facts occurred, but rather the spiritual meaning conveyed by those facts. All this work of the Spirit was only concerned with the provision of food for the spirit in a form that could be digested by the faithful. In particular it was to the writers of the synoptic gospels that he gave the gift of expressing in completely personal terms the message common to all three of them.

The Gospel according to Saint Mark

The plan Mark follows is the least systematic of all the Synoptics. The preaching of John the Baptist plus the baptism and temptation of Jesus make up his prelude (1:1-13); next comes a period of ministry which according to occasional hints was in Galilee (1:14-7:23), then a journey by Jesus and his apostles to the district of Tyre and Sidon, the Decapolis, the neighbourhood of Caesarea Philippi and back to Galilee (7:24-9:50); then lastly the final journey through Peraea and Jericho to Jerusalem where the Passion and resurrection take place (10:1-16:8). Apart from individual sequences of fact, this broad outline itself is purely conventional since it is historically probable, and to judge by the fourth gospel fairly certain, that Jesus visited Jerusalem several times before the last Passover of his life. All the same, this outline, broad as it is, does trace for us an important development which is both factually and theologically significant. The general public received Jesus warmly at first but their enthusiasm waned as they found that his meek and other-worldly conception of the Messiah did not fulfil their hopes. As a result, Jesus left Galilee to devote himself to the instruction of a small group of faithful followers, and the profession of faith at Caesarea Philippi showed that he had secured their absolute allegiance. This was a decisive turning-point: after it Jerusalem became the focus of attention, and it was there that further opposition continued mounting only to end in the drama of the Passion and in the final triumph of the resurrection.

This paradox provides the central interest of the second gospel i.e. how Jesus, while remaining misunderstood and rejected by men, was at the same time God's triumphant envoy. The gospel is not particularly concerned with elaborating the Master's teaching and it records few of his Sayings: the real point of its message is the manifestation of the crucified Messiah. On the one hand Jesus is the Son of God, acknowledged as such by the Father (1:11; 9:7), by the devils (1:24; 3:11; 5:7) and even by men (15:39); he is the Messiah claiming divine rank (14:62), higher than the angels (13:32), taking on himself the forgiveness of sin (2:10), vindicating his power and his mission by miracle (1:31; 4:41 etc.) and by exorcism (1:27; 3:23f etc.). On the other hand the gospel puts great emphasis on his apparent frustration at the hands of men: the mockery or refusal of the public (5:40; 6:2f), the antagonism of the Jewish leaders (2:1-3:6 etc.), the lack of understanding even on his disciples' part (4:13+)—all the hostile activities that were to lead to the shame of the cross. It is this 'scandal', this refusal, that the gospel is intent on explaining. This it does not merely by contrasting it with the crowning triumph of the resurrection but also by showing that the hostility was itself an integral part of God's mysterious plan. It was necessary that Christ should suffer and so redeem man (10:45; 14:24), since this had been foretold by the scriptures (9:12; 14:21,49). Both for himself (8:31; 9:31; 10:33f) and for his own followers (8:34f; 9:35; 10:15,24f,29f,39; 13:9-13) Jesus laid down a way of humility and suffering; but the Jews, expecting a victorious warrior-Messiah, were ill prepared for this answer to their hope, and the reason why Jesus wanted silence about his miracles (5:43 etc.) and his identity (7:24; 9:30) was to avoid an enthusiasm which would have been as ill-advised as it would have been mistaken. Rather than call himself Messiah, 8:29f, which would have been too suggestive of human dignity, he took the modest and mysterious title 'Son of Man' (2:10 etc.; cf. Mt 8:20+). This cautionary measure is what is called 'the messianic secret' (Mk 1:34+) and is a basic idea of Mark's gospel. It was not something Mark had invented: it corresponded to that underlying reality in Christ's life of suffering which, in the light of a faith finally and fully established by the Easter event, the evangelist was able to perceive and to place before us for our understanding.

The Gospel according to Saint Matthew

The same light of faith and the same broad outline of Christ's life naturally occur in Matthew as well as in Mark, but with quite a different emphasis. To begin with, the plan is not the same and is much more elaborate: Matthew is divided into five books each consisting of a discourse introduced and led up to by painstakingly selected narrative matter; these five books, plus the stories of the Infancy and of the Passion, are combined to form a well-knit whole of seven sections. It is possible that this arrangement, which is so clear in Matthew, goes back to the Aramaic gospel and that it is traceable also in Mark's brief account; but whether this is so or not, it remains true that, as we have already seen, Matthew used his sources with great freedom in order to reach his carefully mapped out ensemble which is so brilliantly adapted for teaching purposes. The fact that this gospel also reports Christ's teaching much more fully than Mark, and stresses specially the theme of 'the kingdom of heaven' (4:17+), makes it a dramatic account in seven acts of the coming of the kingdom of heaven. These acts are as follows: 1. The preparation of the kingdom in the person of the child-Messiah, ch. 1-2. 2. The formal proclamation of the charter of the kingdom to the disciples and the public, i.e. the Sermon on the Mount, ch. 3-7. 3. The preaching of the kingdom by missionaries whose credentials (the 'signs' which are to confirm the word) are now hinted at by several miracles done by Jesus himself; the missionaries receive their instructions, ch. 8-10. 4. The obstacles with which the kingdom will meet from men, and which are part of God's deliberate design that the kingdom should come without show, even imperceptibly, as illustrated in the parables of the concluding Instruction, 11:1-13:52. 5. Its embryonic existence in the group of disciples with Peter at their head; the rules for this Church in the making are outlined in the concluding Instruction on the Community, 13:53-18:35. 6. The crisis, provoked by the increasing hostility of the Jewish leaders, which is to prepare the way for the definitive coming of the kingdom and which is the subject of the concluding Eschatological Instruction, ch. 19-25. 7. Lastly, the coming itself, a coming effected through suffering and triumph, through the Passion and resurrection, ch. 26-28.

The kingdom of God (of the 'heavens' in Matthew) is the reassertion of God's dominion as King over men who at last know him, serve him and love him. This kingdom was prepared and foretold in the Old Testament. Matthew therefore, writing among Jews for Jews, makes a special point of demonstrating that the scriptures are fulfilled in the person and work of Jesus. In every significant passage of his work he makes use of the Old Testament to prove that Law and prophets are 'fulfilled'—a phrase which means that their hopes have been not only realised but have also been perfected, ennobled, surpassed. As applied to the person of Jesus: he appeals to Old Testament texts for his Davidic descent (1:1-17), for his virgin birth (1:23) at Bethlehem (2:6), for his stay in Egypt and his settling at Capernaum (4:14-16), for his messianic progress into Jerusalem (21:5,16); as applied to the work of Jesus: he appeals to Old Testament texts for cures (11:4-5); and finally as applied to the teaching of Jesus: this 'fulfils' the Law (5:17) while raising it to further heights (5:21-48; 19:3-9, 16-21). Matthew asserts equally strongly that the scriptures are also fulfilled in the lowliness of Christ's person and in what humanly seems to be the frustration of his work. In this way God's plan contains, and the Old Testament foretells: the massacre of the Innocents (2:17f), the hidden life at Nazareth (2:23), the gentle compassion of the 'servant of God' (12:17-21; cf. 8:17; 11:29; 12:7), the disciples' desertion (26:31), the paltry price of betrayal (27:9-10), the arrest (26:54) and the three days' burial (12:40); in this way too the Old Testament foretold the unbelief of the Jews (13:13-15), too tenacious of their man-made traditions (15:7-9), who could be approached only by teaching through the veil of parables (13:14-15,35); Matthew is not the only one of the three Synoptics to make use of arguments from the Old Testament, but even apart from the fact that they might have been copying Matthew Aramaic in this, Matthew relies so heavily on this argument that he has made it one of the chief characteristics of his gospel. Remembering this and recalling the gospel's systematic structure, the work can be aptly described as the great charter of the new order which, in Christ, completes God's plan. For Jesus is the Son of God (Matthew emphasises this more than Mark; cf. 14:33; 16:16; 22:2; 27:40,43) and as his teaching is the new Law that fulfils the old, so the Church which he built on Peter (16:18), and of which he is the keystone rejected by the builders (21:42), is the same messianic community as that of the Old Testament, but universalised, since God has allowed those who were first invited to decline (23:34-38; cf. 10:5-6,23; 15:24); this was so that he might throw open the gate of salvation to all nations (8:11-12; 21:33-46; 22:1-10; cf. 12:18,21; 28:19). It is easy to see why a gospel as complete and as neatly arranged as this and written more grammatically (though less attractively) than Mark's should have appealed to the early Church and been used by it in preference to others.

The Gospel according to Saint Luke

The third gospel's distinguishing quality is due to the attractive personality of its author which shines through all his work. Luke is at once a most gifted writer and a man of marked sensibility. He set to work in his own way with an eye to exact information and orderly narrative (1:3), but respect for his sources, together with his method of juxtaposing them, meant that even Luke was not in a position to arrange his traditional material in a more chronological way than Matthew or Mark. His plan follows Mark's outline though some episodes are displaced (3:19-20; 4:16-30; 5:1-11; 6:12-19; 22:31-34, etc.). This he did sometimes in the interests of clarity and logical sequence, sometimes under the influence of other streams of tradition including, it should be noted, a tradition traceable also in the fourth gospel. Other episodes are omitted altogether for various reasons: they were not interesting for Luke's non-Jewish readers (Mk 9:11-13), or they were already to be found in the Supplementary Collection (Mk 12:28-34; cf. Lk 10:25-28), or above all (as in the case of Luke's great omission of Mk 6:45-8:26) because it was not in Luke's copy of Mark or because, if it was there, Luke regarded it as unnecessarily repetitive. Luke's most obvious difference from Mark is his great intercalation (cf. 9:51-18:14) which, as has been seen, combines Logia or Sayings from some Collection with information he had found out for himself. This central section uses a journey to Jerusalem for its framework (cf. the reiterated indications, elaborating the datum of Mk 10:1, in Lk 9:51; 13:22; 17:11). But it is not a reminiscence of actual journeys; it is rather a device by which Luke is able to bring out one of his chief theological notions: namely that the Holy City is the predestined stage for the drama of salvation (9:31; 13:33; 18:31; 19:11). Because it is from Jerusalem that the evangelisation of the world must begin (24:47; Ac 1:8), his gospel had to start there (1:5f) and there he will have to bring it to a close (24:52f)—the post-resurrection apparitions and conversations recorded by Luke do not take place in Galilee (cf. 24:13-51 and cf. 24:6 with Mk 16:7; Mt 28:7,16-20).

Comparing Luke and his two sources, a. Mark, the best known, and b. the sources behind the Matthew passages which are paralleled in Luke, it becomes apparent that Luke was a craftsman whose concentration never slackened. His changes are very slight—just small omissions and additions—but through them he gives his work a character peculiarly his own. He avoids or whittles down anything he or his readers found offensive (8:43, cf. Mk 5:26; he omits Mk 9:43-48; 13:32; etc.) or anything they could not be expected to understand (he omits Mt 5:21f,33f; Mk 15:34; etc.). He omits anything derogatory to the dignity of the apostles (Mk 4:13; 8:32f; 9:28f; 14:50) and makes excuses for them (Lk 9:45; 18:34; 22:45). He explains obscure phrases (6:15) and clears up points of topography (4:31; 19:28f,37; 23:51), etc. In these innumerable small corrections, and even more especially in the fresh material he found by personal enquiry, it is possible to see what Luke's preferences were and to see the way his mind worked. Or, to put it more theologically, the Holy Spirit used Luke as his instrument to put the gospel into a completely new shape, packed with doctrine. The originality of Luke is not in his key ideas (they are identical with those of Mark and of Matthew) but in his religious mentality which, apart from slight traces of Paul's influence, is overwhelmingly distinctive of Luke's personal temperament. Luke, in Dante's phrase, is the 'scriba mansuetudinis Christi', the faithful recorder of Christ's lovingkindness. He is anxious to stress his Master's love of sinners (15:1f,7,10); to record his acts of forgiveness (7:36-50; 15:11-32; 19:1-10; 23:34,39-43); and to contrast his tenderness for the lowly and the poor with his severity towards the proud and towards those who abuse their wealth (1:51-53; 6:20-26; 12:13-21; 14:7-11; 16:15,19-31; 18:9-14). But in spite of this severity, the wicked however deserving of punishment will not be condemned till the period set aside for mercy has come to an end (13:6-9; cf. Mk 11:12-14). The one thing necessary is repentance, abdication of self, and on this the gentle, tolerant Luke takes a firm stand, insisting on unflinching and complete detachment (14:25-34), especially from riches (6:34f; 12:33; 14:12-14; 16:9-13). Another group of passages which are also found only in the third gospel is on the necessity of prayer (11:5-8; 18:1-8), of which Jesus set the example (3:21; 5:16; 6:12; 9:28). Finally, Luke is the only one of the Synoptics to give the Holy Spirit the prominence we find in Paul and in Acts (Lk 1:15,35,41,67; 2:25-27; 4:1,14,18; 10:21; 11:13; 24:49). These qualities, combined with that joy in God and that gratitude to him for his gifts which fill the third gospel (2:14; 5:26; 10:17; 13:17; 18:43; 19:37; 24:51f), are the ones that go to make Luke's achievement the warm and human thing it is.

Style

Mark's Greek is rough, strongly Aramaic, and often faulty; but it is fresh, lively and appealing. Matthew's Greek is also rather Aramaic but smoother than Mark's as well as less picturesque and more correct. Luke's is mixed: when writing independently it is excellent but out of respect for his sources he incorporates their imperfections—after polishing them a little. Occasionally he goes out of his way to give a good imitation of Septuagint Greek.

This translation

As far as possible this translation preserves stylistic nuances, and aims at reproducing in detail all similarities and differences between the three Synoptics, which betray their literary relationships.

1 a. Matthew, though stressing the foreign element on the female side, vv. 3,5,6, limits his genealogy to Christ's Israelitic descent. Its aim is to show how Jesus is connected with the leading recipients of the messianic promises, i.e. with Abraham and David and with the latter's royal line. Luke's genealogy is universal in scope and goes back to Adam, head of the human race. The two lists, from David down to Joseph, have only two names in common. There are two possible explanations: either Matthew has preferred dynastic succession to physical descent, or else legal descent (levirate law, Dt 25:5+) has been reckoned equivalent to physical. In Mt, moreover, the systematic nature of the genealogy is brought out by the division of Christ's ancestors into three series of 2×7 names

(cf. 6:9+), a device which forces the omission of three kings between Joram and Azariah. It also compels the double reckoning of Jeconiah (vv. 11-12); this is made possible by the fact that the same Greek name can translate the two similar Hebr. names Joiachin and Joiakin. The lists of both Mt and Lk end with Joseph who was Christ's legal father only; the reason is that according to ancient mentality legal paternity (adoption, levirate etc.) is sufficient, by itself, to confer all hereditary rights; the rights here are those of the messianic line. This does not mean that Mary did not belong to that line, though the evangelists do not say that she did.

b. Var. 'Asaph'.

c. Var. 'Amos'.

Amon the father of Josiah;
 and Josiah was the father of Jechoniah and his brothers. 11
 Then the deportation to Babylon took place.

After the deportation to Babylon: 12
 Jechoniah was the father of Shealtiel,
 Shealtiel the father of Zerubbabel,
 Zerubbabel was the father of Abiud, 13
 Abiud the father of Eliakim,
 Eliakim the father of Azor,
 Azor was the father of Zadok, 14
 Zadok the father of Achim,
 Achim the father of Eliud,
 Eliud was the father of Eleazar, 15
 Eleazar the father of Matthan, Matthan the father of Jacob;
 and Jacob was the father of Joseph the husband of Mary; 16 of her was born Jesus^d who is called Christ.

The sum of generations is therefore: fourteen from Abraham to David; 17 fourteen from David to the Babylonian deportation; and fourteen from the Babylonian deportation to Christ.

The virginal conception of Christ

This is how Jesus Christ came to be born. His mother Mary was betrothed 18 to Joseph;^e but before they came to live together she was found to be with child through the Holy Spirit. •Her husband Joseph, being a man of honour and 19 wanting to spare her publicity, decided to divorce her informally.^f •He had 20 made up his mind to do this when the angel of the Lord^g appeared to him in a dream and said, 'Joseph son of David, do not be afraid to take Mary home as your wife, because she has conceived what is in her by the Holy Spirit. •She 21 will give birth to a son and you must name him Jesus, because he is the one who is to save^h his people from their sins.' •Now all this took place to fulfil the words 22 spoken by the Lord through the prophet:

The virgin will conceive and give birth to a son and they will call him Immanuel, 23

a name which means 'God-is-with-us'. •When Joseph woke up he did what the 24 angel of the Lord had told him to do: he took his wife to his home •and, though 25
 he had not had intercourse with her, she gave birthⁱ to a son; and he named him Jesus.

The visit of the Magi

2 After Jesus had been born at Bethlehem in Judaea during the reign of King 1
 Herod,^a some wise men came to Jerusalem from the east. •'Where is the infant 2 king of the Jews?' they asked. 'We saw his star as it rose^b and have come to do him homage.' •When King Herod heard this he was perturbed, and so was the whole 3 of Jerusalem. •He called together all the chief priests and the scribes of the people,^c 4 and enquired of them where the Christ was to be born. •'At Bethlehem in Judaea,' 5 they told him 'for this is what the prophet wrote:

*And you, Bethlehem, in the land of Judah, you are by no means least among the leaders of Judah,
 for out of you will come a leader who will shepherd my people Israel'.* 6

Then Herod summoned the wise men to see him privately. He asked them the 7 exact date on which the star had appeared, •and sent them on to Bethlehem. 8

'Go and find out all about the child,' he said 'and when you have found him, let me know, so that I too may go and do him homage.' •Having listened to what the king had to say, they set out. And there in front of them was the star they had seen rising; it went forward and halted over the place where the child was.^d •The sight of the star filled them with delight, •and going into the house they saw the child with his mother Mary, and falling to their knees they did him homage. Then, opening their treasures, they offered him gifts of gold and frankincense and myrrh.^e •But they were warned in a dream not to go back to Herod, and returned to their own country by a different way.

1 K 13:9f

The flight into Egypt. The massacre of the Innocents

After they had left, the angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph in a dream and said, 'Get up, take the child and his mother with you, and escape into Egypt, and stay there until I tell you, because Herod intends to search for the child and do away with him'. •So Joseph got up and, taking the child and his mother with him, left that night for Egypt, •where he stayed until Herod was dead. This was to fulfil what the Lord had spoken through the prophet:

I called my son out of Egypt.^f

Nb 23:22
Ho 11:1

Herod was furious when he realised that he had been outwitted by the wise men, and in Bethlehem and its surrounding district he had all the male children killed who were two years old or under, reckoning by the date he had been careful to ask the wise men. •It was then that the words spoken through the prophet Jeremiah were fulfilled:^g

*A voice was heard in Ramah, sobbing and loudly lamenting:
it was Rachel weeping for her children,
refusing to be comforted
because they were no more.*

Jr 31:15

From Egypt to Nazareth

After Herod's death, the angel of the Lord appeared in a dream to Joseph in Egypt •and said, 'Get up, take the child and his mother with you and go back to the land of Israel, for those who wanted to kill the child are dead'. •So Joseph got up and, taking the child and his mother with him, went back to the land of Israel.

Ex 4:19

d. Several Greek and Lat. authorities, more explicitly 'Joseph, to whom was betrothed the Virgin Mary who gave birth to Jesus'. It is probably due to a misunderstanding of this reading that Syr. Sin. has this text 'Joseph, to whom was betrothed the Virgin Mary, begot Jesus'.

e. The force of Jewish betrothal was such that the fiancé was already called 'husband' and could release himself from the engagement only by an act of repudiation, v. 19.

f. It would appear that Joseph's integrity did not only consist in wanting to withhold his name from a child whose father he did not know, but also, since he was convinced of Mary's virtue, in refusing to expose to the rigour of the Law (Dt 22:20f) a mystery he did not understand.

g. The 'angel of the Lord' in the early texts (Gn 16:7+) means Yahweh himself. With the development of the doctrine of angels (cf. Tb 5:4+) their distinction from God becomes clearer; they retain their function as heavenly messengers and often appear as such in the narratives of the Infancy (Mt 1:20,24; 2:13,19; Lk 1:11; 2:9; cf. also Mt 28:2; Jn 5:4; Ac 5:19; 8:26; 12:7,23).

h. 'Jesus' (Hebr. Yehoshua) means 'Yahweh saves'.

i. Lit. 'and he did not know her until the day she gave birth'. The text is not concerned with the period that followed and, taken by itself, does not assert Mary's perpetual virginity which, however, the gospels elsewhere suppose and which the Tradition of the Church affirms. On the 'brothers' of Jesus, cf. 12:46+.

2 a. About 5 or 4 B.C. Herod was king of Judaea, Idumaea and Samaria from 37-4 B.C. Cf. Lk 2:2+.

b. Alternative translation (Vulg.) 'in the east'. Same alternative for v. 9.

c. Doctors of the Law; usually, but not always, from the ranks of the Pharisees (3:7+). Together with the high priests and the elders they constituted the Great Sanhedrin.

d. Obviously the evangelist is thinking of a miraculous star; it is futile to look for a natural explanation.

e. The wealth and perfumes of Arabia (Jr 6:20; Ezk 27:22). The Fathers see in them symbols of the royalty (gold), divinity (incense), Passion (myrrh) of Christ. The adoration of the Magi fulfils the messianic prophecies of the homage paid by the nations to the God of Israel, cf. Nb 24:17; Is 49:23; 60:5f; Ps 72:10-15.

f. Israel, therefore, the 'son' of the prophet's text, prefigured the Messiah.

g. In its original setting this text means that Rachel, their ancestress, weeps for the men of Ephraim, Manasseh and Benjamin, massacred or deported by the Assyrians. Matthew's application was perhaps suggested to him by a tradition which localised Rachel's tomb in the neighbourhood of Bethlehem (Gn 35:19f).

But when he learnt that Archelaus^h had succeeded his father Herod as ruler of 22
Judaea he was afraid to go there, and being warned in a dream he left for the region of Galilee.ⁱ •There he settled in a town called Nazareth. In this way the 23 words spoken through the prophets were to be fulfilled:

He will be called a Nazarene.^j

II. THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN PROCLAIMED

A. NARRATIVE SECTION

The preaching of John the Baptist

3 In due course^a John the Baptist appeared; he preached in the wilderness of 1
Judaea and this was his message: •‘Repent,^b for the kingdom of heaven^c is 2 close at hand’. •This was the man the prophet Isaiah spoke of when he said: 3

*A voice cries in the wilderness:
Prepare a way for the Lord,
make his paths straight.*

This man John wore a garment made of camel-hair with a leather belt round his 4 waist, and his food was locusts and wild honey. •Then Jerusalem and all Judaea 5 and the whole Jordan district made their way to him, •and as they were baptised 6 by him in the river Jordan they confessed their sins.^d •But when he saw a 7 number of Pharisees^e and Sadducees^f coming for baptism he said to them, ‘Brood of vipers, who warned you to fly from the retribution that is coming?’^g 8
But if you are repentant, produce the appropriate fruit, •and do not presume to 9 tell yourselves, “We have Abraham for our father”, because, I tell you, God can raise children for Abraham from these stones. •Even now the axe is laid to the roots 10 of the trees, so that any tree which fails to produce good fruit will be cut down and thrown on the fire. •I baptise you in water for repentance, but the one who 11 follows me is more powerful than I am, and I am not fit to carry his sandals; he will baptise you with the Holy Spirit and fire.^h •His winnowing-fan is in his hand; 12
he will clear his threshing-floor and gather his wheat into the barn; but the chaff
he will burn in a fire that will never go out.’ⁱ

Jesus is baptised

Then Jesus appeared: he came from Galilee to the Jordan to be baptised by 13
John. •John tried to dissuade him. ‘It is I who need baptism from you’ he said 14
‘and yet you come to me!’ •But Jesus replied, ‘Leave it like this for the time being; 15 it is fitting that we should, in this way, do all that righteousness demands’.^j At this,
John gave in to him.^k

As soon as Jesus was baptised he came up from the water, and suddenly the 16 heavens opened^l and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove and coming down on him.^m •And a voice spoke from heaven, ‘This is my Son, the Beloved; 17
my favour rests on him’.ⁿ

Temptation in the wilderness^a

4 Then Jesus was led by the Spirit^b out into the wilderness to be tempted by the 1 devil. •He fasted for forty days and forty nights, after which he was very 2 hungry, •and the tempter came and said to him, ‘If you are the Son of God,^c tell 3 these stones to turn into loaves’. •But he replied, ‘Scripture says: 4

Man does not live on bread alone but on every word that comes from the mouth of God’.

The devil then took him to the holy city and made him stand on the parapet of 5

6 the Temple. 'If you are the Son of God' he said 'throw yourself down; for scripture says:

*He will put you in his angels' charge,
and they will support you on their hands
in case you hurt your foot against a stone'.*

Ps 91:11-12

h. Son of Herod by Malthake (like Herod Antipas); ethnarch of Judaea from 4 B.C. to 6 A.D.

i. Territory of Herod Antipas, cf. Lk 3:1+.

j. Nazoraios: this is the form used by Mt, Jn and Ac (translated 'Nazarene' throughout this version). Nazarenos ('of Nazareth' in this version) is used by Mk. Lk uses both forms. These two synonyms were current transcriptions of an Aramaic adjective (nasraya) itself derived from the name of the town 'Nazareth' (Nasrath). Applied to Jesus, whose origin it indicated (26:69,71), and later to his followers (Ac 24:5), the term became common in the semitic world for the disciples of Jesus; the name 'Christian' (Ac 11:26) prevailed in the Graeco-Roman world. It is not clear which prophetic oracles Mt alludes to; possibly to the nazir of Jg 13:5,7.

3 a. Lit. 'in those days'. Stereotyped expression, merely a formula of transition.

b. Metanoia, rendered 'repentance', implies a change of heart; 'conversion' in the technical ascetical sense.

c. Instead of 'kingdom of God', cf. 4:17+. The phrase is proper to Mt and reflects the Jewish scruple which substituted metaphor for the divine name.

d. The rite of immersion, symbolic of purification or of renewal, was familiar to the ancient religions and to Judaism (baptism of proselytes, Essene purifications). John's baptism though suggested by these practices is distinct from them for three main reasons: it is directed to moral, not ritual, purification (3:2,6,8,11; Lk 3:10-14); it takes place once only and for this reason appears as a ceremony of initiation; it has an eschatological value in so far as it enrolls its recipients among the number of those who professedly and actively prepare themselves for the imminent coming of the Messiah and who are, therefore, the messianic community in anticipation (3:2,11; Jn 1:19-34). It produces a real effect upon the soul but this effect is not produced sacramentally since it depends on something that has not yet taken place: this future event is God's Judgement embodied in the coming Messiah whose 'fire' will purify or consume according to the good or bad dispositions it meets with; he alone, and not John, will baptise 'in the Holy Spirit' (3:7,10-12). John's baptism continued to be administered by the disciples of Jesus (Jn 4:1-2) until it was absorbed by the new rite which he had instituted (Mt 28:19; Ac 1:5+; Rm 6:4+).

e. A Jewish sect, rigid observers of the Law; undue attachment to the oral tradition of their rabbis led, however, to an extravagant and artificial casuistry.

f. In opposition to the outlook of the Pharisees these rejected all tradition not contained in the written Law. They came for the most part from the great priestly families. They were less devout than the Pharisees and more politically minded.

g. The retribution of the day of Yahweh (Am 5:18+), which was to inaugurate the messianic era.

h. In the O.T. fire, a purifying element more refined and efficacious than water, was already a symbol of God's supreme intervention in history and of his Spirit which comes to purify hearts, cf. Is 1:25; Zc 13:9; Mt 3:2-3; Si 2:5, etc.

i. The fire of Gehenna which for ever goes on consuming what has defied purification (Is 66:24; Jdt 16:17; Si 7:17; Zp 1:18; Ps 21:9, etc.).

j. Though sinless (Jn 8:46), Jesus is determined to submit to John's baptism because he sees it as a part of God's design (Lk 7:29-30) and the last act preparatory to the messianic era (Mt 3:6+); by accepting it he expresses his wish to satisfy the saving 'righteousness' of God that governs the whole plan of salvation. Matthew is probably thinking not only of the act of baptism but of the new 'righteousness' which, through Christ, is going to fulfil and perfect that of the old Law, cf. 5:17,20.

k. At this point an apocryphal legend has been inserted into two MSS of Vet. Lat. 'And while he was being baptised a great light came out of the water so that all the bystanders were filled with fear'.

l. Add. 'for him', i.e. before his eyes.

m. The Spirit which hovered over the waters at the first creation (Gn 1:2) now appears at the beginning of the new creation. It has two functions: it anoints Jesus for his messianic mission (Ac 10:38) which it is to guide (Mt 4:1p; Lk 4:14,18; 10:21; Mt 12:18,28), and, according to the patristic view, it sanctifies the water, thus preparing the way for Christian baptism, cf. Ac 1:5+.

n. The immediate purpose of this sentence is to declare that Jesus is in truth the servant foretold by Isaiah, but the substitution of 'Son' for 'servant' (made possible by the double sense of the Greek word pais) underlines the relationship of Jesus with the Father which is that of anointed Son, cf. 4:3+.

4 a. That these diabolical suggestions were actually made is quite compatible with Christ's sinlessness. Jesus was faced with the idea of being a material and political Messiah with its accompanying human privileges of wealth, glory, power. He chose instead utter dependence on God, humility, obedience to God's will, cf. Mt 16:21-23; 26:36-46; Heb 5:7-9; 12:2.

b. The Holy Spirit. The temptation was therefore willed by God.

c. The biblical title 'Son of God' does not necessarily mean natural sonship but may imply a sonship which is merely adoptive, i.e. which as a result of God's deliberate choice sets up a very intimate relationship between God and his creature. In this sense the title is given to angels (Jb 1:6), to the Chosen People (Ex 4:22; Ws 18:13), to individual Israelites (Dt 14:1; Ho 2:1; cf. Mt 5:9,45, etc.), to their leaders (Ps 82:6). Where therefore it is attributed to the royal Messiah (1 Ch 17:13; Ps 2:7; 89:26) it does not necessarily imply that he is more than man; nor need we suppose that it has any deeper significance when used by Satan (Mt 4:3,6) or by the possessed (Mk 3:11; 5:7; Lk 4:41), still less when used by the centurion (Mk 15:39; cf. Lk 23:47). By itself the sentence at the baptism (Mt 3:17) and at the transfiguration (17:5) suggests no more than the divine predilection for the Messiah-servant, and in all probability the High priest's question (26:63) concerns messiahship only. Nevertheless the title 'Son of God' can bear a further, more profound meaning of sonship in the full sense of the word. Jesus clearly insinuated this meaning when he spoke of himself as 'the Son' (21:37), ranked above the angels (24:36), having God for his 'Father' in a way others had not (Jn 20:17 and cf. 'my Father' in Mt 7:21 etc.), enjoying with the Father an altogether singular relationship of knowledge and love (Mt 11:27). These assertions coupled with others that speak of the Messiah's divine rank (22:42-46), of the heavenly origin of the 'Son of Man' (8:20+), assertions finally confirmed by the triumph of the resurrection, have endowed the expression 'Son of God' with that strictly divine significance which will later be found, e.g. in Paul (Rm 9:5+). During the lifetime of Christ, it is true, his disciples had no clear conception of his divinity—the texts of Mt 14:33 and 16:16 which add the title 'Son of God' to the more primitive text of Mk reflect, in all probability, a later stage in the faith's development. But it is equally true that Jesus expressed with his own lips, and with as much clarity as his audience could support, his own consciousness of being Son of the Father in the fullest sense. On these historical utterances the faith of the disciples rested, a faith that reached its perfection after the resurrection with the help of the Holy Spirit.

Jesus said to him, 'Scripture also says:

Dt 6:16

You must not put the Lord your God to the test.

Next, taking him to a very high mountain, the devil showed him all the kingdoms of the world and their splendour. •'I will give you all these' he said 'if you fall at my feet and worship me.' •Then Jesus replied, 'Be off, Satan! For scripture says:

Dt 6:13

*You must worship the Lord your God,
and serve him alone.'*

Then the devil left him, and angels appeared and looked after him.

Return to Galilee

Hearing that John had been arrested he went back to Galilee, •and leaving Nazareth he went and settled in Capernaum, a lakeside town on the borders of Zebulun and Naphtali. •In this way the prophecy of Isaiah was to be fulfilled:

Is 8:23-9:1

*Land of Zebulun! Land of Naphtali!
Way of the sea on the far side of Jordan,
Galilee of the nations!*

Jn 8:12+

*The people that lived in darkness
has seen a great light;
on those who dwell in the land and shadow of death
a light has dawned.*

From that moment Jesus began his preaching with the message, 'Repent, for the kingdom of heaven^a is close at hand'.

⚭ Mk 9:50
⚭ Lk 14:34-35

d. The sovereignty of God over the Chosen People, and through them over the world, is at the heart of Christ's preaching as it was of the theocratic ideal of the O.T. It implies a kingdom of 'saints' where God will be truly King because they will acknowledge his royal rights by knowing and loving him. This sovereignty, jeopardised by rebellious sin, is to be reasserted by an act of supreme intervention on the part of God and of his Messiah (Dn 2:28+). This is the intervention which Jesus, following John the Baptist (3:2), declares imminent (4:17,23; Lk 4:43). It is to take the form not, as was commonly expected, of a successful nationalist rising (Mk 11:10; Lk 19:11; Ac 1:6) but of a purely spiritual movement (Mk 1:34+; Jn 18:36). The redemptive work of Jesus as 'Son of Man' (Mt 8:20+) and as 'servant' (Mt 8:17+; 20:28+; 26:28+) sets man free from Satan's rule which opposes God's (4:8; 8:29+; 12:25-26). Before it achieves its final eschatological realisation when the elect will be with the Father in the joy of the heavenly banquet (8:11+; 13:43; 26:29) the kingdom makes an unimpressive entrance (13:31-33). Its modest beginning is mysterious (13:11) and arouses opposition (13:24-30), it has come unnoticed (12:28; Lk 17:20-21); the development of the kingdom on earth is slow (Mk 4:26-29) and is effected by the Church (Mt 16:18+). By the judgement of God that falls on Jerusalem it is established with power as the kingdom of Christ (Mt 16:28; Lk 21:31) and is preached throughout the world by apostolic missionaries (Mt 10:7; 24:14; Ac 1:3+). When the time comes for the final Judgement (13:37-43,47-50; 25:31-46) the return of Christ in glory (16:27; 25:31) will be the final act that establishes the kingdom which Christ will then present to the Father (1 Co 15:24). Until that time the kingdom appears as a free gift of God (20:1-16; 22:9-10; Lk 12:32) accepted by the humble (Mt 5:3; 18:3-4; 19:14,23-24) and the generous (13:44-46; 19:12; Mk 9:47; Lk 9:62; 18:29f), refused by the proud and selfish (21:31-32,43; 22:2-8; 23:13). There is no entering it without the wedding garment which is the new life (22:11-13; Jn 3:5) and not all men are admitted (Mt 8:12; 1 Co 6:9-10; Ga 5:21). One must stay awake so as to be ready when it comes unexpectedly (Mt 25:1-13). On Matthew's treatment of the kingdom as the guiding idea of his arrangement see Introduction to the Synoptic Gospels.

e. The etymological sense of the word euangelion (gospel) is 'Good News'. The news is of the impending coming of the kingdom of God, cf. v. 17 and 3:2.

f. Miraculous cures are the distinctive sign that the messianic age has dawned, cf. 10:1,7f; 11:4f.

g. The word is not here used in a precise sense and actually means Galilee with its surrounding districts, cf. Mk 1:28.

h. Lit. 'moon-struck, lunatic' (cf. 17:15).

i. The Decapolis was a loose federation of 10 free towns with their surrounding territories, scattered for the most part on the E. side of Jordan and as far N.E. as to include Damascus.

5 a. Jesus sketched the new spirit of the kingdom of God (4:17+) in an inaugural discourse which Mark has omitted (Mk 3:19+) and which Matthew and Luke (6:20-49) present in two different forms. Luke eliminates passages referring to Jewish laws and practices (Mt 5:17-6:18) which are unlikely to interest his readers; Matthew for his part inserts sayings pronounced on other occasions (cf. their parallels in Lk) to make his programme of the new kingdom more complete. In the resultant composite discourse five main subjects are dealt with: 1. The spirit that should animate the 'children of the kingdom' (5:3-48). 2. The spirit in which they are to 'fulfil' the laws and practices of Judaism, 6:1-18. 3. Detachment from riches, 6:19-34. 4. Relations with one's neighbour, 7:1-12. 5. The decisive act of choice that must be made (and the practical consequences that must be accepted) in order to enter the kingdom, 7:13-27.

b. One of the hills near Capernaum.

c. Jesus uses the word 'poor' with the moral shade of meaning already noticeable in Zp (2:3+) but here made explicit by the phrase 'in spirit', absent from Lk 6:20. Because they are destitute and oppressed the 'poor', or the 'lowly', are apt subjects for the kingdom of God—this is the theme of the Beatitudes (cf. Lk 4:18; 7:22; Mt 11:5; Lk 14:13; Jm 2:5). 'Poverty' goes hand in hand with the 'spiritual childhood' required for entrance into the kingdom, Mt 18:1f = Mk 9:33f, cf. Lk 9:46f; Mt 19:13fp; 11:25fp—the mystery revealed to 'little ones', neptoi, cf. Lk 12:32; 1 Co 1:26f. They are the 'poor', ptochoi the 'lowly', tapeinoi (Lk 1:48, 52; 14:11; 18:14; Mt 23:12; 18:4) and both are the 'last' as opposed to the 'first' (Mk 9:35), the 'little ones' as opposed to the 'great' (Lk 9:48; cf. Mt 10:28p; cf. Ac 2:44f; 4:32f. He himself sets the example of poverty (Lk 2:7; Mt 8:20p) and of lowliness (Mt 11:29; 20:28p; 21:5; Jn 13:12f; cf. 2 Co 8:9; Ph 2:7f). He identifies himself with the little ones and the wretched (Mt 25:45, cf. 18:5fp).

d. Or 'the lowly'; the word is taken from the Greek version of the Psalm. V. 4 is possibly only a gloss on v. 3; its omission would reduce the number of Beatitudes to 7, cf. 6:9+.

e. Christ's disciples are the successors of the prophets, cf. 10:41; 13:17; 23:34.

f. I.e. 'to bring to perfection'. Jesus is speaking not of carrying into effect each single injunction of the old Law but of bestowing on that Law a new and definitive form by raising it to a higher place through the spirit of the gospel, cf. vv. 21-48. It is in this sense that no detail of the Law is to be neglected, vv. 18-19: each has its part to play in the unfolding of the divine plan.

g. Or 'does not greatly surpass'.

h. Lit. 'you have heard' i.e. (normally) in the synagogues where the teachings of tradition were given orally.

i. The Aramaic word raqa, transliterated in Mt, translated here, means: empty-head, nitwit.

j. Here the Great Sanhedrin which met in Jerusalem, as opposed to the minor courts (vv. 21-22) of the country districts.

k. To the first meaning ('fool') of the Greek word, Jewish usage added the much more insulting one of 'impious'.

l. This deals (cf. the examples in vv. 39-40) with an injustice of which we ourselves are the victims: we are forbidden to resist it by returning evil for evil in the way laid down by the Jewish law of tallo (v. 38). Christ does not forbid us to resist unjust attack in due measure (Jn 18:22f), still less to strive to eliminate injustice from the world.

m. As a surety, cf. Ex 22:25f; Dt 24:12f. It is clear that the sentence is deliberately hyperbolic, cf. 19:24.

n. The second part of this commandment is not, and could not, be found thus formulated in the Law. It is the brusque expression of a language (the original Aramaic) which has few half-tones and is equivalent to 'There is less obligation to love one's enemy' Cf. Lk 14:26 with its parallel Mt 10:37.

o. Add. 'do good to those who hate you'.

b. The Lord's Prayer in its Matthaean form has 7 petitions. The number is a favourite of Matthew's: 2 × 7 generations in the Genealogy (1:17), 7 Beatitudes (5:4+), 7 parables (13:3+), forgiveness not 7 but 77 times (18:22), 7 'alas' for the Pharisees (23:13+), 7 sections into which the gospel is divided (cf. Introduction to the Synoptic Gospels).

Whatever the exact translation the sense is that we must ask God for the sustenance we need in this life but for no more—not for wealth or luxury. The Fathers applied this text to the bread of the Holy Eucharist.

||Mk 1:40-45 ||Lk 5:12-16 Cure of a leper

8 After he had come down from the mountain large crowds followed him. 1
 A leper now came up and bowed low in front of him. 'Sir,' he said 'if you want 2 to, you can cure me.' •Jesus stretched out his hand, touched him and said, 'Of 3 course I want to! Be cured!' And his leprosy was cured at once.^a •Then Jesus said 4 and make the offering prescribed by Moses, as evidence for them'.

Cure of the centurion's servant

When he went into Capernaum a centurion came up and pleaded with him. 5
 'Sir,' he said 'my servant is lying at home paralysed, and in great pain.' •'I will 6 come myself and cure him' said Jesus. •The centurion replied, 'Sir, I am not 8 worthy to have you under my roof; just give the word and my servant will be cured. •For I am under authority myself, and have soldiers under me; and I say 9 to one man: Go, and he goes; to another: Come here, and he comes; to my servant: Do this, and he does it.' •When Jesus heard this he was astonished and 10 said to those following him, 'I tell you solemnly, nowhere in Israel have 11
 I found faith^b like this. •And I tell you that many will come from east and west 12 to take their places with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob at the feast^c in the kingdom servant was cured at that moment.

f. These always sought support for their teaching in the 'tradition' of the ancients. Add. 'and the Pharisees'.

8 a. By his miracles Jesus shows his power over nature (8:23-27; 14:22-33p), especially over sickness (8:1-4, 5-13, 14-15; 9:1-8, 20-22, 27-31; 14:14, 36; 15:30; 20:29-34 and p; Mk 7:32-37; 8:22-26; Lk 14:1-6; 17:11-19; Jn 5:1-16; 9:1-41), over death (Mt 9:23-26p; Lk 7:11-17; Jn 11:1-44), over devils (Mt 8:29+). Christ's miracles are not elaborate: in this they differ from the fantastic prodigies reported of the hellenistic world and from those attributed to the Jewish rabbis, but they are most notably different by reason of the spiritual and symbolic significance that Jesus attaches to them. They declare the judgements of the messianic age (21:18-22p) as also the privileges it brings (11:5+; 14:13-21; 15:32-39p; Lk 5:4-11; Jn 2:1-11; 21:4-14); they are the first signs of the triumph of the Spirit over Satan's empire (8:29+) and over all the powers of evil whether sin (9:2+) or disease (8:17+). The motive is sometimes compassion (20:34; Mk 1:41; Lk 7:13) but they are directed principally to the strengthening of faith (8:10+; Jn 2:11+). Thus it is only with great deliberation that Jesus works any miracles at all, demanding secrecy for any he does agree to work (Mk 1:34+), and leaving it for his resurrection to be the miraculous event that was to force decision (12:39-40). When he sent his apostles to preach the kingdom he gave them his own healing power (10:1,8p) and for this reason Matthew recounts before the Missionary Discourse (ch. 10) a series of ten miracles (ch. 8-9) as signs accrediting the missionary (Mk 16:17f; Ac 2:22; cf. 1:8+).

b. The faith that Jesus asks for from the outset of his public life (Mk 1:15) and throughout his subsequent career, is that act of trust and of self-abandonment by which people no longer rely on their own strength and policies but commit themselves to the power and guiding word of him in whom they believe. (Lk 1:20,45; Mt 21:25p,32). Christ asks for this faith especially when he works his miracles (8:13; 9:2p, 22p, 28-29; 15:28; Mk 5:36p; 10:52p; Lk 17:19) which are not so much acts of mercy as signs attesting his mission and witnessing to the kingdom (8:3+, cf. Jn 2:11+); hence he cannot work miracles unless he finds the faith without which the miracles lose their true significance (13:58p; 12:38-39; 16:1-4). Since faith demands the sacrifice of the whole man, mind and heart, it is not an easy act of humility to perform; many decline it, particularly in Israel (8:10p; 15:28; 27:42p; Lk 18:8), or are half-hearted (Mk 9:24; Lk 8:13). Even the disciples are slow to believe (8:26p; 14:31; 16:8; 17:20p) and are still reluctant after the resurrection (28:17; Mk 16:11-14; Lk 24:11,25,41). The most generous faith of all, of the 'Rock' (16:16-18), the disciples' leader, was destined to be shaken by the outrage of the Passion (26:69-75p) though it was to triumph in the end (Lk 22:32). When faith is strong it works wonders (17:20p; 21:21p; Mk 16:17) and its appeal is never refused (21:22p; Mk 9:23) especially when it asks for forgiveness of sin (9:2p; Lk 7:50) and for that salvation of which it is the necessary condition (Lk 8:12; Mk 16:16, cf. Ac 3:16+).

c. Basing their idea on Is 25:6, the Jews often described the joyous messianic era as a banquet (cf. 22:14; 26:29p; Lk 14:15; Rv 3:20; 19:9).

d. Lit. 'the sons of the kingdom', that is to say the Jews, natural heirs of the promises. Their place will be taken by the pagans, who prove more worthy.

e. Scriptural image for the dismay and frustration of the wicked at seeing the virtuous rewarded, cf. Ps 35:16; 37:12; 112:10; Jb 16:9. In Mt it is used as a description of damnation.

f. As described by Is the servant 'took' our sorrows on himself in the sense that his own suffering was expiatory. Matthew takes the phrase to mean that Jesus 'took away' these sorrows by his healing miracles. This interpretation, at first sight forced, is in fact profoundly theological. It was to take on himself the expiation of sin that Jesus, the 'servant', came on earth; that is why he could relieve men of their bodily ills which are the consequence and the penalty of sin.

g. The E. bank of Lake Tiberias.

h. With the exception of Ac 7:56; Rv 1:13; 14:14, this title appears only in the gospels. There is no doubt that Jesus used it of himself, and indeed preferred it to others. At times he uses it to express his lowly state, 8:20; 11:19; 20:28, especially the humiliation of the Passion, 17:22 etc. At other times it is used to proclaim the definitive triumph of his resurrection, 17:9, of his return in glory, 24:30, of his coming in judgement, 25:31. That this title, Aramaic in flavour, could bring together these seemingly opposed qualities is clear from the following considerations. The phrase originally meant 'man', Ezk 2:1+, and by reason of its unusual and indirect form it underlined the lowliness of man's state. But the title suggested glory, too. It was used in Dn 7:13+, and later in the Jewish apocalyptic Book of Enoch, to indicate the transcendent figure, heavenly in origin, who was to receive from God's hand the eschatological kingdom (the kingdom 'at the end of times'). In this way therefore the title both veiled and hinted at (cf. Mk 1:34+; Mt 13:13+) the sort of Messiah Jesus was. Moreover, the explicit avowal in the presence of the Sanhedrin, 26:64+, should have removed all ambiguity.

i. The district got its name from the town of Gadara to the S.E. of the Lake. The Var. 'Gerasenes' (Mk, Lk and Vulg. Mt) derives from the name of another town (Gerasa or possibly Chorsia); the variant 'Gerasenes' is the result of a conjecture of Origen.

 37 and dejected, like sheep without a shepherd.^o 'Then he said to his disciples,

j. Until the day of Judgement the demons are to some extent free to work their mischief on earth, Rv 9:5; they do this normally by taking possession of men, 12:43-45+. Such possession often brings disease with it because disease—consequence of sin, 9:2+—is another manifestation of Satan's domination, Lk 13:16. It is for this reason that the gospel exorcisms, though sometimes described simply as expulsions, cf. 15:21-28p; Mk 1:23-28p; Lk 8:2, often take the form of cures, 9:32-34; 12:22-24p; 17:14-18p; Lk 13:10-17. By his power over the devils Jesus destroys Satan's empire, 12:28p; Lk 10:17-19; cf. Lk 4:6; Jn 12:31+, and inaugurates the messianic era of which, according to the prophets, the gift of the Holy Spirit is the distinctive mark, Is 11:2+; J1 3:1f. Man may refuse to recognise it, 12:24-32, but the demons see it all too well, cf. this passage and Mk 1:24p; 3:11p; Lk 4:41; Ac 16:17; 19:15. This power to exorcise is given by Jesus to his disciples simultaneously with the power of miraculous healing, 10:1,8p, with which it is connected, 8:3+; 4:24; 8:16p; Lk 13:32.

9 a. Capernaum, cf. 4:13.

b. Jesus puts the cure of the soul before that of the body; when he heals the body it is because he has the good of the soul in mind. Nevertheless his words in this verse contain a promise of bodily healing since sickness was regarded as the result of a sin committed either by the sufferer or by his parents, cf. 8:29+; Jn 5:14; 9:2.

c. Note the plural: Matthew is probably thinking of the Church's ministers who received this power from Christ, 18:18.

d. Called Levi by Mk and Lk.

e. Those whose moral conduct or disreputable profession, cf. 5:46+, rendered 'unclean' and socially outcast.

f. To the exact performance of the Law's external demands God prefers the inward quality of genuine compassion. It is a favourite theme of the prophets, Am 5:21+.

g. John the Baptist. Like the Pharisees, John's disciples used to observe fasts not prescribed by the Law in the hope that their devotion would hasten the coming of the kingdom.

h. The bridegroom is Jesus. His companions cannot fast because, with his coming, the messianic age has dawned.

i. Christ's death clearly foretold.

j. The old garment and the old wineskins stand for Judaism in so far as it contains elements which (in the scheme of salvation) are to pass away. The new cloth and the new wine represent the new spirit of the kingdom of God. The superadded devotional practices of John's disciples and of the Pharisees, intended to give new life to the old order, in fact are only leading to its downfall. Jesus declines either to add or to patch: his purpose is to produce something quite new—even the spirit of the Law is to be raised to a new plane, cf. 5:17f.

k. The head of the synagogue; called Jairus in Mk and Lk.

l. The loud wailing of the oriental mourner.

m. Messianic title, 2 S 7:1+; cf. Lk 1:32; Ac 2:30; Rm 1:3. It was familiar as such to the Jews, Mk 12:35; Jn 7:42, and Matthew in particular emphasises its application to Jesus (1:1; 12:23; 15:22; 20:30p; 21:9,15) who was slow to welcome the title because it involved a purely human notion of the Messiah, Mt 22:41-46; cf. Mk 1:34+. He preferred the more obscure title 'Son of Man', 8:20+.

n. Verse omitted by representatives of the Western Text.

o. Familiar biblical metaphor: Nb 27:17; 1 K 22:17; Jdt 11:19; Ezk 34:5.

B. THE APOSTOLIC DISCOURSE

The mission of the Twelve

10 He summoned his twelve disciples,^a and gave them authority over unclean spirits with power to cast them out and to cure all kinds of diseases and sickness.

These are the names of the twelve apostles:^b first, Simon who is called Peter, and his brother Andrew; James the son of Zebedee, and his brother John; Philip and Bartholomew; Thomas, and Matthew the tax collector; James the son of Alphaeus, and Thaddaeus; Simon the Zealot and Judas Iscariot,^c the one who was to betray him. These twelve Jesus sent out, instructing them as follows:

'Do not turn your steps to pagan territory, and do not enter any Samaritan town; go rather to the lost sheep of the House of Israel.^d And as you go, proclaim that the kingdom of heaven is close at hand. Cure the sick, raise the dead, cleanse the lepers, cast out devils. You received without charge, give without charge. Provide yourselves with no gold or silver, nor even with a few coppers for your purses, with no haversack for the journey or spare tunic or footwear or a staff, for the workman deserves his keep.

'Whatever town or village you go into, ask for someone trustworthy and stay with him until you leave. As you enter his house, salute it,^e and if the house deserves it, let your peace descend upon it; if it does not, let your peace come back to you. And if anyone does not welcome you or listen to what you have to say, as you walk out of the house or town shake the dust from your feet.^f I tell you solemnly, on the day of Judgement it will not go as hard with the land of Sodom and Gomorrah as with that town. Remember, I am sending you out like sheep among wolves; so be cunning as serpents and yet as harmless as doves.

The missionaries will be persecuted^g

'Beware of men: they will hand you over to sanhedrins^h and scourge you in their synagogues. You will be dragged before governors and kings for my sake, to bear witness before them and the pagans. But when they hand you over, do not worry about how to speak or what to say; what you are to say will be given to you when the time comes; because it is not you who will be speaking; the Spirit of your Father will be speaking in you.

'Brother will betray brother to death, and the father his child; children will rise against their parents and have them put to death. You will be hated by all men on account of my name; but the man who stands firm to the end will be saved. If they persecute you in one town, take refuge in the next; and if they persecute you in that, take refuge in another.ⁱ I tell you solemnly, you will not have gone the round of the towns of Israel before the Son of Man comes.^j

'The disciple is not superior to his teacher, nor the slave to his master. It is enough for the disciple that he should grow to be like his teacher, and the slave like his master. If they have called the master of the house Beelzebul, what will they not say of his household?

Open and fearless speech

'Do not be afraid of them therefore. For everything that is now covered will be uncovered, and everything now hidden will be made clear. What I say to you in the dark, tell in the daylight; what you hear in whispers, proclaim from the housetops.^k

'Do not be afraid of those who kill the body but cannot kill the soul; fear him rather who can destroy both body and soul in hell. Can you not buy two sparrows for a penny? And yet not one falls to the ground without your Father knowing. Why, every hair on your head has been counted. So there is no need to be afraid; you are worth more than hundreds of sparrows.

 heaven. 2 Tm 2:12
 Rv 3:5

Jesus, the cause of dissension^m

//Lk 12:51-53

- 34 'Do not suppose that I have come to bring peace to the earth: it is not peace I Lk 2:34
 35 have come to bring, but a sword. •For I have come to set a man against his father, Lk 22:36 a daughter against her mother, a daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. Mt 7:6 36 A man's enemies will be those of his own household.

Renouncing self to follow Jesus

Ex 32:27

- 37 'Anyone who prefers father or mother to me is not worthy of me. Anyone 8:22
 38 who prefers son or daughter to me is not worthy of me. •Anyone who does not //Lk 14:26-27
 39 take his cross and follow in my footsteps is not worthy of me. •Anyone who Dr 33:9
 finds his life will lose it; anyone who loses his life for my sake will find it." = 16:24-25

 because he is a disciple, then I tell you solemnly, he will most certainly not lose //Mk 9:41 his reward.'

IV. THE MYSTERY OF THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN

A. NARRATIVE SECTION

- ¹ 11 When Jesus had finished instructing his twelve disciples he moved on from there to teach and preach in their towns.^a 10 a. Matthew supposes that the reader already knows about the choice of the Twelve; Mark and Luke mention it expressly and distinguish the choice from the mission.

b. Apostle means 'one sent'.

c. 'Thaddaeus' (var. 'Lebbaeus') corresponds to 'Judas (son) of James' in the lists of Lk 6:16 and Ac 1:13. 'Isariot' is commonly taken to mean 'man of Kerioth' (a town in Judah, Jos 15:25).

d. Hebraism common in the Bible: the people of Israel. As heirs to the Choice and the Promise, the Jews are to be the first to receive the offer of the Messiah's saving work; but cf. Ac 8:5; 13:5+.

e. The oriental greeting is a wish of peace. In v. 13 this wish is treated in concrete fashion as an entity which, if it fails to secure its effect, nevertheless remains in being and returns to its original owner.

f. The phrase is Jewish in origin. The dust of any country other than the Holy Land is reckoned unclean; in this passage the impurity attaches to any place that refuses the word.

g. The instructions of vv. 17-39 clearly suppose a horizon wider than that of this first mission of the Twelve: they must have been issued at a later date (note their situation in Mk and Lk). Matthew puts them here to complete his missionary's handbook.

h. The small provincial sanhedrins and also the Great Sanhedrin of Jerusalem; cf. 5:21-22.

i. Om. 'and if, another'.

j. The coming which is here foretold is not concerned with the world at large but with Israel: it took place at the moment when God 'visited' his now faithless people and brought the O.T. era to an end by the destruction of Jerusalem and of its Temple in 71 A.D., cf. 24:1+.

k. Jesus was obliged to obscure his message: 1. his hearers would have misunderstood a clearer teaching, Mk 1:34+; 2. he himself had not yet completed—by death and resurrection—the work which alone could explain the message. Later on it will be the duty of his disciples to deliver the message in its entirety and without fear. These same words are found in Lk but with an entirely different meaning: the disciples are not to imitate Pharisaic hypocrisy; whatever they may try to hide will certainly come to light eventually; they must therefore speak openly.

l. When the last Judgement takes place and the Son commits the elect to his Father, cf. 25:34.

m. Christ is a 'sign that is rejected', Lk 2:34; his aim is not to provoke dissension, but this becomes inevitable as a result of the strict alternative he offers.

n. In Mt this dictum is given in a more archaic form than in Mk or Lk: 'find' covers the idea of 'winning', 'securing for oneself', cf. Gn 26:12; Ho 12:9; Pr 3:13; 21:21. See Mt 16:25+.

o. 'Prophet' and 'holy (or 'righteous') man', cf. also 13:17 and 23:29, are a familiar biblical pair; here they serve to indicate the missionary and the ordinary Christian.

p. The apostles whom Jesus is sending on their mission, cf. Mk 9:41 and Mt 18:1-6, 10, 14.

11 a. 'their', i.e. the Jews'.

||Lk 7:18-28 The Baptist's question. Jesus commends him

Now John in his prison had heard what Christ was doing and he sent his 2 disciples^b to ask him, 'Are you the one who is to come, or have we got to wait for 3 someone else?'^c •Jesus answered, 'Go back and tell John what you hear and see; 4 the blind see again, and the lame walk, lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, 5 and the dead are raised to life and the Good News is proclaimed to the poor;^d and happy is the man who does not lose faith in me'. 6

As the messengers were leaving, Jesus began to talk to the people about John: 7
'What did you go out into the wilderness to see? A reed swaying in the breeze? 8
No? •Then what did you go out to see? A man wearing fine clothes? Oh no, those 9 who wear fine clothes are to be found in palaces. •Then what did you go out for? 10
To see a prophet? Yes, I tell you, and much more than a prophet: •he is the one 11 of whom scripture says:

MI 3:1 *Look, I am going to send my messenger before you;
he will prepare your way before you.*

'I tell you solemnly, of all the children born of women, a greater than John 11
the Baptist has never been seen; yet the least in the kingdom of heaven is 12 greater than he is.^e •Since John the Baptist came, up to this present time, the 13 kingdom of heaven has been subjected to violence^f and the violent are taking it 14 by storm. •Because it was towards John that all the prophecies of the prophets 15 and of the Law were leading; •and he, if you will believe me, is the Elijah who 16 was to return.^g •If anyone has ears to hear, let him listen! 17

||Lk 7:31-35 Jesus condemns his contemporaries

'What description can I find for this generation? It is like children shouting to 16 each other as they sit in the market place:

"We played the pipes for you,
and you wouldn't dance;
we sang dirges,
and you wouldn't be mourners". 17

'For John came, neither eating nor drinking, and they say, "He is possessed". 18
The Son of Man came, eating and drinking, and they say, "Look, a glutton and 19 a drunkard, a friend of tax collectors and sinners". Yet wisdom has been proved 20 right by her actions."^h

||Lk 10:13-15 Lament over the lake-towns

Then he began to reproach the towns in which most of his miracles had been 20 worked, because they refused to repent.

'Alas for you, Chorazin! Alas for you, Bethsaida! For if the miracles done in 21 you had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in 22
sackcloth and ashes. •And still, I tell you that it will not go as hard on Judgement 23 day with Tyre and Sidon as with you. •And as for you, Capernaum, did you 24 want to be exalted as high as heaven? You shall be thrown down to hell. For if the 25 miracles done in you had been done in Sodom, it would have been standing yet.
=10:15 And still, I tell you that it will not go as hard with the land of Sodom on Judgement 26
day as with you.' 27

||Lk 10:21-22 The Good News revealed to the simple. The Father and the Son

At that time Jesus exclaimed, 'I bless you, Father, Lord of heaven and of 25 earth, for hiding these thingsⁱ from the learned and the clever and revealing them 26 to mere children. •Yes, Father, for that is what it pleased you to do. •Everything 27 has been entrusted to me by my Father; and no one knows the Son except the 28
Father, just as no one knows the Father except the Son and those to whom the 29
Son chooses to reveal him.^j

The gentle mastery of Christ

- 28 'Come to me, all you who labour and are overburdened,^k and I will give you 29 rest. •Shoulder my yoke and learn from me, for I am gentle and humble in heart, 30 and you will find rest for your souls. •Yes, my yoke is easy and my burden light.'

Picking corn on the sabbath

- 1 12 At that time Jesus took a walk one sabbath day through the cornfields.
2 His disciples were hungry and began to pick ears of corn and eat them.
3 The Pharisees noticed it and said to him, 'Look, your disciples are doing
4 something that is forbidden on the sabbath'.^a •But he said to them, 'Have you
5 not read what David did when he and his followers were hungry—•how he went 6 into the house of God and how they ate the loaves of offering which neither he 7 nor his followers were allowed to eat, but which were for the priests alone?
8 Or again, have you not read in the Law that on the sabbath day the Temple
9 priests break the sabbath without being blamed for it?^b •Now here, I tell you,
10 is something greater than the Temple. •And if you had understood the meaning
11 of the words: What I want is mercy, not sacrifice, you would not have condemned
12 the blameless. •For the Son of Man is master of the sabbath.'^c

Cure of the man with a withered hand

- 9 He moved on from there and went to their synagogue, •and a man was there 10 at the time who had a withered hand. They asked him, 'Is it against the law to 11 cure a man on the sabbath day?' hoping for something to use against him. •But he 12 said to them, 'If any one of you here had only one sheep and it fell down a hole
13 on the sabbath day, would he not get hold of it and lift it out? •Now a man is far 14 more important than a sheep, so it follows that it is permitted to do good on the 15 sabbath day.' •Then he said to the man, 'Stretch out your hand'. He stretched it
16 out and his hand was better, as sound as the other one. •At this the Pharisees 17 went out and began to plot against him, discussing how to destroy him.

Jesus the 'servant of Yahweh'

- 15 Jesus knew this and withdrew from the district. Many followed him and he 16 cured them all, •but warned them not to make him known. •This^d was to fulfil 17 the prophecy of Isaiah:

b. Var. 'two of his disciples'.

c. John the Baptist is not expressing complete doubt about Jesus, but he is surprised to find that he is a very different sort of Messiah from what he had expected, cf. 3:10-12.

d. This allusion to the oracles of Is assures John that the messianic era is being inaugurated, even though Jesus confines himself to beneficent and saving miracles, without resorting to violence and retribution. Cf. Lk 4: 17-21.

e. Simply because he is a member of the kingdom, whereas John, as the Precursor, remains at its gates. The sentence contrasts epochs rather than persons: the era of the kingdom immeasurably transcends that which preceded and prepared for it.

f. Various interpretations have been offered. The 'violence' may be: 1. the praiseworthy violence, the bitter self-sacrifice, of those who would take possession of the kingdom; 2. the misguided violence of those who would establish the kingdom by force (the Zealots); 3. the tyrannical violence of the powers of evil, or of their agents on earth, who seek to maintain their dominion in this world and to thwart the advance of the kingdom of God. 4. A possible translation 'The kingdom of heaven clears a way for itself by violence', i.e. is powerfully establishing itself despite all obstacles.

g. John brings the O.T. era to its close: he carries on where Malachi, the last of the prophets, left off, and fulfils Malachi's last prediction, Ml 3:23.

h. Var. 'by her children', cf. Lk 7:35. Like petulant children who will play none of the games suggested

(in this case they refuse to play either at weddings or at funerals), the Jews reject all God's advances whether through the stern penance of John or through the gentle courtesy of Jesus. In spite of this, God's wise design carries through, independently of anything extrinsic to itself, and so its success is its own vindication.

i. Vv. 25-27 are not closely connected with the context in which Matthew has placed the passage (cf. its different position in Lk). Hence, 'these things' refers not to what precedes but to the 'mysteries of the kingdom', 13:11, which are revealed to the 'little ones'—i.e. to the disciples, cf. 10:42—but hidden from the 'wise men'—i.e. from the members and teachers of the Pharisee group.

j. V. 27 has a Johannine flavour: awareness of Christ's divine sonship exists in the deepest stratum of the synoptic tradition as well as in Jn.

k. The burden of the Law and of the additional Pharisaic observances. The 'yoke of the Law' is a current rabbinic metaphor; see also Si 51:26; Zp 3:9 (LXX); Lm 3:27; Jr 2:20; 5:5; cf. Is 14:25.

12 a. The disciples are not attacked for picking the ears as they walked (this was allowed, Dt 23:26) but for doing so on the sabbath. Casuistry saw in this one of the 'works' forbidden by the Law, Ex 34:21.

b. Far from stopping, the work of the sacred ministry actually increased on the sabbath.

c. Jesus here claims authority even over Israel's God-given institutions.

d. I.e. Christ's avoidance of publicity for his work of healing.

B. THE PARABOLIC DISCOURSE

Introduction

||Mk 4:1-2

||Lk 8:4

- 1 13 That same day,^a Jesus left the house and sat by the lakeside, •but such

Parable of the sower

||Mk 4:3-9

||Lk 8:5-8

- 4 He said, 'Imagine a sower going out to sow. •As he sowed, some seeds fell
 5 on the edge of the path, and the birds came and ate them up. •Others fell on

 7 there was no depth of earth; •but as soon as the sun came up they were scorched 8 and, not having any roots, they withered away. •Others fell among thorns, and 9 the thorns grew up and choked them. •Others fell on rich soil and produced their

Why Jesus speaks in parables

||Mk 4:10-12,

||Lk 8:9-10,

- 10 Then the disciples went up to him and asked, 'Why do you talk to them in 11 parables?' •'Because' he replied 'the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven are 12 revealed to you, but they are not revealed to them. •For anyone who has will be given more, and he will have more than enough; but from anyone who has not, 13 =25:29
||Lk 19:25

e. 'true faith': this gives the meaning of the Hebr. term mishpat (and of its LXX translation krisis), often rendered 'judgement', which signifies the divine statute that governs the relationship of God with man in so far as it is known through revelation and the true religion that is founded on it.

f. Canaanite divinity. The name means 'Baal the Prince' (not 'Baal of the dunghill' as is sometimes asserted), and so orthodox monotheism naturally interpreted it as 'Prince of devils'. The form 'Beelzebub' (Syr. and Vulg.) is a contemptuous play on words (already found in 2 K 1:2f) which makes the name mean 'Baal (Lord) of the flies'.

g. Lit. 'your children', a semitism.

h. There is some excuse for not recognising Christ's divine nature since it is hidden under the appearance of an ordinary 'son of man', but there is no excuse for blinding oneself to the manifest works of the Spirit. The man who denies these is resisting God's most direct appeal and putting himself outside the range of God's saving grace, cf. Heb 6:4-6; 10:26-31.

i. Not a merely 'idle' word but a malicious and baseless assertion, a calumny.

j. A miracle that would prove Jesus had authority and show what sort of authority it was, cf. Is 7:11f; Lk 1:18+; Jn 2:11+. He refuses to give any other sign but the decisive one which is his resurrection, here obscurely foretold.

k. Lit. 'adulterous': a biblical metaphor; cf. Ho 1:2+.

l. A ready-made expression borrowed from Jon 2:1 and only approximately indicating the space of time between Christ's death and resurrection.

m. The ancients thought of desert places as inhabited by demons, cf. Lv 16:8+; 17:7+; Is 13:21; 34:14; Ba 4:35; Rv 18:2; Mt 8:28. Nevertheless, the devils much prefer to dwell in man, Mt 8:29+.

n. Not Mary's children but near relations, cousins perhaps, which both Hebr. and Aramaic style 'brothers', cf. Gn 13:8; 14:16; 29:15; Lv 10:4; 1 Ch 23:22f.

o. V. 47 ('Someone said to him: Your mother and brothers are standing outside and want to speak to you') is omitted by some important textual witnesses. It is probably a restatement of v. 46 modelled on Mk and Lk.

p. The claims of physical relationship come after those of spiritual, cf. 8:21f; 10:37.

13 a. A merely transitional cliché of no chronological significance.

b. Making a total of 7, cf. 6:9+, Mt adds 5 parables to the 2 he shares with Mk.

c. Lit. 'He who has ears, let him hear'. As in 11:15 and 13:43 some authorities have 'He who has ears to hear, let...'

The parable of the sower explained

‘You, therefore, are to hear the parable of the sower. •When anyone hears the word of the kingdom without understanding, the evil one comes and carries off what was sown in his heart: this is the man who received the seed on the edge of the path. •The one who received it on patches of rock is the man who hears the word and welcomes it at once with joy. •But he has no root in him, he does not last; let some trial come, or some persecution on account of the word, and he falls away at once. •The one who received the seed in thorns is the man who hears the word, but the worries of this world and the lure of riches choke the word and so he produces nothing. •And the one who received the seed in rich soil is the man who hears the word and understands it; he is the one who yields a harvest and produces now a hundredfold, now sixty, now thirty.’

Ga 5:22

Parable of the darnel

He put another parable before them, ‘The kingdom of heaven may be compared to a man who sowed good seed in his field. •While everybody was asleep his enemy came, sowed darnel all among the wheat, and made off. •When the new wheat sprouted and ripened, the darnel appeared as well. •The owner’s servants went to him and said, “Sir, was it not good seed that you sowed in your field? If so, where does the darnel come from?” •“Some enemy has done this” he answered. And the servants said, “Do you want us to go and weed it out?” But he said, “No, because when you weed out the darnel you might pull up the wheat with it. •Let them both grow till the harvest; and at harvest time I shall say to the reapers: First collect the darnel and tie it in bundles to be burnt, then gather the wheat into my barn.”’

The people are taught only in parables

In all this Jesus spoke to the crowds in parables; indeed, he would never speak to them except in parables. •This was to fulfil the prophecy:

I will speak to you in parables and expound things hidden since the foundation of the world.^h

The parable of the darnel explained

36 Then, leaving the crowds, he went to the house; and his disciples came to 37 him and said, 'Explain the parable about the darnel in the field to us'. •He said
38 in reply, 'The sower of the good seed is the Son of Man. •The field is the world;
the good seed is the subjects of the kingdom; the darnel, the subjects of the evil 39 one;ⁱ •the enemy who sowed them, the devil; the harvest is the end of the world;
40 the reapers are the angels. •Well then, just as the darnel is gathered up and burnt 41 in the fire, so it will be at the end of time. •The Son of Man will send his angels and they will gather out of his kingdom all things that provoke offences and all 42 who do evil, •and throw them into the blazing furnace, where there will be

Conclusion

51 'Have you understood all this?' They said, 'Yes'. •And he said to them, 52 'Well then, every scribe who becomes a disciple of the kingdom of heaven is like a householder who brings out from his storeroom things both new and old'.^l

Mk 4:13+

13 d. For those of good will, what they have learnt from the old covenant will be added to and perfected by the new, cf. 5:17,20. The ill-disposed will even lose what they have, namely, that Jewish Law which, without the perfection Christ brings to it, is destined to become obsolete.

e. A deliberate and culpable insensibility which is both the cause and the explanation of the withdrawal of grace. The preceding narratives, all of which throw light on this 'hardening', 11:16-19,20-24; 12:7,14,24-32, 34,39,45, prepare the way for the parable discourse. Those who saw so dimly could only be further blinded by the light of full revelation, Mk 1:34+. Jesus, therefore, does not reveal with complete clarity the true nature of the messianic kingdom which is unostentatious. Instead he filters the light through symbols, the resulting half-light is nevertheless a grace from God, an invitation to ask for something better and accept something greater.

f. The prophets and holy men of the O.T. Paul speaks more than once of the time when the 'mystery' was not revealed: Rm 16:25; Ep 3:4-5; Col 1:26. Cf. also 1 P 1:11-12.

g. The kingdom, like the mustard seed and the leaven, is unpretentious in its beginnings but destined for enormous growth.

h. Several authorities omit 'of the world'.

i. Lit. 'the children of the kingdom' and 'the children of the evil one', (semitisms).

j. To the kingdom of the Son (the messianic kingdom) of v. 41 there succeeds the kingdom of the Father to whom the Son commits the elect whom he has saved. Cf. Mt 25:34; 1 Co 15:24.

k. If a man discovers the kingdom of heaven he cannot enter unless he leaves all behind, cf. 19:21.

l. The Jewish teacher who becomes a disciple of Christ has at his disposal all the wealth of the Old Testament as well as the perfection of the New, v. 12. This picture of a 'scribe who becomes a disciple' sums up the whole ideal of Matthew the evangelist and may well be a self-portrait.

25 sea, for there was a head-wind. •In the fourth watch of the night^f he went towards 26 them, walking on the lake, •and when the disciples saw him walking on the lake
27 they were terrified. 'It is a ghost' they said, and cried out in fear. •But at once 28 Jesus called out to them, saying, 'Courage! It is I! Do not be afraid.' •It was Peter^g who answered. 'Lord,' he said 'if it is you, tell me to come to you across the water.'
29 'Come' said Jesus. Then Peter got out of the boat and started walking towards 30 Jesus across the water, •but as soon as he felt the force of the wind, he took fright

m. Nazareth, where he lived as a child, cf. 2:23.

14 a. Om. (Vulg.) 'Philip'; the omission is due to the difficulty the name seemed to create. But in fact this Philip is not the tetrarch of Ituraea and Trachonitis, Lk 3:1; cf. Mt 16:13; he is another son of Herod the Great by Mariamne II and therefore half-brother of Antipas; Josephus himself calls him Herod. Antipas' fault lay not so much in having married his niece as in having taken her from his brother who was still living; moreover, he had repudiated his first wife.

b. According to Josephus, the girl's name was Salome.

c. On shore the crowd hurried to the place the boat was making for.

d. This miraculous bread, though not the Holy Eucharist, clearly prefigures and leads up to it. This is the view of the Fathers and indeed of the evangelists before them: cf. v. 19 with 26:26, and cf. Jn 6:1-15, 51-58.

e. Cf. Mk 6:47; var. 'some furlongs from land', cf. Jn 6:19.

f. 3 to 6 a.m.

g. Matthew deliberately punctuates the narrative section of his 'ecclesiastical book' with three episodes featuring Peter: this passage, 16:16-20 and 17:24-27.

15 a. Oral tradition which, to safeguard the observance of the written Law, made many additions to it. According to the rabbis this tradition went back through the 'elders' to Moses himself.

b. Lit. 'eat bread'.

c. Lit. 'Honour', but implying a reverence shown in practical ways.

d. Vulg. interprets 'Every gift I make (to God) is useful to you'.

e. Because property thus made over by vow assumes a sacred character which precludes all claims made by the parents. Such a vow was in fact only a legal fiction involving no sacrifice of ownership; it was no more than a despicable way of escaping the duty of filial p'ety. Though the rabbis acknowledged its impiety they sustained its validity.

f. The Pharisees had objected to eating with unpurified hands, v. 2, but Jesus passes to the larger question of the legal impurity of certain foods, Lv 11. Legal impurity, he teaches, is secondary to moral which is the only impurity that really matters, Ac 10:9-16, 28; Rm 14:14f.

Tt 1:15 a man unclean. •For from the heart come evil intentions: murder, adultery, Jm 3:6 fornication, theft, perjury, slander. •These are the things that make a man unclean. But to eat with unwashed hands does not make a man unclean.'

||Mk 7:24-30 The daughter of the Canaanite woman healed

Jesus left that place and withdrew to the region of Tyre and Sidon. •Then 9:27+ out came a Canaanite woman from that district^g and started shouting, 'Sir, Son 8:29+ of David, take pity on me. My daughter is tormented by a devil.' •But he Lk 11:8 answered her not a word. And his disciples went and pleaded with him. 'Give her what she wants,'^h they said 'because she is shouting after us.' •He said in 24 reply, 'I was sent only to the lost sheep of the House of Israel'. •But the woman
10:6 Rm 15:8 had come up and was kneeling at his feet. 'Lord,' she said 'help me.' •He replied, 26 'It is not fair to take the children's food and throw it to the house-dogs'.ⁱ •She 27 retorted, 'Ah yes, sir; but even house-dogs can eat the scraps that fall from their 8:10+ master's table'. •Then Jesus answered her, 'Woman, you have great faith. Let your wish be granted.' And from that moment her daughter was well again.

Cures near the lake

Mk 7:31 Jesus went on from there and reached the shores of the Sea of Galilee, and he went up into the hills. He sat there, •and large crowds came to him bringing the lame, the crippled, the blind, the dumb and many others; these they put 8:3+ down at his feet, and he cured them. •The crowds were astonished to see the Mk 7:37 dumb speaking, the cripples whole again,^j the lame walking and the blind with their sight, and they praised the God of Israel.

But Jesus called his disciples to him and said, 'I feel sorry for all these people; 32 they have been with me for three days now and have nothing to eat. I do not want to send them off hungry, they might collapse on the way.' •The 33 disciples said to him, 'Where could we get enough bread in this deserted place to feed such a crowd?' •Jesus said to them, 'How many loaves have you?' 'Seven' 34 they said 'and a few small fish.' •Then he instructed the crowd to sit down on the 35 ground, •and he took the seven loaves and the fish, and he gave thanks and 36 8:3+ broke them and handed them to the disciples who gave them to the crowds.
They all ate as much as they wanted, and they collected what was left of the 37

9 why are you talking among yourselves about having no bread? 'Do you not yet understand? Do you not remember the five loaves for the five thousand and the 10 number of baskets you collected? 'Or the seven loaves for the four thousand 11 and the number of baskets you collected? 'How could you fail to understand that I was not talking about bread? What I said was: Beware of the yeast of the 12 Pharisees and Sadducees.' 'Then they understood that he was telling them to be on their guard, not against the yeast for making bread, but against the teaching of the Pharisees and Sadducees.^b 8:10+

Peter's profession of faith; his pre-eminence

||Mk 8:27-30
||Lk 9:18-21

- 13 When Jesus came to the region of Caesarea Philippi he put this question to 14 his disciples, 'Who do people say the Son of Man is?' 'And they said, 'Some say he is John the Baptist, some Elijah, and others Jeremiah or one of the 15 prophets'.^c 'But you,' he said 'who do you say I am?' 'Then Simon Peter spoke 17 up, 'You are the Christ,' he said 'the Son of the living God'.^d 'Jesus replied, 'Simon son of Jonah, you are a happy man! Because it was not flesh and blood^e 18 that revealed this to you but my Father in heaven. 'So I now say to you: You are Peter^f and on this rock I will build my Church.^g And the gates of the under-19 world^h can never hold out against it. 'I will give you the keys of the kingdom 8:20+

g. Since the woman has left pagan territory it is in Israel that Jesus grants his favour.

h. Not 'send her away' simply: the Greek verb here means 'let her go with her request granted', as in 18:27; 27:15.

i. Christ must first devote himself to the salvation of the Jews ('children' of God and of the promises) before turning to the pagans who, to the Jewish mind, were 'dogs'. Much of the sting is taken out of the epithet here by the fact that Jesus is using a term blunted by repeated use; moreover he adopts its diminutive form (little or pet dogs).

j. Om. 'the cripples whole again'.

16 a. Om. 'In the evening... of the times'. The 'times' are the messianic age; the 'signs' are the miracles worked by Jesus: cf. 11:3-5; 12:38.

b. As leaven ferments the dough, 13:33, but can also make it go bad, cf. 1 Co 5:6; Ga 5:9, so the perverse doctrine of the Jewish leaders threatens to misguide those for whom they are responsible, cf. 15:14.

c. Jesus claimed the title 'prophet' for himself only indirectly and obscurely, Mt 13:57p; Lk 13:33, but the public openly hailed him as such, Mt 16:14p; 21:11,46; Mk 6:15p; Lk 7:16,39; 24:19; Jn 4:19; 9:17. The title had messianic significance because the Jews confidently expected a revival of the spirit of prophecy (extinct since Malachi) as a sign of the messianic era. It was to revive either in the person of Elijah. Mt 17:10-11p, or in the form of a general outpouring of the Spirit, Ac 2:17-18,33. Many (false) prophets did actually arise in Christ's time, Mt 24:11,24p, etc. John the Baptist was himself a prophet, Mt 11:9p; 14:5; 21:26p; Lk 1:76, precisely because he was the Precursor who had come 'in the spirit of Elijah', Mt 11:10p,14; 17:12p. Nevertheless he denied (Jn 1:21+) that he was 'the prophet' foretold by Moses, Dt 18:15. This prophet, the early Christians believed, was Jesus and no other, Ac 3:22-26; Jn 6:14; 7:40. From Pentecost onwards, however, prophecy became a familiar charismatic phenomenon in the early Church, Ac 11:27+; for this reason the title prophet as applied to Christ soon dropped out and was replaced by others more suited to his unique function and person.

d. In Mt Peter acknowledges not only that Jesus is the Messiah but also that he is Son of God; this second title is not found in Mk and Lk. Cf. also 14:33 with Mk 6:51f. Cf. Mt 4:3+.

e. The expression indicates man, emphasising his material, limited nature as opposed to that of the spirit world, Si 14:18; Rm 7:5+; 1 Co 15:50; Ga 1:16; Ep 6:12; Heb 2:14; cf. Jn 1:13.

f. Neither the Greek word petros nor even, as it seems, its Aramaic equivalent kepha ('rock') was used as a person's name before Jesus conferred it on the apostles' leader to symbolise the part he was to play in the foundation of the Church. This change of name had possibly been made earlier, cf. Jn 1:42; Mk 3:16; Lk 6:14.

g. The Hebr. qahal which the Greek renders ekklesia means 'an assembly called together'; it is used frequently in the O.T. to indicate the community of the Chosen People, especially the community of the desert period, cf. Ac 7:38. Certain Jewish groups (among them the Essenes of Qumran) regarded themselves as the chosen remnant of Israel (Is 4:3+) which was to survive in 'the latter days'. These had also used the term that Jesus now adopts to indicate the messianic community, the community of the 'new alliance' sealed with his blood, Mt 26:28+; Ep 5:25. By using the term 'assembly' side by side with that of 'kingdom of heaven', Mt 4:17+, Jesus shows that this eschatological community (community of the 'end-times') is to have its beginnings here on earth in the form of an organised society whose leader he now appoints. Cf. Ac 5:11+; 1 Co 1:2+.

h. Greek: Hades; Hebrew: Sheol, the dwelling place of the dead, cf. Nb 16:33+. Here, its personified 'gates' suggest the powers of evil which first lead man into that death which is sin and then imprison him once for all in eternal death. The Church's task will be to rescue the elect from death's dominion, from the death of the body and above all from eternal death, so that of heaven: whatever you bind on earth shall be considered bound in heaven; whatever you loose on earth shall be considered loosed in heaven.ⁱ •Then he 20 gave the disciples strict orders not to tell anyone that he was the Christ.^j

First prophecy of the Passion

From that time^k Jesus began to make it clear to his disciples that he was 21 destined to go to Jerusalem and suffer grievously at the hands of the elders and chief priests and scribes, to be put to death and to be raised up on the third day.
Then, taking him aside, Peter started to remonstrate with him. 'Heaven preserve 22
you, Lord;' he said 'this must not happen to you'. •But he turned and said to 23 Peter, 'Get behind me, Satan! You are an obstacle^l in my path, because the way you think is not God's way but man's.'

The condition of following Christ

Then Jesus said to his disciples, 'If anyone wants to be a follower of mine, 24 let him renounce himself and take up his cross and follow me. •For anyone who 25 wants to save his life will lose it; but anyone who loses his life for my sake will find it.^m •What, then, will a man gain if he wins the whole world and ruins his 26 life? Or what has a man to offer in exchange for his life?

'For the Son of Man is going to come in the glory of his Father with his 27 angels, and, when he does, he will reward each one according to his behaviour.ⁿ
I tell you solemnly, there are some of these standing here who will not taste 28 death before they see the Son of Man coming with his kingdom.'^o

The transfiguration

17 Six days later, Jesus took with him Peter and James and his brother John 1 and led them up a high mountain^a where they could be alone. •There in 2 their presence he was transfigured: his face shone like the sun and his clothes became as white as the light.^b •Suddenly Moses and Elijah^c appeared to them; 3 they were talking with him. •Then Peter spoke to Jesus. 'Lord,' he said 'it is 4 wonderful for us to be here;^d if you wish, I will make^e three tents here, one for you, one for Moses and one for Elijah.' •He was still speaking when suddenly 5 a bright cloud covered them with shadow, and from the cloud there came a voice which said, 'This is my Son, the Beloved; he enjoys my favour. Listen to him.'^f
When they heard this, the disciples fell on their faces, overcome with fear. •But 6
Jesus came up and touched them. 'Stand up,' he said 'do not be afraid.' •And 8 when they raised their eyes they saw no one but only Jesus.

The question about Elijah

As they came down from the mountain Jesus gave them this order, 'Tell 9 no one about the vision until the Son of Man has risen from the dead'. •And the 10 disciples put this question to him, 'Why do the scribes say then that Elijah has to come first?'^g •'True;' he replied 'Elijah is to come to see that everything is 11 once more as it should be; •however, I tell you that Elijah has come already and they did not recognise him but treated him as they pleased; and the Son of Man will suffer similarly at their hands.' •The disciples understood then that he had 13 been speaking of John the Baptist.

The epileptic demoniac

As they were rejoining the crowd a man came up to him and went down on 14 his knees before him. •'Lord,' he said 'take pity on my son: he is a lunatic and 15 in a wretched state; he is always falling into the fire or into the water. •I took 16 him to your disciples and they were unable to cure him.' •'Faithless and perverse 17 generation!' Jesus said in reply 'How much longer must I be with you? How much longer must I put up with you? Bring him here to me.' •And when Jesus rebuked 18 it the devil came out of the boy who was cured from that moment.

- 19 Then the disciples came privately to Jesus. 'Why were we unable to cast it 20 out?' they asked. 'He answered, 'Because you have little faith.' I tell you solemnly, if your faith were the size of a mustard seed you could say to this mountain, "Move from here to there", and it would move; nothing would be impossible for you.'^a

Second prophecy of the Passion

- 22 One day when they were together in Galilee, Jesus said to them, 'The Son death, and on the third day he will be raised to life again'. And a great sadness came over them.

The Temple tax paid by Jesus and Peter

- 24 When they reached Capernaum, the collectors of the half-shekelⁱ came to 25 Peter and said, 'Does your master not pay the half-shekel?' 'Oh yes' he replied, and went into the house. But before he could speak, Jesus said, 'Simon, what is your opinion? From whom do the kings of the earth take toll or tribute? From 26 their sons^j or from foreigners?' 'And when he replied, 'From foreigners', Jesus 27 said, 'Well then, the sons are exempt. However, so as not to offend these people, go to the lake and cast a hook; take the first fish that bites, open its mouth and there you will find a shekel; take it and give it to them for me and for you.'

Ex 30:15

it may lead them into the kingdom of heaven, cf. Col 1:13; 1 Co 15:26; Rv 6:8; 20:13. In this the Church follows its Master who died, descended into the underworld, cf. 1 P 3:19+, and rose again, Ac 2:27,31.

i. The City of God, like the City of Death, has its gates too; they grant entrance only to those who are worthy of it. Peter has the keys. It is his function, therefore, to open or close to all who would come to the kingdom of heaven through the Church. 'bind' and 'loose' are technical rabbinic terms; primarily they have a disciplinary reference; one is 'bound' (condemned to) or 'loosed' (absolved from) excommunication. Their secondary usage is connected with doctrinal or juridical decisions: an opinion is 'bound' (forbidden) or 'loosed' (allowed). Of the household of God Peter is controller (the keys symbolise this, cf. Is 22:22). In that capacity he is to exercise the disciplinary power of admitting or excluding those he thinks fit; he will also, in his administration of the community, make necessary decisions in questions of doctrinal belief and of moral conduct. The verdicts he delivers and the pronouncements he makes will be ratified by God in heaven. Catholic exegetes maintain that these enduring promises hold good not only for Peter himself but also for Peter's successors. This inference, not explicitly drawn in the text, is considered legitimate because Jesus plainly intends to provide for his Church's future by establishing a régime that will not collapse with Peter's death. Two other texts, Lk 22:31f and Jn 21:15f, on Peter's primacy emphasise that its operation is to be in the domain of faith; they also indicate that this makes him head not only of the Church after the death of Christ but of the apostolic group then and there.

j. Vulg. 'Jesus Christ'.

k. Jesus has just elicited from his disciples the first explicit profession of faith in him as Messiah. At this crucial moment he tells them for the first time of his coming Passion: he is not only the glorious Messiah, he is also the suffering servant. Within the next few days this teaching method will be pursued in a similar situation: the glorious transfiguration will be followed by an injunction to silence and a prediction of Passion, 17:1-12. It is Christ's way of bracing the disciples' faith for the approaching crisis of death and resurrection.

l. By blocking the Messiah's appointed way, Peter becomes an 'obstacle' (primary sense of the Greek skandalon) to Christ and becomes, though unwittingly, the tool of Satan, cf. 4:1-10.

m. Paradox. This dictum and those immediately following oscillate between two senses of human 'life': its present stage and its future. The Greek psyche, here equivalent to the Hebr. nephesh, contains all three senses of 'life', 'soul', 'person'.

n. 'his behaviour'; var. 'his works'.

o. In vv. 27-28 two sayings of Christ, each dealing with a different event, have been grouped together because they have a common reference to the coming of the kingdom of God: v. 27 refers to the Last Judgement which inaugurates the kingdom of the Father; v. 28 refers to the destruction of Jerusalem which demonstrates the presence of the kingdom of Christ, cf. 24:1+.

17 a. Tabor, according to the traditional opinion. Some favour Great Hermon.

b. Var. 'as snow', cf. 28:3.

c. Respectively representing Law and prophets, they do homage to the founder of the 'new alliance', cf. 5:17; Lk 22:20. As once they were privileged at Sinai with God's revelation, Ex 33:20+; cf. 1 K 19:9-13, so now they are made witnesses of the anticipated revelation of the Son of Man, cf. 24:30.

d. An alternative translation 'It is a good thing for us to be here'.

e. Vulg. 'let us make', cf. Mk and Lk.

f. The disciples know that the Messiah has already come 16:16, and have seen him in his glory, 17:1-7; they are therefore surprised that Elijah has not played the part of Precursor assigned to him by Malachi. Jesus replies that Elijah has in fact performed that function, though unrecognised, in the humble person of the Baptist.

g. Var. 'no faith'.

h. Add. v. 21 'As for this kind (of devil), it is cast out only by prayer and fasting', cf. Mk 9:29.

i. A yearly tax levied on individuals for the upkeep of the Temple.

j. I.e. 'their subjects', cf. 13:38. Christ makes a pun on this semitic metaphorical use of 'son' in order to indicate himself, who is the Son, cf. 3:17; 17:5 and 10:32f; 11:25-27, etc., together with his disciples who are his brothers, 12:50, and sons of the same Father, 5:45, etc. Cf. Mt 4:3+.

B. THE DISCOURSE ON THE CHURCH

Who is the greatest?

18 At this time the disciples came to Jesus and said, 'Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?' •So he called a little child to him and set the child in front of them. •Then he said, 'I tell you solemnly, unless you change and become like little children you will never enter the kingdom of heaven. •And so, the one who makes himself as little as this little child is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven.

On leading others astray

'Anyone who welcomes a little child like this^a in my name welcomes me. But anyone who is an obstacle to bring down one of these little ones who have faith in me would be better drowned in the depths of the sea with a great millstone round his neck. •Alas for the world that there should be such obstacles! Obstacles indeed there must be, but alas for the man who provides them!

'If your hand or your foot should cause^b you to sin, cut it off and throw it away: it is better for you to enter into life^c crippled or lame, than to have two hands or two feet and be thrown into eternal fire. •And if your eye should cause you to sin, tear it out and throw it away: it is better for you to enter into life with one eye, than to have two eyes and be thrown into the hell of fire.^d

'See that you never despise any of these little ones, for I tell you that their angels in heaven are continually in the presence of^e my Father in heaven.^f

The lost sheep

'Tell me. Suppose a man has a hundred sheep and one of them strays; will he not leave the ninety-nine on the hillside and go in search of the stray? •I tell you solemnly, if he finds it, it gives him more joy than do the ninety-nine that did not stray at all. •Similarly, it is never the will of your Father in heaven that one of these little ones should be lost.

Brotherly correction

'If your brother does something wrong,^g go and have it out with him alone, between your two selves. If he listens to you, you have won back your brother. If he does not listen, take one or two others along with you: the evidence of two or three witnesses is required to sustain any charge. •But if he refuses to listen to these, report it to the community;^h and if he refuses to listen to the community, treat him like a pagan or a tax collector.ⁱ

'I tell you solemnly, whatever you bind on earth shall be considered bound in heaven; whatever you loose on earth shall be considered loosed in heaven.^j

Prayer in common

'I tell you solemnly once again, if two of you on earth agree to ask anything at all, it will be granted to you by my Father in heaven. •For where two or three meet in my name, I shall be there with them.^k

Forgiveness of injuries

Then Peter went up to him and said, 'Lord, how often must I forgive my brother if he wrongs me? As often as seven times?' •Jesus answered, 'Not seven, I tell you, but seventy-seven times.^k

Parable of the unforgiving debtor

'And so the kingdom of heaven may be compared to a king who decided to settle his accounts with his servants. •When the reckoning began, they brought him a man who owed ten thousand talents;^l •but he had no means of paying, so his master gave orders that he should be sold, together with his wife and children and all his possessions, to meet the debt. •At this, the servant threw himself down at his master's feet. "Give me time" he said "and I will pay the whole sum." •And the servant's master felt so sorry for him that he let him go and cancelled the debt. •Now as this servant went out, he happened to meet a fellow servant who owed him one hundred denarii;^m and he seized him by the throat and began to throttle him. "Pay what you owe me" he said. •His fellow servant fell at his feet and implored him, saying, "Give me time and I will pay you". But the other would not agree; on the contrary, he had him thrown into prison till he should pay the debt. •His fellow servants were deeply distressed when they saw what had happened, and they went to their master and reported the whole affair to him. •Then the master sent for him. "You wicked servant," he said "I cancelled all that debt of yours when you appealed to me. •Were you not bound, then, to have pity on your fellow servant just as I had pity on you?"^{1 Jn 4:11} And in his anger the master handed him over to the torturers till he should pay all his debt. •And that is how my heavenly Father will deal with you unless you each forgive your brother from your heart.'^{6:12 Jn 2:13}

VI. THE APPROACHING ADVENT OF THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN

A. NARRATIVE SECTION

The question about divorce

Mk 10:1-12

19 Jesus had now finished what he wanted to say, and he left Galilee and came into the part of Judaea which is on the far side of the Jordan. •Large crowds followed him and he healed them there.^{Lk 9:51 Jn 10:40}

Some Pharisees approached him, and to test him they said, 'Is it against the Law for a man to divorce his wife on any pretext whatever?' •He answered, 'Have you not read that the creator from the beginning made them male and female •and that he said: This is why a man must leave father and mother, and cling to his wife, and the two become one body? •They are no longer two, therefore, but one body. So then, what God has united, man must not divide.'^{16:1 Lk 11:54 Jn 8:6 Gn 1:27 Gn 2:24 Ep 5:31 1 Co 6:16; 7:10 Dt 24:1}

They said to him, 'Then why did Moses command that a writ of dismissal should be given in cases of divorce?' •'It was because you were so unteachable' he said 'that Moses allowed you to divorce your wives, but it was not like this from the beginning. •Now I say this to you: the man who divorces his wife—I am not speaking of fornication^b—and marries another, is guilty of adultery.'^{= 5:32 ||Lk 16:18}

18 a. That is to say, one who through the virtue of simplicity becomes a child again. cf. v. 4.

b. Lit. 'a scandal' in the primary sense of the Greek word (something to trip over, cf. 16:23+) not in the common English sense of the word. Vv. 8-9 (already cited in 5:29-30) have been inserted into this passage at the expense of the context and solely because the word 'scandal' (seduction of others) in vv. 6-7 has suggested another dictum on 'scandal' (in the sense of obstacles within oneself).

c. Eternal life.

d. Hebr. Gehinnom, a valley in Jerusalem once polluted by infant sacrifice, Lv 18:21+. Later the name was used for the place of damnation and punishment of the wicked—what we call 'hell'.

e. Lit. 'always gaze on the face', a biblical phrase meaning that the courtier is in the king's presence, cf. 2 S 14:24; 2 K 25:19; Tb 12:15.

f. Add. v. 11 'For the Son of Man has come to save what was lost', cf. Lk 19:10.

g. Many authorities add the specifying phrase 'to you', but it is probably to be omitted. The fault in question is grave and notorious; it has not necessarily been committed against the one whose duty it is to correct it. In v. 21 the case is different.

h. The ekklesia, i.e. the qahal or gathering of the brethren.

i. I.e. 'outcast', 'excommunicate'.

j. One of the powers conferred on Peter is here conferred on the Church's ministers, to whom this discourse is primarily addressed.

k. Others render 'seventy-times-seven' times', cf. 6:9+.

l. About £3,000,000, $9,000,000: the amount is deliberately fantastic.

m. Less than £5, $15.

19 a. Uncomprising assertion of the indissolubility of marriage.

b. This exceptive clause (Mt only) does not mean that Jesus allows full divorce (i.e. with power to remarry) in cases of adultery. If this were so, he would be supporting the very concession he is criticising. Attempts have been made to understand 'fornication'

Continence

The disciples said to him, 'If that is how things are between husband and wife, 10 it is not advisable to marry'. •But he replied, 'It is not everyone who can accept 11
what I have said, but only those to whom it is granted. •There are eunuchs born 12 that way from their mother's womb, there are eunuchs made so by men and there are eunuchs who have made themselves that way for the sake of the kingdom of heaven. Let anyone accept this who can.'^e

Parable of the vineyard labourers^a 20 'Now the kingdom of heaven is like a landowner going out at daybreak 1 to hire workers for his vineyard. •He made an agreement with the workers 2 for one denarius a day, and sent them to his vineyard. •Going out at about the 3 third hour he saw others standing idle in the market place •and said to them, 4

"You go to my vineyard too and I will give you a fair wage". •So they went. At 5 about the sixth hour and again at about the ninth hour, he went out and did the same. •Then at about the eleventh hour he went out and found more men standing 6 round, and he said to them, "Why have you been standing here idle all day?"
"Because no one has hired us" they answered. He said to them, "You go into 7 8 my vineyard too". •In the evening, the owner of the vineyard said to his bailiff, Lv 19:13

Dt 24:14-15
 "Call the workers and pay them their wages, starting with the last arrivals and 9 ending with the first". •So those who were hired at about the eleventh hour came 10 forward and received one denarius each. •When the first came, they expected to 11 get more, but they too received one denarius each. •They took it, but grumbled 12 at the landowner. •"The men who came last" they said "have done only one hour, and you have treated them the same as us, though we have done a heavy day's 13 work in all the heat." •He answered one of them and said, "My friend, I am in the sense of an illegitimate union, concubinage, but the severance of such a union is so obvious an obligation as not to deserve mention. The explanation seems rather to be that this text of Mt creates a special category for cases of infidelity in marriage since these require their own solution—but nowhere does he suggest what the solution is. This solution, which was not required at the time when full divorce was allowed, was destined to take shape in the Church and emerge as a 'separation' of the parties that carried with it no permission to remarry, cf. 1 Co 7:11.

c. Christ invites to perpetual continence those who would consecrate themselves entirely to the kingdom of God.

d. Var. 'Good Master', cf. Mk and Lk.

e. I.e. God (explicit in Mk and Lk and Vulg. Mt). Another reading, borrowed from Mk and Lk, is 'Why do you call me good? None is good but God alone.'

f. Add. 'from my earliest days', cf. Mk and Lk.

g. The reference is to the messianic 'renewal of all things' which is to be revealed when the world ends but which, on the spiritual plane, will already have begun when Christ rises from the dead as Kyrios in the Church.

h. In the biblical sense of 'govern'. The 'twelve tribes' stand for the new Israel, the Church.

i. Add. 'wife'.

20 a. The owner of the vineyard goes on into the evening hiring workmen and yet gives all a full day's pay. He is generous to some without being unjust to the others. So God acts. Into his kingdom he brings late-comers—sinners and pagans. Those who were called first (the Jewish people who, from Abraham's time, had been privileged with the covenant) have no right to be offended.

b. Add. 'For many are called, but few are chosen', probably borrowed from 22:14.

c. The apostles expect Christ's kingdom to be manifested very shortly and in all its glory, but this is reserved for Christ's second coming, cf. Mt 4:17+; Ac 1:6+.

d. Biblical metaphor, cf. Is 51:17+, here referring to the approaching Passion.

e. James son of Zebedee was put to death by Herod Agrippa about the year 44, Ac 12:2. His brother John may not indeed have suffered martyrdom but he had no less a share in his Master's sufferings.

f. Christ's mission on earth is not to apportion men's rewards but to suffer for man's salvation, cf. Jn 3:17; 12:47.

g. By sin man incurs, as a debt to the divine justice, the punishment of death demanded by the Law, cf. 1 Co

The two blind men of Jericho

As they left Jericho a large crowd followed him. •Now there were two blind men sitting at the side of the road. When they heard that it was Jesus who was passing by, they shouted, 'Lord! Have pity on us, Son of David.' •And the crowd scolded them and told them to keep quiet, but they only shouted more loudly, 'Lord! Have pity on us, Son of David.' •Jesus stopped, called them over and said, 'What do you want me to do for you?' •They said to him, 'Lord, let us have our sight back'. •Jesus felt pity for them and touched their eyes, and immediately their sight returned and they followed him.

The Messiah enters Jerusalem

21 When they were near Jerusalem and had come in sight of Bethphage on the Mount of Olives, Jesus sent two disciples, •saying to them, 'Go to the village facing you, and you will immediately find a tethered donkey and a colt with her. Untie them and bring them to me. •If anyone says anything to you, you are to say, "The Master needs them and will send them back directly".' •This took place to fulfil the prophecy:

Is 62:11
Zc 9:9

*Say to the daughter of Zion:
Look, your king comes to you;
he is humble, he rides on a donkey and on a colt, the foal of a beast of burden.^a*

Gn 49:11

So the disciples went out and did as Jesus had told them. •They brought the donkey and the colt, then they laid their cloaks on their backs and he sat on them. •Great crowds of people spread their cloaks on the road, while others were cutting branches from the trees and spreading them in his path. •The crowds who went in front of him and those who followed were all shouting:

Ps 118:26
Ac 2:33+

*'Hosanna^b to the Son of David!
Blessings on him who comes in the name of the Lord!
Hosanna in the highest heavens!'*

And when he entered Jerusalem, the whole city was in turmoil. 'Who is this?' people asked, •and the crowds answered, 'This is the prophet Jesus from Nazareth in Galilee'.

The expulsion of the dealers from the Temple

Jesus then went into the Temple and drove out all those who were selling and buying there; he upset the tables of the money changers and the chairs of those who were selling pigeons.^c •'According to scripture' he said 'my house will be called a house of prayer'; but you are turning it into a robbers' den.' •There were also blind and lame people who came to him in the Temple, and he cured them. •At the sight of the wonderful things he did and of the children shouting, 'Hosanna to the Son of David' in the Temple, the chief priests and the scribes were indignant. •'Do you hear what they are saying?' they said to him. 'Yes,' Jesus answered 'have you never read this:

Ps 8:2 LXX

*By the mouths of children, babes in arms,
you have made sure of praise?^d*

With that he left them and went out of the city to Bethany where he spent the night.

The barren fig tree withers. Faith and prayer

As he was returning to the city in the early morning, he felt hungry. •Seeing a fig tree by the road, he went up to it and found nothing on it but leaves. And he said to it, 'May you never bear fruit again'; and at that instant the fig tree withered.^d •The disciples were amazed when they saw it. 'What happened to the

- 21 tree' they said 'that it withered there and then?' •Jesus answered, 'I tell you solemnly, if you have faith and do not doubt at all, not only will you do what I have done to the fig tree, but even if you say to this mountain, "Get up and throw 22 yourself into the sea", it will be done. •And if you have faith, everything you ask for in prayer you will receive.'

The authority of Jesus is questioned

- 23 He had gone into the Temple and was teaching, when the chief priests and the elders of the people came to him and said, 'What authority have you for acting 24 like this?' And who gave you this authority?' •And I' replied Jesus 'will ask you a question, only one; if you tell me the answer to it, I will then tell you my 25 authority for acting like this. •John's baptism: where did it come from: heaven or man?' And they argued it out this way among themselves, 'If we say from 26 heaven, he will retort, "Then why did you refuse to believe him?"; •but if we say from man, we have the people to fear, for they all hold that John was a prophet'.
27 So their reply to Jesus was, 'We do not know'. And he retorted, 'Nor will I tell you my authority for acting like this.'

15:56; 2 Co 3:7,9; Ga 3:13; Rm 8:3-4, with notes. To ransom them from this slavery of sin and death, Rm 3:24+. Christ is to pay the ransom and discharge the debt with the price of his blood, 1 Co 6:20; 7:23; Ga 3:13; 4:5, with notes. By thus dying in place of the guilty, he fulfils the prophesied function of the 'servant of Yahweh' (Is 53). The Hebr. word translated 'many', Is 53:11f, contrasts the enormous crowd of the redeemed with the one Redeemer: it does not imply that the number of redeemed is limited, Rm 5:6-21. Cf. Mt 26:28+.

b. At this point some authorities insert the following passage, derived probably from some apocryphal gospel 'But as for you, from littleness you seek to grow great and from greatness you make yourselves small. When you are invited to a banquet do not take one of the places of honour, because someone more important than you may arrive and then the steward will have to say, "Move down lower", and you would be covered with confusion. Take the lowest place, and then if someone less important than you comes in, the steward will say to you, "Move up higher", and that will be to your advantage.' Cf. Lk 14:8-10.

21 a. In thus describing the messianic king's humble mount the prophet had in mind the unpretentious, unwarlike nature of his rule. Jesus, by performing this action, deliberately took to himself both the words of the prophecy and their deeper meaning.

b. A word of Hebr. origin; its first meaning is 'Pray, save' but it became a mere shout of acclaim.

c. They provided pilgrims with the coinage and sacrificial victims necessary for oblations: a practice which, however legitimate, lends itself to abuse.

d. 'It was not the season for figs', Mk says. But Jesus wished to perform a symbolic action, cf. Jr 8:13+, in which the fig tree represents Israel punished for its fruitlessness.

e. The unusual events that Jesus has just allowed to take place in the very precincts of the Temple: the messianic ovation, expulsion of the merchants, miraculous cures.

f. Lit. 'in the way of righteousness'. Biblical expression: John practised and preached that conformity with the divine will which makes a man 'righteous'.

g. More exactly an 'allegory' because every detail of the story has its own significance: the proprietor is God; the vineyard the Chosen People, Israel, cf. Is 5:1+; the servants the prophets; the son Jesus, put to death outside the walls of Jerusalem; the murderous farmers the faithless Jews; the nation to which the vineyard will be entrusted, the pagans.

he sent his son to them. "They will respect my son" he said. •But when the tenants 38 saw the son, they said to each other, "This is the heir. Come on, let us kill him and 39 take over his inheritance." •So they seized him and threw him out of the vineyard 40 and killed him. •Now when the owner of the vineyard comes, what will he do 41 to those tenants? •They answered, 'He will bring those wretches to a wretched end 42 and lease the vineyard to other tenants who will deliver the produce to him when the season arrives'. •Jesus said to them, 'Have you never read in the scriptures:

*It was the stone rejected by the builders
that became the keystone.
This was the Lord's doing and it is wonderful to see?*

I tell you, then, that the kingdom of God will be taken from you and given to 43
a people who will produce its fruit.^h

When they heard his parables, the chief priests and the scribes realised he was 45 speaking about them, •but though they would have liked to arrest him they were 46 afraid of the crowds, who looked on him as a prophet.

Parable of the wedding feast^a

22 Jesus began to speak to them in parables once again, 'The kingdom of 1 heaven may be compared to a king who gave a feast for his son's wedding. 2
He sent his servants to call those who had been invited, but they would not come. 3
Next he sent some more servants. "Tell those who have been invited" he said 4
"that I have my banquet all prepared, my oxen and fattened cattle have been 5 slaughtered, everything is ready. Come to the wedding." •But they were not 6 interested: one went off to his farm, another to his business, •and the rest seized 7 his servants, maltreated them and killed them. •The king was furious. He 8 despatched his troops, destroyed those murderers and burnt their town. •Then 9
he said to his servants, "The wedding is ready; but as those who were invited 10 proved to be unworthy, •go to the crossroads in the town and invite everyone 11 you can find to the wedding". •So these servants went out on to the roads and 12 collected together everyone they could find, bad and good alike; and the wedding 13 hall was filled with guests. •When the king came in to look at the guests he noticed 14 one man who was not wearing a wedding garment, •and said to him, "How did 15 you get in here, my friend, without a wedding garment?" And the man was silent. 16
Then the king said to the attendants, "Bind him hand and foot and throw him 17 out into the dark, where there will be weeping and grinding of teeth". •For many 18

On tribute to Caesar

Then the Pharisees went away to work out between them how to trap him 15 in what he said. •And they sent their disciples to him, together with the 16
Herodians,^c to say, 'Master, we know that you are an honest man and teach 17
the way of God in an honest way, and that you are not afraid of anyone, because 18 a man's rank means nothing to you. •Tell us your opinion, then. Is it permissible 19 to pay taxes to Caesar or not?' •But Jesus was aware of their malice and replied, 20
'You hypocrites! Why do you set this trap for me? •Let me see the money you 21 pay the tax with.' They handed him a denarius, •and he said, 'Whose head is this? 22 Whose name?' •'Caesar's' they replied. He then said to them, 'Very well, give 23 back to Caesar what belongs to Caesar—and to God what belongs to God'.^d 24
This reply took them by surprise, and they left him alone and went away. 25

The resurrection of the dead

That day some Sadducees—who deny that there is a resurrection^e—approached 23 him and they put this question to him, •'Master, Moses said that if a man 24 dies childless, his brother is to marry the widow, his sister-in law, to raise

25 children for his brother. •Now we had a case involving seven brothers; the first 26 married and then died without children, leaving his wife to his brother; •the 27 same thing happened with the second and third and so on to the seventh, •and then 28 last of all the woman herself died. •Now at the resurrection to which of those 29 seven will she be wife, since she had been married to them all?" •Jesus answered 30 them, 'You are wrong, because you understand neither the scriptures nor the 31 power of God. •For at the resurrection men and women do not marry; no, they 32 are like the angels in heaven. •And as for the resurrection of the dead, have you

h. Add. v. 44 'He who falls on this stone will be dashed to pieces; anyone it falls on will be crushed', probably a gloss taken from Lk 20:18.

22 a. A parable with allegorical features; in this, as in the lesson it teaches, it resembles the one that precedes it. The king is God; the wedding feast is the happiness of the messianic age and the king's son the Messiah; those sent with invitations are the prophets and the apostles; the invited who ignore them or do them violence are the Jews; those called in from the street are the sinners and the pagans; the burning of the city is the destruction of Jerusalem. At v. 11 the scene changes to that of the Last Judgement. Matthew, it seems, has combined two parables: one akin to Lk 14: 16-24 and another whose concluding verses are found in vv. 11f; these verses explain that the man who accepted the invitation should have been dressed for the occasion—in other words, good works must go with faith, cf. 3:8; 5:20; 7:21f; 13:47f; 21:28f.

b. This sentence appears to refer to the first part of the parable rather than to the second. It is a question not of the elect as a whole but of the Jews, the first to be invited. The parable (of vv. 1-10) neither asserts nor denies that some (a 'few') of the Jewish people have accepted the invitation and are 'chosen', cf. 24:22+.

c. Supporters of the Herodian dynasty, Mk 3:6+, the most suitable people to report to the Roman authorities what they hoped to induce Jesus to say against Caesar.

d. In practice they acknowledge the authority and accept the benefits of Roman government of which this coin is a symbol. Hence it is permissible, indeed it is a duty, for them to pay that government the tribute of their obedience and of their property so long as this does not encroach on what they owe to the overriding authority of God.

e. This sect, 3:7+, adhered rigidly to the written tradition, especially as contained in the Pentateuch; its members were confident that the doctrine of the resurrection of the body, cf. 2 M 7:9+, was not to be found in that tradition. On this point the Pharisees were opposed to the Sadducees. Cf. Ac 4:1+; 23:8+.

f. Add. 'a lawyer', probably borrowed from Lk 10:25.

g. The appropriate answer would have been that though tracing his human origin back to David, cf. 1:1-17, there would be something divine about the Messiah to set him above David.

Introduction

||Mk 13:1-4
 ||Lk 21:5:7

23 a. In so far as they hand on the traditional doctrine that goes back to Moses, Christ in this does not speak of their own interpretations; he has shown elsewhere how these are to be assessed, cf. 15:1-20; 16:6; 19:3-9.

b. The phylactery is a small receptacle containing the most important words of the Law; the Jews attach it to arm or forehead, carrying out the injunction of Ex 13:9,16; Dt 6:8; 11:18 literally. The four tassels were sewn one at each corner of the cloak, cf. Nb 15:38+.

c. Aramaic word meaning 'my master', the usual title of the Jewish teacher. Jesus himself was thus addressed by his disciples, 26:25,49.

d. Vv. 8-12, addressed to the disciples only, probably did not belong originally to this discourse.

e. Abba in Aramaic; another title of honour.

f. The exacting casuistry of the rabbis made observance of the Law impossible.

g. Add. v. 14 'Alas for you, scribes and Pharisees, you hypocrites! You who devour the property of widows, though you make a show of lengthy prayers. The more severe will be the sentence you receive'; this is an interpolation taken from Mk 12:40; Lk 20:47 and making eight maledictions instead of the deliberate total of seven, cf. 6:9+.

h. A pagan convert to Judaism. Jewish propaganda was extremely active in the Graeco-Roman world.

i. The question of oaths; to release from those that had been hastily made the rabbis had to invoke tortuous reasoning.

j. The Mosaic Law levied tithe on agricultural produce; the rabbis piously applied the precept to the most insignificant of plants.

k. Var. 'inside you are full'. 'intemperance': var. 'iniquity', 'impurity', 'cupidity'.

l. Allusion to Christ's own death soon to take place, cf. 21:38f.

m. Terms of Jewish origin but here applied to Christian missionaries, cf. 10:41; 13:52.

n. The one referred to is probably the Zechariah of 2 Ch 24:20-22. His murder is the last one to be described in the Bible (2 Ch being the last book of the Jewish Canon) while Abel's, Gn 4:8, is the first. It is possible that 'son of Barachiah' is the result of confusion with another Zechariah, cf. Is 8:2 (LXX); Zc 1:1. Alternatively, the words may be a copyist's gloss.

o. Allusion to repeated visits to Jerusalem on which the Synoptics are silent but which are reported by Jn.

p. Om. 'desolate'. In a little while Jesus will be with them no longer, he is to be rejected by his own people; so also will God abandon Jerusalem and its Temple.

q. In Lk 13:35 Christ seems to mean that the Jews will not see him again until the entry into Jerusalem on Palm Sunday (Lk 19:28f). In Mt's context the words probably refer to a later coming than this, perhaps the triumphant coming at the end of time: the reconciled Jews will acclaim this return, cf. Rm 11:25f.

24 a. This discourse operates at two levels: that of the destruction of Jerusalem (in 70 A.D.) and that of the end of the world. In the course of his preaching, Jesus probably distinguished these two levels more clearly (in Lk 17:22-37 there is a separate discourse on Christ's return at the end of time and its elements are inserted here in vv. 26-27,28,37-39,40-41). But in the text of Mt as it stands, as also in Mk 13 and Lk 21, no sharp distinction is drawn between the two levels. Their fusion in this way is a theological expression of truth: though separated in time, these two are inseparable in the sense that the first is the inevitable forerunner and prefiguration of the second. The destruction of Jerusalem marks the end of the Old Covenant—Christ has thus manifestly returned to inaugurate his kingly rule. Such a decisive intervention in the history of salvation will not occur again until the end of time when God will judge the whole human race, now chosen in Christ, with the same judgement he pronounced (in 70 A.D.) upon the first chosen people. For this reason the destruction of Jerusalem is here described in terms of the 'day of Yahweh' foretold by the prophets, cf. Am 5:18+; 8:9+. No other intervention of God in history so involves the whole cosmos or prophesies its end as this one does, and the actual end of the world will be no more than the climax of all this. Since the end of Jerusalem is seen as a divine intervention, there are to be found in this discourse phrases and metaphors characteristic of the theophanies, Ex 13:22+, and of the 'visitations' of Yahweh, namely, war, famine, earthquake, unprecedented distress and the 'birthpangs', cosmic catastrophe, the lightning and the 'cloud' (see the references given in the notes). These conventional images are to be interpreted symbolically, as in the prophetic literature from which they are derived. They refer, like the discourse as a whole, both to the destruction of Jerusalem and to the end of the world which follows and is prefigured by it.

on another: everything will be destroyed.' •And when he was sitting on the³ Mount of Olives the disciples came and asked him privately, 'Tell us, when is this going to happen, and what will be the sign of your coming^b and of the end of the world?'

The beginning of sorrows

And Jesus answered them, 'Take care that no one deceives you; •because⁴ many will come using my name and saying, "I am the Christ",^c and they will deceive many. •You will hear of wars and rumours of wars; do not be⁵ alarmed, for this is something that must happen, but the end will not be yet. For nation will fight against nation, and kingdom against kingdom. There will⁶ be famines^d and earthquakes here and there.^e •All this is only the beginning of⁷ the birthpangs.^f

'Then they will hand you over to be tortured and put to death; and you will⁸ be hated by all the nations on account of my name. •And then many will fall⁹ away; men will betray one another and hate one another. •Many false prophets¹⁰ will arise; they will deceive many, •and with the increase of lawlessness, love in¹¹ most men will grow cold; •but the man who stands firm to the end will be saved.¹²

The great tribulation of Jerusalem

'So when you see the disastrous abomination, of which the prophet Daniel¹⁵ spoke, set up in the Holy Placeⁱ (let the reader understand), •then those in¹⁶ Judaea must escape to the mountains; •if a man is on the housetop, he must not¹⁷ come down to collect his belongings; •if a man is in the fields, he must not¹⁸ turn back to fetch his cloak. •Alas for those with child, or with babies at the¹⁹ breast, when those days come! •Pray that you will not have to escape in winter²⁰ or on a sabbath. •For then there will be *great distress such as, until now, since*²¹ the world began, there never has been, nor ever will be again.^j •And if that time²² had not been shortened, no one would have survived; but shortened that time shall be, for the sake of those who are chosen.^k

'If anyone says to you then, "Look, here is the Christ" or, "He is there",²³ do not believe it; •for false Christs and false prophets will arise and produce great²⁴ signs and portents, enough to deceive even the chosen, if that were possible. There; I have forewarned you.²⁵

||Lk 17:23-24

The coming of the Son of Man will be evident

'If, then, they say to you, "Look, he is in the desert", do not go there;²⁶ "Look, he is in some hiding place", do not believe it; •because the coming of the²⁷ Son of Man will be like lightning striking in the east and flashing far into the west.^l •Wherever the corpse is, there will the vultures gather.²⁸

The universal significance of this coming

'Immediately after the distress of those days^m the sun will be darkened, the²⁹ moon will lose its brightness, the stars will fall from the sky and the powers of heaven will be shaken.ⁿ •And then the sign of the Son of Man will appear³⁰ in heaven;^o then too all the peoples of the earth will beat their breasts; and they will see the Son of Man coming on the clouds of heaven with power and great³¹ glory.^p •And he will send his angels with a loud trumpet^q to gather his chosen³² from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other.^r

The time of this coming

'Take the fig tree as a parable: as soon as its twigs grow supple and its leaves³³ come out, you know that summer is near. •So with you when you see all these³⁴ things: know that he^s is near, at the very gates. •I tell you solemnly, before

24 b. The Greek word is parousia; it means 'presence' and in the Graeco-Roman world was used for official visits by royalty. The Christians adopted it as a technical term for the glorious coming of Christ, cf. 1 Co 15:23+. It is not inevitably linked up with Christ's final coming; it can also refer to the power he will display when he comes to establish his messianic kingdom (the Church) on the ruins of Judaism; cf. 16:27-28. In this passage Matthew clearly implies that he has combined the two themes.

c. Before the year 70 several impostors posed as messiahs.

d. Add, 'plagues', cf. Lk 21:11.

e. Cf. Is 8:21; 13:13; 19:2; Jr 21:9; 34:17; Ezk 5:12; Am 4:6-11; 8:8; 2 Ch 15:6.

f. Cf. Is 13:8; 26:17; 66:7; Jr 6:24; 13:21; Ho 13:13; Mi 4:9-10. Jewish literature uses this metaphor to describe the coming of the messianic kingdom.

g. The 'inhabited world' (oikoumené), i.e. the Graeco-Roman world. All the Jews of the empire are destined to hear the Good News before punishment comes to Israel, cf. Rm 10:18. The earliest 'witness' will be directed against the faithlessness of Judaism, cf. Mt 10:18. Before 70 A.D. the gospel had already reached the main parts of the Roman empire, cf. 1 Th 1:8; Rm 1:5,8; Col 1:6,23.

h. The fall of Jerusalem.

i. Daniel seems to refer to the statue of Zeus set up in the Jerusalem Temple by Antiochus Epiphanes (in 168 B.C.; cf. 1 M 1:54). Jesus applies the prophecy to the siege and capture of the Holy City by the pagan armies from Rome, cf. Lk 21:20.

j. Cf. Ex 10:14; 11:6; Jr 30:7; Ba 2:2; J1 2:2; Dn 12:1; 1 M 9:27; Rv 16:18.

k. Those among the Jews who are called to enter the kingdom of God: the 'remnant', cf. Is 4:3+; Rm 11:5-7.

l. The coming of the Messiah will be as unmistakable as lightning. Lightning is a characteristic phenomenon that goes with divine judgement, cf. Is 29:6; 30:30; Zc 9:14; Ps 97:4; etc.

m. Join with v. 25; vv. 26-28 are a digression.

n. Cf. Jr 4:23-26; Ezk 32:7f; Am 8:9; Mi 1:3-4; J1 2:10; 3:4; 4:15 and especially Is 13:9-10; 34:4; the text repeats the phrases of the last two references. The 'powers of heaven' are the stars and all the other celestial forces.

o. For the Fathers this 'sign' was Christ's cross, but possibly it is Christ himself proving by the triumph of his kingdom on earth that he has truly risen and is in glory.

p. In these words Daniel foretold the establishment of the messianic kingdom by a Son of Man coming on the clouds. The cloud is the usual accompaniment of both O.T. and N.T. theophanies: Ex 13:22+; 19:16+; 34:5+; Lv 16:2; 1 K 8:10-11; Ps 18:11; 97:2; 104:3; Is 19:1; Jr 4:13; Ezk 1:4; 10:3f; 2 M 2:8. For N.T. cf. Mt 17:5; Ac 1:9,11; 1 Th 4:17; Rv 1:7; 14:14.

q. Add, 'and a voice'.

r. Lit. 'from the four winds, from the ends of the heavens to their ends', a composite formula from Zc 2:10 and Dt 30:4, texts which treat of the reunion of scattered Israel, cf. Ezk 37:9 and Ne 1:9. See also Is 27:13. Here therefore as in vv. 22 and 24, the 'chosen' are those Jews that Yahweh will rescue from the ruin of their nation in order to admit them, along with the pagans, into his kingdom v. 30.

s. The Son of Man coming to establish his kingdom.

t. This statement refers to the destruction of Jerusalem and not to the end of the world. In the course of his preaching Jesus probably made the distinction between the two things clearer, cf. 24:1+ and 16:28+.

u. Om. (Vulg.) 'nor the Son', probably for theological reasons. Christ as man received from the Father the knowledge of everything that had to do with his mission but, as he explicitly asserts in this passage, he could be ignorant of certain elements in the divine plan.

v. Vulg. 'hour'.

w. After the discourse foretelling the destruction of Jerusalem and the visible coming of the messianic reign in the Church, Matthew adds three parables dealing with the ultimate fate of individuals. The first presents one of Christ's servants who, like the apostles, is given a task to perform in the Church; he is judged on the way he performs it.

about beating his fellow servants and eating and drinking with drunkards, •his master will come on a day he does not expect and at an hour he does not know. The master will cut him off^c and send him to the same fate as the hypocrites, where there will be weeping and grinding of teeth.

Lk 12:35-38 Parable of the ten bridesmaids^a

Ezk 16:1+

25 •Then the kingdom of heaven will be like this: Ten bridesmaids took their lamps and went to meet the bridegroom.^b •Five of them were foolish and five were sensible: •the foolish ones did take their lamps, but they brought no oil, whereas the sensible ones took flasks of oil as well as their lamps. •The bridegroom was late, and they all grew drowsy and fell asleep. •But at midnight there was a cry, “The bridegroom is here! Go out and meet him.” •At this, all those bridesmaids woke up and trimmed their lamps, •and the foolish ones said to the sensible ones, “Give us some of your oil: our lamps are going out”. •But they replied, “There may not be enough for us and for you; you had better go to those who sell it and buy some for yourselves”. •They had gone off to buy it when the bridegroom arrived. Those who were ready went in with him to the wedding hall and the door was closed. •The other bridesmaids arrived later. “Lord, Lord,” they said “open the door for us.” •But he replied, “I tell you solemnly, I do not know you”. •So stay awake, because you do not know either the day or the hour.

Lk 19:12-27 Parable of the talents^c

Mk 13:34

•It is like a man on his way abroad who summoned his servants and entrusted his property to them. •To one he gave five talents, to another two, to a third one; each in proportion to his ability. Then he set out. •The man who had received the five talents promptly went and traded with them and made five more. •The man who had received two made two more in the same way. •But the man who had received one went off and dug a hole in the ground and hid his master's money. •Now a long time after, the master of those servants came back and went through his accounts with them. •The man who had received the five talents came forward bringing five more. “Sir,” he said “you entrusted me with five talents; here are five more that I have made.” •His master said to him, “Well done, good and faithful servant; you have shown you can be faithful in small things, I will trust you with greater; come and join in your master's happiness”.^d •Next the man with the two talents came forward. “Sir,” he said “you entrusted me with two talents; here are two more that I have made.” •His master said to him, “Well done, good and faithful servant; you have shown you can be faithful in small things, I will trust you with greater; come and join in your master's happiness”. Last came forward the man who had the one talent. “Sir,” said he “I had heard you were a hard man, reaping where you have not sown and gathering where you have not scattered; •so I was afraid, and I went off and hid your talent in the ground. Here it is; it was yours, you have it back.” •But his master answered him, “You wicked and lazy servant! So you knew that I reap where I have not sown and gather where I have not scattered? •Well then, you should have deposited my money with the bankers, and on my return I would have recovered my capital with interest. •So now, take the talent from him and give it to the man who has the five talents. •For to everyone who has will be given more, and he will have more than enough; but from the man who has not, even what he has will be taken away. As for this good-for-nothing servant, throw him out into the dark, where there will be weeping and grinding of teeth.”

 43 to drink; •I was a stranger and you never made me welcome, naked and you

6 Jesus was at Bethany in the house of Simon the leper, when •a woman came 7 to him with an alabaster jar of the most expensive ointment, and poured it on his 8 head as he was at table. •When they saw this, the disciples were indignant; 'Why
 9 this waste?' they said. •'This could have been sold at a high price and the money 10 given to the poor.' •Jesus noticed this. 'Why are you upsetting the woman?' he said to them. 'What she has done for me is one of the good works^b indeed!'

x. A word of uncertain meaning; probably to be taken metaphorically: 'he will cut him off', a sort of 'excommunication', cf. 18:17.

not mentioned, cf. 10:15; 11:22,24; 12:41f.

25 a. The bridesmaids (lit. 'virgins') represent Christians waiting for Christ. Even if he is slow to come, they must be watchful, i.e. keep their lamps ready.

g. Christ, the Messiah-King, ushers the elect from his own kingdom to that of his Father, 13:43+.

h. Men are judged by their works of mercy (here described in O.T. terms, cf. Is 58:7; Jb 22:6f; Si 7:35f, etc.) not by their occasional exploits, cf. 7:22f. In addition to these meritorious acts we find in 10:32f the profession of faith.

b. Add, 'and the bride'.

c. Christians are servants expected by Jesus, their master, to make full use of any gifts he has given them so that his kingdom may grow on earth; they must give an account of this administration. The parable of the pounds, Lk 19:12-27, has a similar form but a rather different moral.

26 a. The woman of this episode is Mary the sister of Lazarus (as Jn mentions); the event described in Lk 7:36-50 is not the same.

d. The happiness of the heavenly banquet, Mt 8:11+. 'I will trust you with greater things' implies an active sharing with Christ in his reign.

b. The Jews divided 'good works' into 'almsgiving' and 'charitable deeds'; the latter were reckoned superior and included, among other pious acts, the burial of the dead. The woman therefore, by making provision for Christ's burial, has performed a 'work' greater than almsgiving. Jesus seems to suggest, v. 12, that some loving instinct has given her a presentiment of the real significance of her action.

e. The perspective changes: it is now a question of Christ's last coming at the end of the world.

f. Every human being of every period of history. The resurrection of the dead is presupposed though

Dt 15:11 You have the poor with you always, but you will not always have me. •When she¹¹ poured this ointment on my body, she did it to prepare me for burial. •I tell you¹²

will betray me. •The Son of Man is going to his fate, as the scriptures say he²⁴ will, but alas for that man by whom the Son of Man is betrayed! Better for that man if he had never been born!' •Judas, who was to betray him, asked in his²⁵ solemnly, this very night, before the cock crows, you will have disowned³⁵ me three times'. •Peter said to him, 'Even if I have to die with you, I will never

The arrest

- 47 He was still speaking when Judas, one of the Twelve, appeared, and with him a large number of men armed with swords and clubs, sent by the chief priests and all the disciples deserted him and ran away.

26 c. Thirty shekels—and not thirty denarii as is commonly said. It was the price the Law fixed for a slave's life, Ex 21:32.

d. The 'first day' of the week during which unleavened loaves (azymes) were eaten, cf. Ex 12:1+; 23:14+, was normally that which followed the Passover supper, i.e. the 15th of Nisan; the Synoptics however give this title to the preceding day, thus attesting a wider use of the term. Further, if we take account of Jn 18:28 and of other details connected with the Passion, it seems fairly certain that in this particular year the Passover supper was celebrated on the evening of the Friday (or 'Preparation Day', Mt 27:62; cf. Jn 19:14, 31,42). Christ's Last Supper, which the Synoptics put on the day before, i.e. on the Thursday evening, must therefore be explained in one of two ways: either a whole section of the Jewish people thus anticipated the rite, or (and this is preferable) Christ anticipated it on his own initiative. In this second hypothesis Jesus, unable to celebrate the Passover on the Friday (though, indeed, he celebrated it in his own person on the cross. Jn 19:36+; 1 Co 5:7), instituted his new rite in the course of a supper which, in consequence, became endowed with the characteristics of the old Passover. Nisan 14th (the day of the Passover supper) fell on a Friday in 30 and 33 A.D.; interpreters therefore take one or other of these years as the date of Christ's death according as they assign his baptism to 28 or to 29 and reckon a longer or shorter public ministry. Note: The Dead Sea Scrolls have recently revealed a community which, following a solar calendar, always celebrated the Passover supper on a Tuesday evening. It is possible that Jesus did the same. If so, the Synoptics have fitted into a few hours juridical processes which in fact took days.

e. The first course; it preceded the Passover supper properly so called.

f. They have come to the Passover supper itself. The rubrics for this solemn blessing of bread and wine are laid down exactly; on to this ceremony Jesus grafts the sacramental rites of the new religious order of things which he institutes.

g. Add. (Vulg.) 'new', cf. Lk 22:20; 1 Co 11:25.

h. As at Sinai, the blood of victims sealed the covenant of Yahweh with his people, Ex 24:4-8+, so on the cross the blood of Jesus, the perfect victim, is about to seal the 'new' covenant, cf. Lk 22:20, between God and man—the covenant foretold by the prophets, Jr 31:31+. Jesus takes on himself the task of universal redemption that Isaiah assigns to the 'servant of Yahweh', Is 42:6; 49:6; 53:12, cf. 41:8+. Cf. Heb 8:8; 9:15; 12:24.

i. Allusion to the eschatological banquet, cf. 8:11; 22:1f. Jesus and his disciples will never meet at table again.

j. The psalms of the Hallel, Ps 113-118, with which the Passover meal closed.

k. Lit. 'be brought down'; it will be an obstacle for their faith when they see the one they believe to be Messiah, 16:16, and whose approaching triumph they expect, 20:21f, passively yield to his enemies. For a time it will make them lose courage and even faith, cf. Lk 22:31-32.

l. The name means 'oilpress'. It lies in the Kedron valley at the foot of the Mt. of Olives.

m. The turn of phrase recalls Ps 42:5 and Jon 4:9.

n. Jesus feels the full force of the human fear of death; he feels the instinctive urge to escape, gives expression to it and then stifles it by his acceptance of the Father's will.

o. Gently ironical reproach: The hour you should have stayed awake with me has slipped by. Now the testing-time has begun and Jesus must go through it alone; the disciples may go on sleeping if they wish.

p. Lit. 'Friend, for what you are here'. To a question ('Why are you here?') one may prefer to see in this a stereotyped phrase meaning 'do what you are here for', 'to your work!' Jesus cuts short the empty show of greeting: it is time for action. Cf. Jn 13:27.

Jesus, then, was brought before the governor, and the governor put to him 11

this question, 'Are you the king of the Jews?' Jesus replied, 'It is you who say it'.^f But when he was accused by the chief priests and the elders he refused to answer at all. Pilate then said to him, 'Do you not hear how many charges they have brought against you?' But to the governor's complete amazement, he offered no reply to any of the charges.

At festival time it was the governor's practice to release a prisoner for the people, anyone they chose. Now there was^g at that time a notorious prisoner whose name was Barabbas.^h So when the crowd gathered, Pilate said to them, 'Which do you want me to release for you: Barabbas, or Jesus who is called Christ?' For Pilate knew it was out of jealousy that they had handed him over. Now as he was seated in the chair of judgement, his wife sent him a message, 'Have nothing to do with that man; I have been upset all day by a dream I had about him'.

The chief priests and the elders, however, had persuaded the crowd to demand the release of Barabbas and the execution of Jesus. So when the governor spoke and asked them, 'Which of the two do you want me to release for you?' they said, 'Barabbas'. But in that case, Pilate said to them 'what am I to do with Jesus who is called Christ?' They all said, 'Let him be crucified!' 'Why?' he asked 'What harm has he done?' But they shouted all the louder, 'Let him be crucified!' Then Pilate saw that he was making no impression, that in fact a riot was imminent. So he took some water, washed his handsⁱ in front of the crowd and said, 'I am innocent of this man's blood.^j It is your concern.' And the people, to a man, shouted back, 'His blood be on us and on our children!'^k Then he released Barabbas for them. He ordered Jesus to be first scourged^l and then handed over to be crucified.

r. The accounts of Luke and of John enable us to distinguish: a preliminary trial before Annas, at night time, and a solemn session of the Sanhedrin on the following morning, Mt 27:1. Matthew and Mark describe the night episode in terms of the morning one which was the only formal and decisive meeting. But for an alternative chronology, cf. 26:17+.

s. What Jesus had in fact foretold was the destruction of the Temple and of the Jewish cult of which it was the symbol, Mk 1:34+. A new temple was to be substituted for the old one, and this was to be, in the first place, his own body risen after three days, 16:21; 17:23; 20:19; Jn 2:19-22, but beyond that, it was to be the Church, 16:18.

t. Vulg. presents this as one question 'Do you make no answer to the evidence these men are bringing against you?'

u. 'The Power' is equivalent to 'Yahweh'. At this critical moment Jesus abandons his policy of the 'messianic secret', cf. Mk 1:34+, and unequivocally acknowledges—as he had already acknowledged to his intimates, Mt 16:16—that he is the Messiah. But he goes further and reveals himself not as the human Messiah of traditional expectation but as the Lord of Ps 110, cf. Mt 22:41f, and the mysterious personage of heavenly origin whom Daniel had seen in vision, cf. Mt 8:20+. Henceforth the Jews will not see him except in his glory which will be manifested first in the victory of the resurrection and subsequently in the victory of the Church. Cf. 23:39 and 24:30.

v. The 'blasphemy' lay not in Jesus' claim to be Messiah but in his claim to divine rank.

w. Nazoraios; var. (cf. Vulg.) Nazarenos.

x. The Galilean accent.

27 a. Var. 'Pontius Pilate'. Cf. Lk 3:1+. In Judaea, as in all the provinces of the Empire, Rome reserved to itself power of life and death; the Jews had to approach this magistrate for confirmation and execution of the sentence they had pronounced.

b. Var. 'righteous blood', cf. 23:35.

c. In Aramaic Hakeldama (cf. Ac 1:19 and Vulg. in this place). A 4th century tradition, probably reliable, locates it in the Valley of Gehinnom.

d. Om. 'Jeremiah'. Actually this is a free quotation from Zc 11:12-13 combined with the idea of the purchase of a field, an idea suggested by Jr 32:6-15. This, plus the fact that Jeremiah speaks of potters (18:2f) who lived in the Hakeldama district (19:1f), explains how the whole text could by approximation be attributed to Jeremiah.

e. Yahweh complained that, in the person of his prophet Zechariah, he had received from the Israelites a wage that was nothing but an insult. The sale of Jesus for the same paltry sum appeals to Matthew as a fulfilment of this oracle of the prophet.

f. By these words Jesus acknowledges as correct, at least in a sense, what he would never have said on his own initiative. See above 26:25,64; and cf. Jn 18:33-37+.

g. Vulg. 'he had'.

h. Here and in v. 17, var. 'Jesus Barabbas', which would give peculiar point to Pilate's question but appears to have its origin in an apocryphal tradition.

i. The significance of this gesture must have been well understood by the Jews, cf. Dt 21:6f; Ps 26:6; 73:13.

j. Var. 'of the blood of this just man'.

k. Traditional O.T. phrase, 2 S 1:16; 3:29, cf. Ac 18:6, by which they accept responsibility for the death they demand.

p. A narcotic which sympathetic Jewish women (cf. Lk 23:27f) used to offer the condemned to diminish their sufferings. The wine was mixed with 'myrrh' (cf. Mk 15:23) rather than with 'gall'. The 'gall' in Mt (like the correction of 'wine' to 'vinegar' in the Antiochene recension) is due to a reminiscence of Ps 69:21. Jesus refuses the palliative.

q. Add. 'that the saying of the prophet might be fulfilled: they divided my garments between them and for my robe they cast lots' (Ps 22:18), a gloss taken from Jn 19:24.

r. From noon to three in the afternoon.

t. Malicious play on words based on the expectation of Elijah as the Messiah's precursor, cf. 17:10-13 +.

u. Sour drink of the Roman soldier. Probably the gesture was sympathetic, cf. Jn 19:28f; the Synoptics regard it as malevolent (Lk 23:36) and describe it in terms that recall Ps 69:21.

v. Either the curtain which hung in front of the Holy Place or, more probably, the one which divided the Holy Place from the Holy of Holies, cf. Ex 26:31f. Following Heb 9:12; 10:20, Christian tradition saw in this tearing of the veil the abrogation of the old Mosaic cult and the way opened up by Christ into the messianic sanctuary.

Setting Mark aside (his abrupt conclusion presents a special problem, cf. Mk 16:8 +, and his 'longer ending' recapitulates the data of the other gospels) all the gospels make a clear distinction, both literary and doctrinal, between: 1. Appearances to individuals that help to prove the fact of the resurrection; to Mary Magdalen, either alone (Jn 20:14-17; cf. Mk 16:9), or accompanied (Mt 28:9-10); to the disciples on the road to Emmaus (Lk 24:13-32; cf. Mk 16:12), to Simon (Lk 24:34), to Thomas (Jn 20:26-29). 2. A collective

Precautions taken by the leaders of the people

While they were on their way, some of the guard went off into the city to tell 11 the chief priests all that had happened. •These held a meeting with the elders 12 and, after some discussion, handed a considerable sum of money to the soldiers with these instructions, 'This is what you must say, "His disciples came during 13 the night and stole him away while we were asleep"'. •And should the governor 14 come to hear of this, we undertake to put things right with him ourselves and to see that you do not get into trouble.' •The soldiers took the money and carried 15 out their instructions, and to this day that is the story among the Jews.

Appearance in Galilee. The mission to the world

Meanwhile the eleven disciples set out for Galilee, to the mountain where 16 Jesus had arranged to meet them. •When they saw him they fell down before 17 him, though some hesitated.^f •Jesus came up and spoke to them. He said, 'All 18 authority in heaven and on earth has been given to me. •Go, therefore, make 19 disciples of all the nations; baptise them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit,^g •and teach them to observe all the commands I 20 gave you. And know that I am with you always; yes, to the end of time.'

appearance that is coupled with an apostolic mission (Mt 28:16-20; Lk 24:36-49; Jn 20:19-23; cf. Mk 16: 14-18). As well as this distinction there are two traditions as to where the appearances took place: 1. all in Galilee (Mk 16:7; Mt 28:10,16-20); 2. all in Judaea (Lk and Jn 20). By way of appendix, Jn 21 adds an appearance in Galilee which though it bears the character of an appearance to individuals (It is for Peter and John predominantly) is nevertheless coupled with an apostolic mission (given to Peter). The primitive apostolic preaching that Paul reproduces in 1 Co 15:3-7 lists 5 appearances (apart from the appearance to Paul himself) which are not easily harmonised with the gospel accounts; in particular he mentions an appearance to James of which the Gospel to the Hebrews also speaks. All this gives the impression that different groups, which cannot now be easily identified, have given rise to different strands of tradition. But these very divergencies of tradition are far better witnesses than any artificial or contrived uniformity to the antiquity of the evidence and the historical quality of all these manifestations of the risen Christ.

28 f. An alternative translation with less grammatical support: 'those who had hesitated'. On the doubts Mt mentions here cf. Mk 16:11,14; Lk 24:11,41; Jn 20: 24-29.

g. It may be that this formula, so far as the fullness of its expression is concerned, is a reflection of the liturgical usage established later in the primitive community. It will be remembered that Ac speaks of baptising 'in the name of Jesus', cf. Ac 1:5+. But whatever the variation in formula, the underlying reality remains the same.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO SAINT MARK

I. PRELUDE TO THE PUBLIC MINISTRY OF JESUS

The preaching of John the Baptist

- ¹ ² 1 The beginning of the Good News^a about Jesus Christ, the Son of God.^b •It is written in the book of the prophet Isaiah:
- ||Mt 3:1-12
||Lk 3:3-17
10:29
Lk 1:19
- MI 3:1
- Is 40:3
Jn 1:23
- Look, I am going to send my messenger before you;
he will prepare your way.
A voice cries in the wilderness:
Prepare a way for the Lord,
make his paths straight,*
- ⁴ and so it was that John the Baptist appeared in the wilderness, proclaiming^c
⁵ a baptism of repentance for the forgiveness of sins. •All Judaea and all the people of Jerusalem made their way to him, and as they were baptised by him in the river
⁶ Jordan they confessed their sins. •John wore a garment of camel-skin,^d and ⁷ he lived on locusts and wild honey. •In the course of his preaching he said, 'Someone is following me, someone who is more powerful than I am, and I am
⁸ not fit to kneel down and undo the strap of his sandals. •I have baptised you with water, but he will baptise you with the Holy Spirit.'
- Mt 3:6+
- Jn 1:27
- Jn 1:26,33
Ac 1:5; 11:16

Jesus is baptised

- ⁹ It was at this time that Jesus came from Nazareth in Galilee and was baptised
¹⁰ in the Jordan by John. •No sooner had he come up out of the water than he saw the heavens torn apart and the Spirit, like a dove, descending on him. Jn 1:32-34
¹¹ And a voice came from heaven, 'You are my Son, the Beloved; my favour rests on you'.
- Mt 3:13-17
||Lk 3:21-22

Temptation in the wilderness

- ¹² ¹³ Immediately afterwards the Spirit drove him out into the wilderness •and he remained there for forty days, and was tempted by Satan. He was with the wild beasts, and the angels looked after him. Jb 1:6+
- ||Mt 4:1-11
||Lk 4:1-13

II. THE GALILEAN MINISTRY

Jesus begins to preach

- ¹⁴ After John had been arrested, Jesus went into Galilee. There he proclaimed ¹⁵ the Good News from God. •'The time has come' he said 'and the kingdom of God is close at hand. Repent, and believe the Good News.'

||Lk 5:1-11

The first four disciples are called

As he was walking along by the Sea of Galilee he saw Simon and his brother 16
Andrew casting a net in the lake — for they were fishermen. •And Jesus said to 17 them, 'Follow me and I will make you into fishers of men'. •And at once they 18 left their nets and followed him.

Going on a little further, he saw James son of Zebedee and his brother John; 19 they too were in their boat, mending their nets. He called them at once •and, 20 leaving their father Zebedee in the boat with the men he employed, they went after him.

||Lk 4:31-37 Jesus teaches in Capernaum and cures a demoniac

They went as far as Capernaum, and as soon as the sabbath came he went 21
||Mt 7:28f to the synagogue and began to teach. •And his teaching made a deep impression 22 on them because, unlike the scribes, he taught them with authority.

In their synagogue just then there was a man possessed by an unclean spirit, 23
Mt 8:29+ and it shouted, •'What do you want with us,' Jesus of Nazareth? Have you come? 24
Mt 2:23+ to destroy us? I know who you are: the Holy One of God.' •But Jesus said 25
Ac 3:14+ sharply, 'Be quiet! Come out of him!' •And the unclean spirit threw the man into 26
Mk 1:34+ convulsions and with a loud cry went out of him. •The people were so astonished 27 4:41 that they started asking each other what it all meant. 'Here is a teaching that is new' they said 'and with authority behind it: he gives orders even to unclean spirits* and they obey him.' •And his reputation rapidly spread everywhere, 28 through all the surrounding Galilean countryside.

||Mt 8:14-15
||Lk 4:38-39
7:24; 13:3

Cure of Simon's mother-in-law

On leaving the synagogue, he went with James and John straight to the house 29 of Simon and Andrew. •Now Simon's mother-in-law had gone to bed with fever, 30 and they told him about her straightaway. •He went to her, took her by the hand 31 and helped her up. And the fever left her and she began to wait on them.

||Mt 8:16
||Lk 4:40-41

A number of cures

That evening, after sunset, they brought to him all who were sick and those 32 who were possessed by devils. •The whole town came crowding round the door, 33
3:12; 9:30 and he cured many who were suffering from diseases of one kind or another; 34
Mt 8:4; 9:30; 12:16; 17:9; he also cast out many devils, but he would not allow them to speak, because they

||Lk 4:42-44

Jesus quietly leaves Capernaum and travels through Galilee

In the morning, long before dawn, he got up and left the house, and went 35
Mt 14:23p; off to a lonely place and prayed there. •Simon and his companions set out in 36
Lk 3:21+ search of him, •and when they found him they said, 'Everybody is looking for you'. •He answered, 'Let us go elsewhere, to the neighbouring country towns, 38
Lk 4:44 so that I can preach there too, because that is why I came'.[‡] •And he went all 39
Jn 18:37 through Galilee, preaching in their synagogues and casting out devils.
||Mt 4:23
Lk 4:14-15;
8:1

||Mt 8:2-4
||Lk 5:12-16

Cure of a leper

A leper came to him and pleaded on his knees: 'If you want to' he said 'you 40
5:30+ can cure me'. •Feeling sorry for him, Jesus stretched out his hand and touched 41
him. 'Of course I want to!' he said. 'Be cured!' •And the leprosy left him at once 42 and he was cured. •Jesus immediately sent him away and sternly ordered him, 43
1:34+ 'Mind you say nothing to anyone, but go and show yourself to the priest, and 44
Lk 17:14 make the offering for your healing prescribed by Moses as evidence of your Lv 14:1-32 recovery'. •The man went away, but then started talking about it freely and 45 telling the story everywhere, so that Jesus could no longer go openly into any town, but had to stay outside in places where nobody lived. Even so, people from all around would come to him.

Cure of a paralytic

||Mt 9:1-8
||Lk 5:17-26

- 1 2 When he returned to Capernaum some time later, word went round that he
2 was back; and so many people collected that there was no room left, even 3:20; 6:31
3 in front of the door. He was preaching the word to them when some people
4 came bringing him a paralytic carried by four men, but as the crowd made it impossible to get the man to him, they stripped the roof over the place where Jesus was; and when they had made an opening, they lowered the stretcher on 5 which the paralytic lay. Seeing their faith, Jesus said to the paralytic, 'My child, Mt 8:10+
6 your sins are forgiven'. Now some scribes were sitting there, and they thought
7 to themselves, 'How can this man talk like that? He is blaspheming. Who can 8 forgive sins but God?' Jesus, inwardly aware that this was what they were thinking, said to them, 'Why do you have these thoughts in your hearts?
9 Which of these is easier: to say to the paralytic, "Your sins are forgiven" or to 10 say, "Get up, pick up your stretcher and walk"?' But to prove to you that the 11 Son of Man has authority on earth to forgive sins,—he said to the paralytic—12 'I order you: get up, pick up your stretcher, and go off home.' And the man got up, picked up his stretcher at once and walked out in front of everyone, so that they were all astounded and praised God saying, 'We have never seen Mt 9:33 anything like this'.

The call of Levi

||Mt 9:9
||Lk 5:27-28
4:1

- 13 He went out again to the shore of the lake;^a and all the people came to him, 14 and he taught them. As he was walking on he saw Levi the son of Alphaeus, sitting by the customs house, and he said to him, 'Follow me'. And he got up and followed him.

Eating with sinners

||Mt 9:10-13
||Lk 5:29-32
7:24

- 15 When Jesus was at dinner in his house, a number of tax collectors and sinners were also sitting at the table with Jesus and his disciples; for there were many of 16 them among his followers. When the scribes of the Pharisee party saw him eating with sinners and tax collectors, they said to his disciples, 'Why does he eat with 17 tax collectors and sinners?' When Jesus heard this he said to them, 'It is not the healthy who need the doctor, but the sick. I did not come to call the virtuous, but sinners.'

A discussion on fasting

||Mt 9:14-17
||Lk 5:33-39

- 18 One day when John's disciples and the Pharisees were fasting, some people came and said to him, 'Why is it that John's disciples and the disciples of the 19 Pharisees fast, but your disciples do not?' Jesus replied, 'Surely the bridegroom's attendants would never think of fasting while the bridegroom is still with them?
As long as they have the bridegroom with them, they could not think of fasting.
20 But the time will come for the bridegroom to be taken away from them, and then,
21 on that day, they will fast. No one sews a piece of unshrunk cloth on an old cloak; if he does, the patch pulls away from it, the new from the old, and the tear

e. Lit. 'What is there to us and to you?' cf. Jn 2:4+.
f. Var. 'You have come'.

g. God is the 'Holy One' par excellence, and all that belongs to him is holy, Lv 17:1+; this is pre-eminently true of Jesus who is God's Son and his chosen Messiah, 1:10f, the appointed head of 'the nation of saints', Dn 7:18+, i.e. of the company of the elect, the Christian community, Ac 9:13+. Cf. Lk 1:35; 4:34; Jn 6:69; Ac 3:14+; 4:27, 30; Rv 3:7.

h. Or punctuate 'Here is a teaching that is new; with authority he gives orders even to unclean spirits'.

i. Jesus forbids the news that he is the Messiah to be spread by the devils, 1:25, 34; 3:12, by those he cured, 1:44; 5:43; 7:36; 8:26, even by the apostles, 8:30; 9:9. The silence is not to be broken till after his death, Mt 10:27+. Since the prevailing idea of the Messiah was nationalistic and warlike, in sharp contrast with his own ideal, Jesus had to be very careful, at least on Israelite soil, cf. 5:19, to avoid giving a false and dangerous impression of his mission, cf. Jn 6:15; Mt 13:13+. This policy of silence ('the messianic secret') is not an invention of Mk's, as some have claimed, but is in fact Christ's own, though Mk has given it special emphasis. With the exception of Mt 9:30, Mt and Lk record the injunction to silence only in passages which are parallel with Mk, frequently omitting it even in these cases.

j. Lit. 'came out' i.e. from Capernaum, v. 35. This is the primary sense, but it is possible that another lies behind it, namely, the 'coming forth' of Jesus from God, Jn 8:42; 13:3; 16:27f, 30. Cf. Lk 4:43.

gets worse. •And nobody puts new wine into old wineskins; if he does, the wine will burst the skins, and the wine is lost and the skins too. No! New wine, fresh skins!

Picking corn on the sabbath

One sabbath day he happened to be taking a walk through the cornfields, and his disciples began to pick ears of corn as they went along. •And the Pharisees said to him, 'Look, why are they doing something on the sabbath day that is forbidden?' •And he replied, 'Did you never read what David did in his time of need when he and his followers were hungry—how he went into the house of God when Abiathar^b was high priest, and ate the loaves of offering which only the priests are allowed to eat, and how he also gave some to the men with him?' And he said to them, 'The sabbath was made for man, not man for the sabbath; •so the Son of Man is master even of the sabbath'.

Cure of the man with a withered hand

3 He went again into a synagogue, and there was a man there who had a withered hand. •And they were watching him to see if he would cure him on the sabbath day, hoping for something to use against him. •He said to the man with the withered hand, 'Stand up out in the middle!' •Then he said to them, 'Is it against the law on the sabbath day to do good, or to do evil; to save life, or to kill?' But they said nothing. •Then, grieved to find them so obstinate, he looked angrily round at them, and said to the man, 'Stretch out your hand'. He stretched it out and his hand was better. •The Pharisees went out and at once began to plot with the Herodians^a against him, discussing how to destroy him.

The crowds follow Jesus

Jesus withdrew with his disciples to the lakeside, and great crowds from Galilee followed him. From Judaea,^b Jerusalem, Idumaea, Transjordan and the region of Tyre and Sidon, great numbers who had heard of all he was doing came to him. •And he asked his disciples to have a boat ready for him because of the crowd, to keep him from being crushed. •For he had cured so many that all who were afflicted in any way were crowding forward to touch him. •And the unclean spirits, whenever they saw him, would fall down before him and shout, 'You are the Son of God!' •But he warned them strongly not to make him known.

The appointment of the Twelve

He now went up into the hills and summoned those he wanted. So they came to him •and he appointed twelve; they were to be his companions and to be sent out to preach, •with power to cast out devils. •And so he appointed the Twelve: Simon to whom he gave the name Peter, •James the son of Zebedee and John the brother of James, to whom he gave the name Boanerges or 'Sons of Thunder'; then Andrew, Philip, Bartholomew, Matthew, Thomas, James the son of Alphaeus, Thaddaeus, Simon the Zealot •and Judas Iscariot, the man who was to betray him.^c

His relatives are concerned about Jesus

He went home again, and once more such a crowd collected that they could not even have a meal. •When his relatives heard of this, they set out to take charge of him, convinced^d he was out of his mind.

Allegations of the scribes

The scribes who had come down from Jerusalem were saying, 'Beelzebul is in him' and, 'It is through the prince of devils that he casts devils out'. •So he called them to him and spoke to them in parables, 'How can Satan cast out Satan? If a kingdom is divided against itself, that kingdom cannot last. •And if

- 26 a household is divided against itself, that household can never stand. •Now if 27 Satan has rebelled against himself and is divided, he cannot stand either—it is the end of him. •But no one can make his way into a strong man's house and 28 burgle his property unless he has tied up the strong man first. Only then can he burgle his house.
 28 'I tell you solemnly, all men's sins will be forgiven, and all their 29 blasphemies; •but let anyone blaspheme against the Holy Spirit and he will never 30 have forgiveness: he is guilty of an eternal sin.' •This was because they were saying, 'An unclean spirit is in him'.

Lk 12:10

The true kinsmen of Jesus

 ||Mt 12:46-50
 ||Lk 8:19-21

- 31 His mother and brothers now arrived and, standing outside, sent in a message
 32 asking for him. •A crowd was sitting round him at the time the message was passed to him, 'Your mother and brothers and sisters are outside asking for you'.
 33 He replied, 'Who are my mother and my brothers?' •And looking round at 34 those sitting in a circle about him, he said, 'Here are my mother and my brothers.
 35 Anyone who does the will of God, that person is my brother and sister and mother.'

Parable of the sower

 ||Mt 13:1-9
 ||Lk 8:4-8

- 1 4 Again he began to teach by the lakeside, but such a huge crowd gathered round him that he got into a boat on the lake and sat there. The people were 2 all along the shore, at the water's edge. •He taught them many things in parables,
 3 and in the course of his teaching he said to them, •'Listen! Imagine a sower
 4 going out to sow. •Now it happened that, as he sowed, some of the seed fell on 5 the edge of the path, and the birds came and ate it up. •Some seed fell on rocky ground where it found little soil and sprang up straightaway, because there was 6 no depth of earth; •and when the sun came up it was scorched and, not having 7 any roots, it withered away. •Some seed fell into thorns, and the thorns
 8 grew up and choked it, and it produced no crop. •And some seeds fell into rich soil and, growing tall and strong, produced crop;• and yielded thirty, sixty, 9 even a hundredfold.' •And he said, 'Listen, anyone who has ears to hear!'

Why Jesus speaks in parables

 ||Mt 13:10-15
 ||Lk 8:9-10

- 10 When he was alone, the Twelve, together with the others who formed his 11 company, asked what the parables meant. •He told them, 'The secret of the kingdom of God is given to you, but to those who are outside everything comes 12 in parables, •so that^b they may see and see again, but not perceive; may hear and hear again, but not understand; otherwise they might be converted and be forgiven'.

Jn 12:16

b. The high priest of 1 S 21:1-7 was in fact Ahimelech. Either his son Abiathar is named here because, as high priest in David's reign, 2 S 20:25, he was the better known, or else Mk is following a different tradition according to which Abiathar was Ahimelech's father (2 S 8:17 Hebr.).

3 a. The term signifies not officials of the court of Herod Antipas, tetrarch of Galilee, cf. Lk 3:1+, but politically minded Jews actively supporting his dynasty and enjoying his favour.

b. Punctuation uncertain. 'From Judaea ... Sidon' may be read with what precedes or with what follows.

c. Here Mk omits the discourse of Mt 5-7 and Lk 6:20-49, evidently assuming that his readers would be interested more in what Christ was and did than in the minutiae of his teaching with regard to the Jewish Law.

d. Lit. 'because they said'. Others translate 'because it was told (them)'.

4 a. Var. (Vulg.) 'produced its crop which grew tall and strong'.

b. The conjunction (Mt avoids it) is equivalent to 'in order that the scripture might be fulfilled that says...'

c. The apostles' incomprehension of Christ's works and words is a favourite theme of Mk: 6:52; 7:18; 8:17-18,21,33; 9:10,32; 10:38. With the exception of certain parallel places (Mt 15:16; 16:9,23; 20:22; Lk 9:45) and of Lk 18:34; 24:25,45, Mt and Lk often pass such remarks over in silence, or even emend them: compare Mt 14:33 with Mk 6:51-52, and see Mt 13:51. Cf. Jn 14:26+.

heard it than Satan comes and carries away the word that was sown in them. Similarly, those who receive the seed on patches of rock are people who, when first they hear the word, welcome it at once with joy. •But they have no root in them, they do not last; should some trial come, or some persecution on account of the word, they fall away at once. •Then there are others who receive the seed in thorns. These have heard the word, •but the worries of this world, the lure of riches and all the other passions come in to choke the word, and so it produces nothing. •And there are those who have received the seed in rich soil: they hear the word and accept it and yield a harvest, thirty and sixty and a hundredfold.'

||Lk 8:16-17 Parable of the lamp

||Mt 5:15 He also said to them, 'Would you bring in a lamp to put it under a tub or under the bed? Surely you will put it on the lamp-stand? •For there is nothing hidden but it must be disclosed, nothing kept secret except to be brought to light. If anyone has ears to hear, let him listen to this.'

||Lk 6:38 Parable of the measure

||Mt 7:2 He also said to them, 'Take notice of what you are hearing. The amount you measure out is the amount you will be given—and more besides; •for the man who has will be given more; from the man who has not, even what he has will be taken away.'

Parable of the seed growing by itself

Jm 5:7 He also said, 'This is what the kingdom of God is like. A man throws seed on the land. •Night and day, while he sleeps, when he is awake, the seed is sprouting and growing; how, he does not know. •Of its own accord the land produces first the shoot, then the ear, then the full grain in the ear. •And when the crop is ready, he loses no time: he starts to reap because the harvest has come.'

||Mt 13:31-32 ||Lk 13:18-19 Parable of the mustard seed

He also said, 'What can we say the kingdom of God is like? What parable can we find for it? •It is like a mustard seed which at the time of its sowing in the soil is the smallest of all the seeds on earth; •yet once it is sown it grows into the biggest shrub of them all and puts out big branches so that the birds of the air can shelter in its shade.'

||Mt 13:34-35 The use of parables

Using many parables like these, he spoke the word to them, so far as they were capable of understanding it. •He would not speak to them except in parables, but he explained everything to his disciples when they were alone.

||Mt 8:18, 23-27 ||Lk 8:22-25 The calming of the storm

With the coming of evening that same day, he said to them, 'Let us cross over to the other side'. •And leaving the crowd behind they took him, just as he was, in the boat; and there were other boats with him. •Then it began to blow a gale and the waves were breaking into the boat so that it was almost swamped. •But he was in the stern, his head on the cushion, asleep. •They woke him and said to him, 'Master, do you not care? We are going down!' And he woke up and rebuked the wind and said to the sea, 'Quiet now! Be calm!' And the wind dropped, and all was calm again. •Then he said to them, 'Why are you so frightened? How is it that you have no faith?' •They were filled with awe and said to one another, 'Who can this be? Even the wind and the sea obey him.'

||Mt 8:28-34 ||Lk 8:26-39 The Gerasene demoniac

5 They reached the country of the Gerasenes^a on the other side of the lake, •and no sooner had he left the boat than a man with an unclean spirit came out

3 from the tombs towards him. •The man lived in the tombs and no one could 4 secure him any more, even with a chain; •because he had often been secured
 5 with fetters and chains but had snapped the chains and broken the fetters, and no
 6 one had the strength to control him. •All night and all day, among the tombs
 7 and in the mountains, he would howl and gash himself with stones. •Catching 8 sight of Jesus from a distance, he ran up and fell at his feet •and shouted at the 9 top of his voice, 'What do you want with me, Jesus, son of the Most High God?
 10 Swear by God you will not torture me!'—For Jesus had been saying to him, 11 'Come out of the man, unclean spirit'. •'What is your name?' Jesus asked. 'My 12 name is legion,' he answered 'for there are many of us.' •And he begged him 13 earnestly not to send them out of the district. •Now there was there on the 14 mountainside a great herd of pigs feeding, •and the unclean spirits begged 15 him, 'Send us to the pigs, let us go into them'. •So he gave them leave. With that,
 16 the unclean spirits came out and went into the pigs, and the herd of about two 17 thousand pigs charged down the cliff into the lake, and there they were drowned.
 18 The swineherds ran off and told their story in the town and in the country round 19 about; and the people came to see what had really happened. •They came to 20 Jesus and saw the demoniac sitting there, clothed and in his full senses—the very 21 man who had had the legion in him before—and they were afraid. •And those 22 who had witnessed it reported what had happened to the demoniac and what had 23 become of the pigs. •Then they began to implore Jesus to leave the neighbourhood.
 24 As he was getting into the boat, the man who had been possessed begged to be 25 allowed to stay with him. •Jesus would not let him but said to him, 'Go home
 26 to your people and tell them all that the Lord in his mercy has done for you'.
 27 So the man went off and proceeded to spread throughout the Decapolis all that 28 Jesus had done for him. And everyone was amazed.

Cure of the woman with a haemorrhage. The daughter of Jairus raised to life

Mt 9:18-26
Lk 8:40-56

21 When Jesus had crossed again in the boat to the other side, a large crowd
 22 gathered round him and he stayed by the lakeside. •Then one of the synagogue
 23 officials came up, Jairus by name, and seeing him, fell at his feet •and pleaded 24 with him earnestly, saying, 'My little daughter is desperately sick. Do come and 25 lay your hands on her to make her better and save her life.' •Jesus went with him 26 and a large crowd followed him; they were pressing all round him.

2:13

27 Now there was a woman who had suffered from a haemorrhage for 28 twelve years; •after long and painful treatment under various doctors, she had 29 spent all she had without being any the better for it, in fact, she was getting 30 worse. •She had heard about Jesus, and she came up behind him through the crowd
 31 and touched his cloak. •'If I can touch even his clothes,' she had told herself 32 'I shall be well again.' •And the source of the bleeding dried up instantly, and she 33 felt in herself that she was cured of her complaint. •Immediately aware that 34 power had gone out from him,^b Jesus turned round in the crowd and said, 'Who 35 touched my clothes?' •His disciples said to him, 'You see how the crowd is 36 pressing round you and yet you say, "Who touched me?"' •But he continued
 37 to look all round to see who had done it. •Then the woman came forward, 38 frightened and trembling^c because she knew what had happened to her, and she 39 fell at his feet and told him the whole truth. •'My daughter,' he said 'your faith
 40 has restored you to health; go in peace and be free from your complaint.'

 Mt 8:10+ the official, 'Do not be afraid; only have faith'. •And he allowed no one to go 37 with him except Peter and James and John the brother of James.^d •So they came 38 to the official's house and Jesus noticed all the commotion, with people weeping and wailing unrestrainedly. •He went in and said to them, 'Why all this 39
 Ac 20:10 commotion and crying? The child is not dead, but asleep.' •But they laughed 40 Ac 9:40 at him. So he turned them all out and, taking with him the child's father and mother and his own companions, he went into the place where the child lay.
 And taking the child by the hand he said to her, 'Talitha, kum!'^e which means, 41
 'Little girl, I tell you to get up'. •The little girl got up at once and began to walk 42 about, for she was twelve years old. At this they were overcome with astonishment, to give her something to eat.

A visit to Nazareth

6 Going from that district, he went to his home town and his disciples accompa- 1 nied him. •With the coming of the sabbath he began teaching in the synagogue 2 and most of them were astonished when they heard him. They said, 'Where did 3 the man get all this? What is this wisdom that has been granted him, and these 3 15:40 miracles that are worked through him? •This is the carpenter, surely, the son 3
 Mt 12:46+ of Mary, the brother of James and Joset^a and Jude and Simon? His sisters, too, are 4
 Jn 6:42 they not here with us?' And they would not accept him. •And Jesus said to them, 4
 'A prophet is only despised in his own country, among his own relations and 5
 in his own house'; •and he could work no miracle there, though he cured a few 5 7:32 sick people by laying his hands on them. •He was amazed at their lack of faith. 6

The mission of the Twelve

He made a tour round the villages, teaching. •Then he summoned the Twelve 7 and began to send them out in pairs, giving them authority over the unclean spirits. 7
 And he instructed them to take nothing for the journey except a staff^b—no bread, 8 no haversack, no coppers for their purses. •They were to wear sandals but, he 9 added, 'Do not take a spare tunic'. •And he said to them, 'If you enter a house 10 anywhere, stay there until you leave the district. •And if any place does not 11 welcome you and people refuse to listen to you, as you walk away shake off 12
 the dust from under your feet as a sign to them.' •So they set off to preach 12
 Jm 5:14f repentance; •and they cast out many devils, and anointed many sick people with 13 oil and cured them.

Herod and Jesus

Meanwhile King Herod had heard about him, since by now his name was well- 14 known. Some were saying,^c 'John the Baptist has risen from the dead, and that 15 is why miraculous powers are at work in him'. •Others said, 'He is Elijah'; 15
 Mt 16:14+ others again, 'He is a prophet, like the prophets we used to have'. •But when 16 Herod heard this he said, 'It is John whose head I cut off; he has risen from the dead'.

John the Baptist beheaded

Now it was this same Herod who had sent to have John arrested, and had 17 him chained up in prison because of Herodias, his brother Philip's wife whom he 18 had married. •For John had told Herod, 'It is against the law for you to have 19 your brother's wife'. •As for Herodias, she was furious with him and wanted to 19
 Ac 24:25 kill him; but she was not able to, •because Herod was afraid of John, knowing 20 him to be a good and holy man, and gave him his protection. When he had heard him speak he was greatly perplexed,^d and yet he liked to listen to him.

An opportunity came on Herod's birthday when he gave a banquet for the 21 nobles of his court, for his army officers and for the leading figures in Galilee.

She replied, 'The head of John the Baptist'. •The girl hurried straight back to the king and made her request, 'I want you to give me John the Baptist's head, here and now, on a dish'. •The king was deeply distressed but, thinking of the oaths he had sworn and of his guests, he was reluctant to break his word to her. •So the king at once sent one of the bodyguard with orders to bring John's head. •The man went off and beheaded him in prison; then he brought the head on a dish and gave it to the girl, and the girl gave it to her mother. 29 When John's disciples heard about this, they came and took his body and laid it in a tomb.

First miracle of the loaves

30 The apostles rejoined Jesus and told him all they had done and taught. 31 Then he said to them, 'You must come away to some lonely place all by yourselves and rest for a while'; for there were so many coming and going that the apostles had no time even to eat. •So they went off in a boat to a lonely place where they could be by themselves. •But people saw them going, and many could guess where; and from every town they all hurried to the place on foot and reached it before them. •So as he stepped ashore he saw a large crowd; and he took pity on them because they were like sheep without a shepherd, and he set himself to teach them at some length. •By now it was getting very late, and his disciples came up to him and said, 'This is a lonely place and it is getting very late, •so send them away, and they can go to the farms and villages round about, to buy themselves something to eat'. •He replied, 'Give them something to eat yourselves'. They answered, 'Are we to go and spend two hundred denarii on bread for them to eat?' •'How many loaves have you?' he asked 'Go and see.' And when they had found out they said, 'Five, and two fish'. •Then he ordered them to get all the people together in groups on the green grass, •and they sat down on the ground in squares of hundreds and fifties. •Then he took the five loaves and the two fish, raised his eyes to heaven and said the blessing; then he broke the loaves and handed them to his disciples to distribute among the people. He also shared out the two fish among them all. •They all ate as much as they wanted. •They collected twelve basketfuls of scraps of bread and pieces of fish. •Those who had eaten the loaves numbered five thousand men.

He was going to pass them by, 49 but when they saw him walking on the lake they thought it was a ghost and cried 50 out; •for they had all seen him and were terrified. But he at once spoke to them, 51 and said, 'Courage! It is I! Do not be afraid.' •Then he got into the boat with them, 52 and the wind dropped. Ac 21:21 The traditions of the Pharisees

7 The Pharisees and some of the scribes who had come from Jerusalem gathered round him, •and they noticed that some of his disciples were eating with unclean hands, that is, without washing them. •For the Pharisees, and the Jews in general, follow the tradition of the elders^a and never eat without washing their arms as far as the elbow; •and on returning from the market place they never eat without first sprinkling^b themselves. There are also many other observances which have been handed down to them concerning the washing of cups and pots and bronze dishes. •So these Pharisees and scribes asked him, 'Why do your disciples not respect the tradition of the elders but eat their food with unclean hands?' •He answered, 'It was of you hypocrites that Isaiah so rightly prophesied in this passage of scripture:

Is 29:13

*This people honours me only with lip-service, while their hearts are far from me.
The worship they offer me is worthless,
the doctrines they teach are only human regulations.*

7

You put aside the commandment of God to cling to human traditions.' •And he said to them, 'How ingeniously you get round the commandment of God in order to preserve your own tradition! •For Moses said: Do your duty to your father and your mother, and, Anyone who curses father or mother must be put to death. •But you say, "If a man says to his father or mother: Anything I have that I might have used to help you is Corban^c (that is, dedicated to God), •then he is forbidden from that moment to do anything for his father or mother". In this way you make God's word null and void for the sake of your tradition which you have handed down. And you do many other things like this.'

||Mt 15:10-20 On clean and unclean

He called the people to him again and said, 'Listen to me, all of you, and understand. •Nothing that goes into a man from outside can make him unclean; it is the things that come out of a man that make him unclean. •If anyone has ears to hear, let him listen to this.'

4:10 When he had gone back into the house, away from the crowd, his disciples questioned him about the parable.^e •He said to them, 'Do you not understand either? Can you not see that whatever goes into a man from outside cannot make him unclean, •because it does not go into his heart but through his stomach and passes out into the sewer?' (Thus he pronounced all foods clean.)^f •And he went on, 'It is what comes out of a man that makes him unclean. •For it is from within, from men's hearts, that evil intentions emerge: fornication, theft, murder, adultery, avarice, malice, deceit, indecency, envy, slander, pride, folly. •All these evil things come from within and make a man unclean.'

III. JOURNEYS OUTSIDE GALILEE

25 unrecognised. •A woman whose little daughter had an unclean spirit heard about 26 him straightaway and came and fell at his feet. •Now the woman was a pagan, by birth a Syrophoenician, and she begged him to cast the devil out of her Mt 8:29 +

 28 fair to take the children's food and throw it to the house-dogs'. •But she spoke up: 'Ah yes, sir,' she replied 'but the house-dogs under the table can eat the 29 children's scraps'. •And he said to her, 'For saying this, you may go home happy:
 30 the devil has gone out of your daughter'. •So she went off to her home and found the child lying on the bed and the devil gone.

Healing of the deaf man

31 Returning from the district of Tyre, he went by way of Sidon towards the Sea Mt 15:29
 32 of Galilee, right through the Decapolis region. •And they brought him a deaf man who had an impediment in his speech; and they asked him to lay his hand on 33 him. •He took him aside in private, away from the crowd, put his fingers into the 34 man's ears and touched his tongue with spittle. •Then looking up to heaven he 35 sighed; and he said to him, 'Ephphatha', that is, 'Be opened'. •And his ears were Mt 8:3 +

 4 a great distance.' •His disciples replied, 'Where could anyone get bread to feed
 5 these people in a deserted place like this?' •He asked them, 'How many loaves 6 have you?' 'Seven' they said. •Then he instructed the crowd to sit down on the ground, and he took the seven loaves, and after giving thanks he broke them and handed them to his disciples to distribute; and they distributed them among the

 8 ordered them to be distributed also. •They ate as much as they wanted, and they

Cure of a blind man at Bethsaida

They came to Bethsaida, and some people brought to him a blind man whom 22
 they begged him to touch. •He took the blind man by the hand and led him outside 23 the village. Then putting spittle on his eyes and laying his hands on him, he asked,
 'Can you see anything?' •The man, who was beginning to see,^c replied, 'I can see 24 people; they look like trees to me, but they are walking about'. •Then he laid 25 his hands on the man's eyes again and he saw clearly; he was cured, and he could see everything plainly and distinctly. •And Jesus sent him home, saying, 'Do 26 not even go into the village'.

Peter's profession of faith

Jesus and his disciples left for the villages round Caesarea Philippi. On the 27 way he put this question to his disciples, 'Who do people say I am?' •And they 28 told him. 'John the Baptist,' they said 'others Elijah; others again, one of the prophets.' •'But you,' he asked 'who do you say I am?' Peter spoke up and said 29 to him, 'You are the Christ'. •And he gave them strict orders not to tell anyone 30 about him.

First prophecy of the Passion

And he began to teach them that the Son of Man was destined to suffer 31 grievously, to be rejected by the elders and the chief priests and the scribes, and to be put to death, and after three days to rise again; •and he said all this quite 32 openly. Then, taking him aside, Peter started to remonstrate with him. •But, 33 turning and seeing his disciples, he rebuked Peter and said to him, 'Get behind me, Satan! Because the way you think is not God's way but man's.' 34

The condition of following Christ

He called the people and his disciples to him and said, 'If anyone wants to be 34
 a follower of mine, let him renounce himself and take up his cross and follow 35
 me. •For anyone who wants to save his life will lose it; but anyone who loses his 36 life for my sake, and for the sake of the gospel, will save it. •What gain, then, is 37
 it for a man to win the whole world and ruin his life? •And indeed what can 38 a man offer in exchange for his life? •For if anyone in this adulterous and sinful generation is ashamed of me and of my words, the Son of Man will also be ashamed of him when he comes in the glory of his Father with the holy angels.'
 And he said to them, 'I tell you solemnly, there are some standing here who 1 will not taste death before they see the kingdom of God come with power'.

The transfiguration

Six days later, Jesus took with him Peter and James and John and led them 2 up a high mountain where they could be alone by themselves. There in their presence he was transfigured: •his clothes became dazzlingly white, whiter 3 than any earthly bleacher could make them. •Elijah appeared to them with 4
 Moses; and they were talking with Jesus. •Then Peter spoke to Jesus: 'Rabbi,' 5 he said 'it is wonderful for us to be here; so let us make three tents, one for you, one for Moses and one for Elijah'. •He did not know what to say; they were 6

- 7 so frightened. •And a cloud came, covering them in shadow; and there came 8 a voice from the cloud, 'This is my Son, the Beloved. Listen to him.' •Then suddenly, when they looked round, they saw no one with them any more but only Jesus.

The question about Elijah

||Mt 17:9-13

- 9 As they came down from the mountain he warned them to tell no one 1:34+
what they had seen, until after the Son of Man had risen from the dead. 8:31
10 They observed the warning faithfully, though among themselves they discussed 4:13+
11 what 'rising from the dead' could mean. •And they put this question to him,
12 'Why do the scribes say that Elijah has to come first?' •'True,' he said 'Elijah MI 3:23-24 is to come first and to see that everything is as it should be; yet how is it that the scriptures say about the Son of Man that he is to suffer grievously and be treated 13 with contempt? •However, I tell you that Elijah has come and they have treated him as they pleased, just as the scriptures say about him.' I K 19:2,10

||Mt 17:14-21
||Lk 9:37-42

- 14 When they rejoined the disciples they saw^a a large crowd round them and 15 some scribes arguing with them. •The moment they saw him the whole crowd
16 were struck with amazement and ran to greet him. •'What are you arguing about 17 with them?' he asked. •A man answered him from the crowd, 'Master, I have 18 brought my son to you; there is a spirit of dumbness in him, •and when it Mt 8:29+ takes hold of him it throws him to the ground, and he foams at the mouth and grinds his teeth and goes rigid. And I asked your disciples to cast it out and 19 they were unable to.' •'You faithless generation' he said to them in reply. 'How much longer must I be with you? How much longer must I put up with you?
20 Bring him to me.' •They brought the boy to him, and as soon as the spirit saw Jesus it threw the boy into convulsions, and he fell to the ground and 21 lay writhing there, foaming at the mouth. •Jesus asked the father, 'How 22 long has this been happening to him?' 'From childhood,' he replied •and it has often thrown him into the fire and into the water, in order to destroy him.
23 But if you can do anything, have pity on us and help us.' •'If you can?' retorted
24 Jesus. 'Everything is possible for anyone who has faith.' •Immediately the Mt 8:10+ 25 father of the boy cried out, 'I do have faith. Help the little faith I have!' •And when Jesus saw how many people were pressing round him, he rebuked the unclean spirit. 'Deaf and dumb spirit,' he said 'I command you: come out of him 7:37 26 and never enter him again.' •Then throwing the boy into violent convulsions it came out shouting, and the boy lay there so like a corpse that most of them 27 said, 'He is dead'. •But Jesus took him by the hand and helped him up, and he 28 was able to stand. •When he had gone indoors his disciples asked him privately, 29 'Why were we unable to cast it out?' •'This is the kind' he answered 'that can only be driven out by prayer.'^b

32 But they did not understand what he said and were afraid to ask him. 4:13+ of all and servant of all'. •He then took a little child, set him in front of them, 36 put his arms round him, and said to them, •'Anyone who welcomes one of 37 these little children in my name, welcomes me; and anyone who welcomes me welcomes not me but the one who sent me'.

On using the name of Jesus

John said to him, 'Master, we saw a man who is not one of us casting out 38 devils in your name; and because he was not one of us we tried to stop him'.
But Jesus said, 'You must not stop him: no one who works a miracle in my name 39

Charity shown to Christ's disciples

The question about divorce

10 Leaving there, he came to the district of Judaea and the far side of the 1
Jordan. And again crowds gathered round him, and again he taught them, as his custom was. •Some Pharisees approached him and asked, 'Is it against 2 the law for a man to divorce his wife?' They were testing him. •He answered 3 them, 'What did Moses command you?' •'Moses allowed us' they said 'to draw 4 up a writ of dismissal and so to divorce.' •Then Jesus said to them, 'It was 5 because you were so unteachable that he wrote this commandment for you.
But from the beginning of creation God made them male and female. •This is why 6 a man must leave father and mother,^a •and the two become one body. They are no 8 longer two, therefore, but one body. •So then, what God has united, man must not 9 divide.' •Back in the house the disciples questioned him again about this, •and 10
he said to them, 'The man who divorces his wife and marries another is guilty of 11 adultery against her. •And if a woman divorces her husband and marries 12 another she is guilty of adultery too.'

Jesus and the children

People were bringing little children to him, for him to touch them. The 13 disciples turned them away, •but when Jesus saw this he was indignant and said 14 to them, 'Let the little children come to me; do not stop them; for it is to such as these that the kingdom of God belongs. •I tell you solemnly, anyone who 15 does not welcome the kingdom of God like a little child will never enter it.'
Then he put his arms round them, laid his hands on them and gave them his 16 blessing.

The rich young man

- 17 He was setting out on a journey when a man ran up, knelt before him and put this question to him, 'Good master, what must I do to inherit eternal life?'
 18 Jesus said to him, 'Why do you call me good? No one is good but God alone.
 19 You know the commandments: You must not kill; You must not commit adultery; You must not steal; You must not bring false witness; You must not defraud; Honour your father and mother.' •And he said to him, 'Master, I have kept all these from my earliest days'. •Jesus looked steadily at him and loved him, and he said, 'There is one thing you lack. Go and sell everything you own and give the money to the poor, and you will have treasure in heaven; then come, follow me.' •But his face fell at these words and he went away sad, for he was a man of great wealth.

The danger of riches

- 23 Jesus looked round and said to his disciples, 'How hard it is for those who have riches to enter the kingdom of God!' •The disciples were astounded by these words,^b but Jesus insisted, 'My children,' he said to them 'how hard it is to enter the kingdom of God! •It is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God.' •They were more astonished than ever. 'In that case' they said to one another 'who can be saved?'

The reward of renunciation

- 28 Peter took this up. 'What about us?' he asked him. Third prophecy of the Passion

- 32 They were on the road, going up to Jerusalem; Jesus was walking on ahead of them; they were in a daze, and those who followed were apprehensive. Once more taking the Twelve aside he began to tell them what was going to happen to him: •'Now we are going up to Jerusalem, and the Son of Man is about to be handed over to the chief priests and the scribes. They will condemn him to death and will hand him over to the pagans, •who will mock him and spit at him and scourge him and put him to death; and after three days he will rise again.'

 the open street. As they untied it, •some men standing there said, 'What are you⁵ doing, untying that colt?' •They gave the answer Jesus had told them, and the⁶ men let them go. •Then they took the colt to Jesus and threw their cloaks on its⁷ back, and he sat on it. •Many people spread their cloaks on the road, others green-⁸ followed were all shouting, 'Hosanna! Blessings on him who comes in the name of the Lord! •Blessings on the coming kingdom of our father David! *Hosanna*¹⁰

The expulsion of the dealers from the Temple

- 15 So they reached Jerusalem and he went into the Temple and began driving out those who were selling and buying there; he upset the tables of the money
16 changers and the chairs of those who were selling pigeons. •Nor would he allow 17 anyone to carry anything through the Temple. •And he taught them and said, 18 'Does not scripture say: My house will be called a house of prayer for all the peoples?'^a But you have turned it into a robbers' den.^b •This came to the ears of the chief priests and the scribes, and they tried to find some way of doing

- 27 They came to Jerusalem again, and as Jesus was walking in the Temple, the 28 chief priests and the scribes and the elders came to him, •and they said to him,
'What authority have you for acting like this? Or who gave you authority to do 29 these things?' •Jesus said to them, 'I will ask you a question, only one; answer
30 me and I will tell you my authority for acting like this. •John's baptism: did it 31 come from heaven, or from man? Answer me that.' •And they argued it out this way among themselves: 'If we say from heaven, he will say, "Then why did 32 you refuse to believe him?" •But dare we say from man?"—they had the people 33 to fear, for everyone held that John was a real prophet. •So their reply to Jesus was, 'We do not know'. And Jesus said to them, 'Nor will I tell you my authority for acting like this'.

Parable of the wicked husbandmen

||Mt 21:33-46
||Lk 20:9-19

- 1 12 He went on to speak to them in parables, 'A man planted a vineyard; he fenced it round, dug out a trough for the winepress and built a tower; then 2 he leased it to tenants and went abroad. •When the time came, he sent a servant to the tenants to collect from them his share of the produce from the vineyard.
3 But they seized the man, thrashed him and sent him away empty-handed. •Next
4 he sent another servant to them; him they beat about the head and treated
5 shamefully. •And he sent another and him they killed; then a number of others,
6 and they thrashed some and killed the rest. •He had still someone left: his beloved 7 son. He sent him to them last of all. "They will respect my son" he said. •But those tenants said to each other, "This is the heir. Come on, let us kill him, and the 8 inheritance will be ours." •So they seized him and killed him and threw him out 9 of the vineyard. •Now what will the owner of the vineyard do? He will come and

On tribute to Caesar

Next they sent to him some Pharisees and some Herodians to catch him out 13 in what he said. •These came and said to him, 'Master, we know you are an honest 14 man, that you are not afraid of anyone, because a man's rank means nothing to you, and that you teach the way of God in all honesty. Is it permissible to pay taxes to Caesar or not? Should we pay, yes or no?' •Seeing through their 15 hypocrisy he said to them, 'Why do you set this trap for me? Hand me a denarius and let me see it.' •They handed him one and he said, 'Whose head 16 is this? Whose name?' 'Caesar's' they told him. •Jesus said to them, 'Give back 17 reply took them completely by surprise.

The resurrection of the dead

Then some Sadducees—who deny that there is a resurrection—came to 18 him and they put this question to him, 'Master, we have it from Moses in 19 writing, if a man's brother dies leaving a wife but no child, the man must marry the widow to raise up children for his brother. •Now there were seven 20 brothers. The first married a wife and then died leaving no children. •The second 21 married the widow, and he too died leaving no children; with the third it was the same, •and none of the seven left any children. Last of all the woman herself 22 died. •Now at the resurrection, when they rise again, whose wife will she be, 23 since she had been married to all seven?'

Jesus said to them, 'Is not the reason why you go wrong, that you understand 24 neither the scriptures nor the power of God? •For when they rise from the dead, 25 men and women do not marry; no, they are like the angels in heaven. •Now 26 about the dead rising again, have you never read in the Book of Moses, in the Ex 3:6 passage about the Bush,^a how God spoke to him and said: *I am the God of

The greatest commandment of all

One of the scribes who had listened to them debating and had observed how 28 well Jesus had answered them, now came up and put a question to him, 'Which Dt 6:4-5 is the first of all the commandments?' •Jesus replied, 'This is the first: Listen, 29
Israel, the Lord our God is the one Lord, •and you must love the Lord your God with 30 all your heart, with all your soul, with all your mind and with all your strength.
Lv 19:18 The second is this: You must love your neighbour as yourself. There is no 31

Jesus was at Bethany in the house of Simon the leper; he was at dinner when 3 a woman came in with an alabaster jar of very costly ointment, pure nard. She broke the jar and poured the ointment on his head. •Some who were there said 4 to one another indignantly, 'Why this waste of ointment? •Ointment like this 5 could have been sold for over three hundred denarii and the money given to the poor'; and they were angry with her. •But Jesus said, 'Leave her alone. Why 6 are you upsetting her? What she has done for me is one of the good works.
You have the poor with you always, and you can be kind to them whenever you 7

- 8 wish, but you will not always have me. •She has done what was in her power to 15 is my dining room in which I can eat the passover with my disciples?” •He will found everything as he had told them, and prepared the Passover.

The treachery of Judas foretold

||Mt 26:20-25
||Lk 22:14,
21-23

- 17 When evening came he arrived with the Twelve. •And while they were at 18 table eating, Jesus said, ‘I tell you solemnly, one of you is about to betray 19 me, one of you eating with me’. •They were distressed and asked him, one after 20 another, ‘Not I, surely?’ •He said to them, ‘It is one of the Twelve, one who is 21 dipping into the same dish with me. •Yes, the Son of Man is going to his fate, as the scriptures say he will, but alas for that man by whom the Son of Man is betrayed! Better for that man if he had never been born!’

- 22 And as they were eating he took some bread, and when he had said the blessing 23 he broke it and gave it to them. ‘Take it,’ he said ‘this is my body.’ •Then he took a cup, and when he had returned thanks he gave it to them, and all drank from 24 it, •and he said to them, ‘This is my blood, the blood of the covenant, which is 25 to be poured out for many. •I tell you solemnly, I shall not drink any more wine until the day I drink the new wine in the kingdom of God.’

- 26 After psalms had been sung they left for the Mount of Olives. •And Jesus 27 said to them, ‘You will all lose faith, for the scripture says: I shall strike 28 the shepherd and the sheep will be scattered, •however after my resurrection I shall 29 go before you to Galilee’. •Peter said, ‘Even if all lose faith, I will not’. •And Jesus said to him, ‘I tell you solemnly, this day, this very night, before 31 the cock crows twice, you will have disowned me three times’. •But he repeated still more earnestly, ‘If I have to die with you, I will never disown you’. And they all said the same.

Gethsemane

||Mt 26:36-46
||Lk 22:40-45

- 32 They came to a small estate called Gethsemane, and Jesus said to his disciples, 33 ‘Stay here while I pray’. •Then he took Peter and James and John with him.
34 And a sudden fear came over him, and great distress. •And he said to them, ‘My 35 soul is sorrowful to the point of death. Wait here, and keep awake.’ •And going on a little further he threw himself on the ground and prayed that, if it were 36 possible, this hour might pass him by. •‘Abba (Father)!’ he said ‘Everything is possible for you. Take this cup away from me. But let it be as you, not I, would have it.' •He came back and found them sleeping, and he said to Peter, 'Simon, 37 are you asleep? Had you not the strength to keep awake one hour? •You should 38 be awake, and praying not to be put to the test. The spirit is willing, but the flesh 39 is weak.' •Again he went away and prayed, saying the same words. •And 40 once more he came back and found them sleeping, their eyes were so heavy; and 41 they could find no answer for him. •He came back a third time and said to them, 42

'You can sleep on now and take your rest. It is all over. The hour has come. Now 43 the Son of Man is to be betrayed into the hands of sinners. •Get up! Let us go! 44
My betrayer is close at hand already.'

The arrest

Even while he was still speaking, Judas, one of the Twelve, came up with 43 a number of men armed with swords and clubs, sent by the chief priests and 44
the scribes and the elders. •Now the traitor had arranged a signal with them. 45
'The one I kiss,' he had said 'he is the man. Take him in charge, and see he is 46 well guarded when you lead him away.' •So when the traitor came, he went 47 straight up to Jesus and said, 'Rabbi!' and kissed him. •The others seized him 48 and took him in charge. •Then one of the bystanders drew his sword and struck 49 out at the high priest's servant, and cut off his ear.

Then Jesus spoke. 'Am I a brigand' he said 'that you had to set out to 50 capture me with swords and clubs? •I was among you teaching in the Temple day 51 after day and you never laid hands on me. But this is to fulfil the scriptures.' 52
And they all deserted him and ran away. •A young man who followed him had 53 nothing on but a linen cloth. They caught hold of him, •but he left the cloth 54 in their hands and ran away naked.ª

Jesus before the Sanhedrin

They led Jesus off to the high priest; and all the chief priests and the elders 53 and the scribes assembled there. •Peter had followed him at a distance, right 54 into the high priest's palace, and was sitting with the attendants warming himself 55 at the fire.

The chief priests and the whole Sanhedrin were looking for evidence against 56
Jesus on which they might pass the death-sentence. But they could not find any. 57
Several, indeed, brought false evidence against him, but their evidence was 58 conflicting. •Some stood up and submitted this false evidence against him, 59
'We heard him say, "I am going to destroy this Temple made by human hands, 60 and in three days build another, not made by human hands"'. •But even on 61 this point their evidence was conflicting. •The high priest then stood up before 62
the whole assembly and put this question to Jesus, 'Have you no answer to that? 63
What is this evidence these men are bringing against you?'ª •But he was silent 64 and made no answer at all. The high priest put a second question to him, 'Are 65 you the Christ,' he said 'the Son of the Blessed One?'ª •'I am,' said Jesus 'and 66 you will see the Son of Man seated at the right hand of the Power and coming with 67
the clouds of heaven.' •The high priest tore his robes, 'What need of witnesses have 68 we now?' he said. •'You heard the blasphemy. What is your finding?' And they 69 all gave their verdict: he deserved to die.

Peter's denials

While Peter was down below in the courtyard, one of the high priest's 66 servant-girls came up. •She saw Peter warming himself there, stared at him and 67 said, 'You too were with Jesus, the man from Nazareth'. •But he denied it. 68
'I do not know, I do not understand, what you are talking about' he said. And 69

Mt 2:23+

69 he went out into the forecourt.^d •The servant-girl saw him and again started 70 telling the bystanders, 'This fellow is one of them'. •But again he denied it.
 A little later the bystanders themselves said to Peter, 'You are one of them for 71 sure! Why, you are a Galilean.' •But he started calling down curses on himself 72 and swearing, 'I do not know the man you speak of'. •At that moment the cock crew for the second time, and Peter recalled how Jesus had said to him,
 'Before the cock crows twice, you will have disowned me three times'. And he burst into tears.

Jesus before Pilate

1 15 First thing in the morning, the chief priests together with the elders and scribes, in short the whole Sanhedrin, had their plan ready. They had Jesus bound and took him away and handed him over to Pilate.

2 Pilate questioned him, 'Are you the king of the Jews?' 'It is you who say it'
 3 he answered. •And the chief priests brought many accusations against him.
 4 Pilate questioned him again, 'Have you no reply at all? See how many accusations
 5 they are bringing against you!' •But, to Pilate's amazement, Jesus made no further reply.

6 At festival time Pilate used to release a prisoner for them, anyone they asked 7 for. •Now a man called Barabbas was then in prison with the rioters who had 8 committed murder during the uprising. •When the crowd went up and began to 9 ask Pilate the customary favour, •Pilate answered them, 'Do you want me to 10 release for you the king of the Jews?' •For he realised it was out of jealousy that 11 the chief priests had handed Jesus over. •The chief priests, however, had incited 12 the crowd to demand that he should release Barabbas for them instead. •Then Pilate spoke again. 'But in that case,' he said to them 'what am I to do with the 13 man you call king of the Jews?' •They shouted back, 'Crucify him!' •'Why?' Pilate 14 asked them 'What harm has he done?' But they shouted all the louder, 'Crucify 15 him!' •So Pilate, anxious to placate the crowd, released Barabbas for them and, having ordered Jesus to be scourged, handed him over to be crucified.

16 The soldiers led him away to the inner part of the palace, that is, the Prae-

 18 twisted some thorns into a crown and put it on him. •And they began saluting 19 him, 'Hail, king of the Jews!' •They struck his head with a reed and spat on him;
 20 and they went down on their knees to do him homage. •And when they had finished making fun of him, they took off the purple and dressed him in his own clothes.

When some of those who stood by heard this, they said, 'Listen, he is calling on 35
Elijah'. •Someone ran and soaked a sponge in vinegar and, putting it on a reed, 36 gave it him to drink saying, 'Wait and see if Elijah will come to take him down'.
But Jesus gave a loud cry and breathed his last. •And the veil of the Temple was 37 torn in two from top to bottom. •The centurion, who was standing in front of 39

The burial

It was now evening, and since it was Preparation Day (that is, the vigil of the 42 sabbath), •there came Joseph of Arimathaea, a prominent member of the 43 Council,^g who himself lived in the hope of seeing the kingdom of God, and he boldly went to Pilate and asked for the body of Jesus. •Pilate, astonished that 44 he should have died so soon, summoned the centurion and enquired if he was already dead.^h •Having been assured of this by the centurion, he granted the 45 corpse to Joseph •who bought a shroud, took Jesus down from the cross, 46 wrapped him in the shroud and laid him in a tomb which had been hewn out of the rock. He then rolled a stone against the entrance to the tomb. •Mary of 47 Magdala and Mary the mother of Joset were watching and took note of where he was laid.

The empty tomb. The angel's message

16 When the sabbath was over, Mary of Magdala, Mary the mother of James, 1
Lk 23:56 and Salome, bought spices with which to go and anoint him. •And very early 2 in the morning on the first day of the week they went to the tomb, just as the sun was rising.^a

They had been saying to one another, 'Who will roll away the stone for us 3 from the entrance to the tomb?' •But when they looked they could see that the 4 stone—which was very big—had already been rolled back. •On entering the 5 9:3 tomb they saw a young man in a white robe seated on the right-hand side, and they were struck with amazement. •But he said to them, 'There is no need for 6 alarm. You are looking for Jesus of Nazareth, who was crucified: he has risen, Mt 2:23+ he is not here. See, here is the place where they laid him. •But you must go and 7 tell his disciples and Peter, "He is going before you to Galilee; it is there

- 8 you will see him, just as he told you".^c •And the women came out and ran away from the tomb because they were frightened out of their wits; and they said nothing to a soul,^b for they were afraid...

Appearances of the risen Christ^e

- 9 Having risen in the morning on the first day of the week, he appeared first to 10 Mary of Magdala from whom he had cast out seven devils. •She then went to those 11 who had been his companions, and who were mourning and in tears, and told 12 them. •But they did not believe her when they heard her say that he was alive 13 and that she had seen him.
 14 After this, he showed himself under another form to two of them as they 15 were on their way into the country. •These went back and told the others, who 16 did not believe them either.
 17 Lastly, he showed himself to the Eleven themselves while they were at table.
 18 He reproached them for their incredulity and obstinacy, because they had refused
 19 to believe those who had seen him after he had risen. •And he said to them, 20 'Go out to the whole world; proclaim the Good News to all creation. •He who believes and is baptised will be saved; he who does not believe will be condemned.
 21 These are the signs that will be associated with believers: in my name they will cast 22 out devils; they will have the gift of tongues;^d •they will pick up snakes in their hands, and be unharmed should they drink deadly poison; they will lay their hands on the sick, who will recover.'
 23 And so the Lord Jesus, after he had spoken to them, was taken up into heaven:
 24 there at the right hand of God he took his place, •while they, going out, preached everywhere, the Lord working with them and confirming the word by the signs that accompanied it.

b. According to Mt 28:8; Lk 24:10,22f; Jn 20:18, they did in fact tell the news. Mark, too, may have said so in a lost ending of his gospel (cf. following note); alternatively, he may have deliberately refrained from speaking of it to avoid having to append an account of the apparitions which he had made up his mind to omit.

c. The 'long ending' of Mark, vv. 9-20, is included in the canonically accepted body of inspired scripture. This does not necessarily imply Marcan authorship which, indeed, is open to question. The manuscript tradition is the main objection. Many MSS (including Vat. and Sin.) omit the present ending. One MS gives, instead, a shorter ending which, proceeding from v. 8, runs 'They reported briefly to Peter's companions what they had been told. Then

Jesus himself through their agency broadcast from east to west the sacred and incorruptible message of eternal salvation.' Four MSS give the shorter ending and add the longer. One MS has the longer ending with the following insertion between vv. 14 and 15: 'And they defended themselves thus, "This age of lawlessness and unbelief is under the sway of Satan, who does not allow those under the yoke of unclean spirits to understand God's truth and power. Now, therefore, reveal your righteousness." This is what they said to Christ, and Christ answered, "The number of years allowed for Satan's authority has been reached, but other terrible things draw near. I was handed over to be killed for those who have sinned, so that they might turn to the truth and sin no more, and so inherit the spiritual and incorruptible glory of righteousness which is in heaven..."' The patristic tradition, also, is somewhat uncertain. We may add that the transition from v. 8 to v. 9 is brusque. Moreover, it is difficult to see how the original gospel could have ended so abruptly at v. 8. Hence the hypothesis that, for some unknown reason, the original ending has been lost and the present ending composed to fill the gap. This ending is, in fact, a brief summary of the appearances of the risen Christ, and its style differs notably from the usually concrete and pictorial style of Mark. The present ending, however, was known to Tatian and to Irenaeus in the 2nd century, and is to be found in the vast majority of Greek MSS and of the versions. That Mark was its author cannot be proved; it is, nonetheless, 'an authentic relic of the first Christian generation' (Swete).

Elizabeth by name, who was a descendant of Aaron. •Both were worthy in the 6 sight of God, and scrupulously observed all the commandments and observances of the Lord. •But they were childless: Elizabeth was barren and they were 7 both getting on in years.

Now it was the turn of Zechariah's section^e to serve, and he was exercising 8 his priestly office before God •when it fell to him by lot, as the ritual custom 9 was, to enter the Lord's sanctuary and burn incense there.^f •And at the hour of 10 incense the whole congregation was outside, praying.

Then there appeared to him the angel of the Lord, standing on the right 11 fear.^g •But the angel said to him, 'Zechariah, do not be afraid, your prayer 13 has been heard. Your wife Elizabeth is to bear you a son and you must name 14 him John.^h •He will be your joy and delight and many will rejoiceⁱ at his birth, 15 for he will be great in the sight of the Lord; he must drink no wine, no strong 16 drink.^j Even from his mother's womb he will be filled with the Holy Spirit, •and 17

he will bring back many of the sons of Israel to the Lord their God. •With the 18 spirit and power of Elijah,^k he will go before him to turn the hearts of fathers towards their children and the disobedient back to the wisdom that the virtuous 19 have, preparing for the Lord a people fit for him.' •Zechariah said to the angel, 20
'How can I be sure of this?^l I am an old man and my wife is getting on in years.'
The angel replied, 'I am Gabriel who stand in God's presence, and I have been 21 sent to speak to you and bring you this good news. •Listen! Since you have not believed my words, which will come true at their appointed time, you will be silenced and have no power of speech until this has happened.' •Meanwhile the people were waiting for Zechariah and were surprised that he stayed in the sanctuary so long. •When he came out he could not speak to them, and they realised that he had received a vision in the sanctuary. But he could only make signs to them, and remained dumb.

When his time of service came to an end he returned home. •Some time later his wife Elizabeth conceived, and for five months she kept to herself. •‘The Lord has done this for me’ she said ‘now that it has pleased him to take away the humiliation I suffered among men.’^m

The annunciationⁿ

In the sixth month^o the angel Gabriel was sent by God to a town in Galilee called Nazareth, •to a virgin betrothed to a man named Joseph, of the House of David; and the virgin’s name was Mary. •He went in and said to her, ‘Rejoice, so highly favoured!’^p The Lord is with you.’ •She was deeply disturbed by these words and asked herself what this greeting could mean, •but the angel said to her, ‘Mary, do not be afraid; you have won God’s favour. •Listen! You are to conceive and bear a son, and you must name him Jesus. •He will be great and will be called Son of the Most High. The Lord God will give him the throne of his ancestor David; •he will rule over the House of Jacob for ever and his reign will have no end.’^q •Mary said to the angel, ‘But how can this come about, since I am a virgin?’^r •‘The Holy Spirit will come upon you’ the angel answered ‘and the power of the Most High will cover you with its shadow.’^s And so the child will be holy and will be called Son of God. •Know this too: your kinswoman Elizabeth has, in her old age, herself conceived a son, and she whom people called barren is now in her sixth month, •for nothing is impossible to God.’ •‘I am the handmaid of the Lord,’ said Mary ‘let what you have said be done to me.’ And the angel left her.

The visitation

Mary set out at that time and went as quickly as she could to a town in the hill country of Judah.^t •She went into Zechariah’s house and greeted Elizabeth. Now as soon as Elizabeth heard Mary’s greeting, the child leapt in her womb and Elizabeth was filled with the Holy Spirit. •She gave a loud cry and said, ‘Of all women you are the most blessed, and blessed is the fruit of your womb.

g. Lk is fond of mentioning religious dread and terror: 1:29-30,65; 2:9-10; 4:36; 5:8-10,26; 7:16; 8:25: 33-37,56; 9:34,43; 24:37; Ac 2:43; 3:10; 5:5,11; 10:4; 19:17.

h. The name means ‘Yahweh-is-gracious’.

i. Joy is the keynote of ch. 1-2; 1:28,46,58; 2:10. Cf. 10:17,20f; 13:17; 15:7,32; 19:6,37; 24:41,52; Ac 2:46+.

j. Several O.T. texts lie behind this remark, especially the law of the nazirite, cf. Nb 6:1+.

k. Mt 3:23 gave rise to the expectation that Elijah would return before the messianic era and pave the way for it. In Mt 17:10-13 John the Baptist is identified with ‘the Elijah who has to come’.

l. Zechariah asks for a ‘sign’, cf. Gn 15:8; Jg 6:17; Is 7:11; 38:7; nevertheless his doubt continues.

m. Lit. ‘to take away my shame’. Barrenness was considered a humiliation, Gn 30:23; 1 S 1:5-8, and even a punishment, 2 S 6:23; Ho 9:11.

n. Lk makes the birth and infancy narratives of John parallel to those of Jesus, and gives these latter from Mary’s point of view; Matthew tells them from Joseph’s.

o. I.e. of John’s conception.

p. The translation ‘Rejoice’ may be preferred to ‘Hail’ and regarded as containing a messianic reference, cf. Zc 9.9. ‘so highly favoured’, i.e. as to become the mother of the Messiah. Add. ‘Of all women you are the most blessed’, cf. 1:42.

q. The angel’s words recall several O.T. passages referring to the Messiah.

r. Lit. ‘since I do not know man’; this phrase means that Mary is in fact a virgin and perhaps expresses also her intention to remain so.

s. In O.T. this expression is used of the bright cloud which is the sign of God’s presence, cf. Ex 13:22+; 19:16+; 24:16+. Cf. Lk 9:34p. The conception of Jesus is effected only by God and his Spirit.

t. Commonly identified with Ain Karim, about 5 m. W. of Jerusalem.

The birth of John the Baptist and visit of the neighbours

Meanwhile the time came for Elizabeth to have her child, and she gave birth 57

The circumcision of John the Baptist

Now on the eighth day they came to circumcise the child; they were going 59

 The father asked for a writing-tablet and wrote, ‘His name is John’. And they 63 and praised God. •All their neighbours were filled with awe and the whole affair 65

- 1 2 Now at this time Caesar Augustus^a issued a decree for a census of the whole
2 world to be taken. •This census—the first^b—took place while Quirinius was 3 governor of Syria, •and everyone went to his own town to be registered. •So Joseph 4 set out from the town of Nazareth in Galilee and travelled up to Judaea, to the 5 town of David called Bethlehem, since he was of David’s House and line, •in 6 order to be registered together with Mary, his betrothed, who was with child.
7 While they were there the time came for her to have her child, •and she gave birth to a son, her first-born.^c She wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a

u. ‘my Lord’, i.e. the Messiah.

v. ‘the Lord’, i.e. God. Or ‘And blessed are you who have believed, because what has been promised to you by the Lord will be fulfilled’.

w. Not ‘Elizabeth’, a var. with only slight MS support. Mary’s canticle is reminiscent of Hannah’s, 1 S 2:1-10, and of many other O.T. passages. Apart from the main textual similarities noted in the margin there are two characteristic O.T. ideas: 1. God comes to the help not of the rich and powerful but of the poor and the simple, Zp 2:3+, cf. Mt 5:3+. 2. Ever since Abraham received the promises, Gn 15:1+; 17:1+, Israel has been God’s favoured one, cf. Dt 7:6+, etc.

x. It is probable that Mary stayed with Elizabeth until John’s birth and circumcision, but Luke’s habit is to round off one episode before passing to the next, cf. 1:64 and 67; 3:19-20; 8:37-38.

y. The name was normally given when the child was circumcised, cf. 2:21.

z. I.e. protected him: a biblical expression, Jr 26:24; Ac 11:21.

aa. In the full sense of the term, because Zechariah not only utters a hymn of thanksgiving (vv. 68-75) but also foresees the future (vv. 76-79).

bb. God is said to ‘visit’ when he intervenes notably in history, Ex 3:16+.

cc. Lit. ‘a horn of’, cf. Ps 75:4+.

dd. I.e. God, as in 1:16-17, not the Messiah.

ee. ‘tender mercy’, lit. ‘bowels of mercy’. ‘will bring’: var. ‘has brought’.

ff. I.e. either the messianic era or the Messiah himself.

gg. A kind of refrain: 2:40,52; cf. 1:66 and cf. Ac 2:41+; 6:7+.

2 a. Roman emperor from 30 B.C. to 14 A.D.

b. The first of a series. The translation sometimes given, ‘This census preceded that which was held when Quirinius was governor of Syria’, is difficult to justify grammatically. The historical circumstances are little known. Most scholars put the census of Quirinius in 6 A.D., but the only authority for this is Josephus who is doubtfully reliable in this matter, cf. Ac 5:37+. The most probable explanation is that the census, which was made with a view to taxation, took place about 8-6 B.C. as part of a general census of the empire, and that it was organised in Palestine by Quirinius who was specially appointed for the purpose. Quirinius might have been governor of Syria, between 4 and 1 B.C., and if so Luke’s expression would then be a rough approximation. Jesus was born certainly before Herod’s death (4 B.C.), possibly in 8-6 B.C. The ‘Christian era’, established by Dionysius Exiguus (6th century), is the result of a false calculation, cf. note to Lk 3:1.

c. In biblical Greek, the term does not necessarily imply younger brothers but emphasises the dignity and rights of the child.

1:14+ by the whole people. •Today in the town of David a saviour has been born to 11
 Mt 1:21 you; he is Christ the Lord.^a •And here is a sign for you: you will find a baby 12

 Is 9:5+ angel there was a great throng of the heavenly host, praising God and singing:

19:38 'Glory to God in the highest heaven, 14
 Ezk 3:12 and peace to men who enjoy his favour'.^e

Now when the angels had gone from them into heaven, the shepherds said 15 to one another, 'Let us go to Bethlehem and see this thing that has happened 16 which the Lord has made known to us'. •So they hurried away and found 16
 Is 1:3 Mary and Joseph, and the baby lying in the manger. •When they saw the child 17 they repeated what they had been told about him, •and everyone who heard 18
 2:51 it was astonished at what the shepherds had to say. •As for Mary, she treasured 19
 Gn 37:11 all these things and pondered them in her heart. •And the shepherds went 20

II. PRELUDE TO THE PUBLIC MINISTRY OF JESUS

The preaching of John the Baptist

1 3 In the fifteenth year of Tiberius Caesar's reign,^a when Pontius Pilate^b was governor of Judaea, Herod^c tetrarch of Galilee, his brother Philip^d tetrarch 2 of the lands of Ituraea and Trachonitis, Lysanias^e tetrarch of Abilene, •during

Mt 27:2

Jr 1:2
Ho 1:1

d. He is, therefore, the expected Messiah; but he is also called 'Lord', a title the O.T. reserves for God. A new era is beginning.

e. Lit. 'to men (who are the object) of (God's) benevolence'. The current translation, 'peace to men of good will', based on the Vulg., does not render the usual sense of the Greek term. Another, less certain, reading is 'peace on earth, and among men divine benevolence'.

f. A favourite theme of Lk: 1:64; 2:28,38; 5:25-26; 7:16; 13:13; 17:15,18; 18:43; 19:37; 23:47; 24:53. Cf. Ac 2:47+.

g. Only the mother needed to be purified; the child, however, had to be 'redeemed'. Lk is careful to note that the parents of Jesus, like the Baptist's, observed all that the Law required.

h. Offering of the poor.

i. 'The Christ of the Lord' is the one whom the Lord anoints, cf. Ex 30:22+, i.e. consecrates for a saving mission; the king of Israel, God's chosen prince, is thus consecrated and thus, pre-eminently, the Messiah who is to establish the kingdom of God.

j. A woman dedicated to God and the qualified interpreter of his intentions. Cf. Ex 15:20; Jg 4:4; 2 K 22:14.

k. The messianic deliverance of the Chosen People, 1:68; 24:21, primarily affected their capital city; cf. Is 40:2; 52:9 (and see 2 S 5:9+). For Lk, Jerusalem is God's chosen centre from which will spread his salvation: 9:31,51,53; 13:22,33; 17:11; 18:31; 19:11; 24:47-49,52; Ac 1:8+.

l. Alternative translation 'in my Father's house'.

In either case, Jesus is asserting his own personal duty to his Father (Mt 4:3+) and, in the interests of that duty, an absolute independence of creatures. Cf. Jn 2:4; Mt 12:46-50.

3 a. Here, as in 1:5 and 2:1-3, Lk dates his narrative by secular events. Tiberius succeeded Augustus, 2:1, on 19 August 14 A.D. The 15th year, therefore, is from 19 August 28 A.D. to 18 August 29 A.D. Alternatively, if the Syrian method of calculating the year of a reign is being followed, the 15th year is from Sept.-Oct. 27 A.D. to Sept.-Oct. 28 A.D. At that time, Jesus was at least 33 years old, possibly 35 or 36. The indication of v. 23 is approximate, and perhaps it only means that Jesus was old enough to exercise a public ministry. The mistake in calculating the 'Christian era' results from taking 3:23 as an exact figure: the 15th year of Tiberius was 782 'after the foundation of Rome'; Dionysius Exiguus subtracted 29 full years from this, thus arriving at 753 for the beginning of our era. Actually, it should have been 750 or even 746.

b. Procurator of Judaea (including Idumaea and Samaria) 26-36 A.D.

c. The Herod referred to is Herod Antipas, son of Herod the Great and Malthake; he was tetrarch of Galilee and Peraea from 4 B.C. to 39 A.D.

d. Son of Herod the Great and Cleopatra, tetrarch from 4 B.C. to 34 A.D.

e. Known from two inscriptions. Abilene was in Anti-Lebanon.

f. The high priest in office was Joseph, called Caiaphas; he exercised this function from 18-36 A.D. and played a leading part in the plot against Jesus,

Lk 1:80 Zechariah, in the wilderness. •He went through the whole Jordan district pro- 3
 Jn 1:23 claiming a baptism of repentance for the forgiveness of sins,^e •as it is written 4 in the book of the sayings of the prophet Isaiah:

Is 40:3-5

*A voice cries in the wilderness:
 Prepare a way for the Lord,
 make his paths straight.
 Every valley will be filled in,
 every mountain and hill be laid low,
 winding ways will be straightened and rough roads made smooth.
 And all mankind shall see the salvation of God.*

6

Ac 26:20 He said, therefore, to the crowds who came to be baptised by him, 'Brood of 7
 vipers, who warned you to fly from the retribution that is coming? •But if you are 8

 "We have Abraham for our father" because, I tell you, God can raise children for Abraham from these stones. •Yes, even now the axe is laid to the roots of the 9

A feeling of expectancy had grown among the people, who were beginning 15 to think that John might be the Christ, •so John declared before them all, 'I 16 than I am, and I am not fit to undo the strap of his sandals; he will baptise you with the Holy Spirit and fire. •His winnowing-fan is in his hand to clear 17 his threshing-floor and to gather the wheat into his barn; but the chaff he will burn in a fire that will never go out.' •As well as this, there were many other 18 things he said to exhort the people and to announce the Good News to them.

III. THE GALILEAN MINISTRY

Jesus begins to preach

cf. Mt 26:3; Jn 11:49; 18:14. His father-in-law, Annas, who had been high priest from 6 (?) to 15 A.D., is associated with him and even named first, cf. Ac 4:6 and Jn 18:13,24, as if his prestige was such that he was high priest in all but name.

g. Probably in the neighbourhood of Jericho.

h. Vv. 10-14 (Lk only) emphasise the practical and positive side of John's teaching. Salvation is for all classes of men but justice and charity are necessary in every walk of life.

i. Lk finishes with John's ministry before passing to that of Jesus, cf. 1:56+. He makes no more than a brief allusion to the Precursor's death, 9:7-9.

j. Jesus at prayer is a favourite theme of Lk, cf. 5:16; 6:12; 9:18,28-29; 11:1; 22:41.

k. Var. 'You are my Son, today I have become your father' (Ps 2:7). In Lk and Mk, unlike Mt, the voice addresses Jesus.

4 a. Lk combines Mk's data (40 days of temptation) with Matthew's (three temptations at the end of 40 days' fast). He changes Matthew's order so as to end with Jerusalem; cf. Lk 2:38+.

b. Luke's interest in the Holy Spirit is evident not only from his first two chapters, 1:15,35,41,67,80; 2:25,26,27, but also from the remainder of the gospel in which, on several occasions, he adds a mention of the Spirit to the other synoptic passages, 4:1,14,18; 10:21; 11:13. In Ac also Lk very frequently speaks of the Spirit, Ac 1:8+.

c. The devil's dominion over the world is one of the key ideas of Jn (12:31; 14:30; 16:11; 1 Jn 3:8+; Rv 13:2,4). See also Mt 8:29+.

d. Rather than 'finished all the temptations'.

Jesus at Nazareth^g

2:39,51 He came to Nazara,^h where he had been brought up, and went into the 16 synagogue on the sabbath day as he usually did. He stood up to read,ⁱ •and they 17 handed him the scroll of the prophet Isaiah. Unrolling the scroll he found the place where it is written:

Is 61:1-2

for he has anointed me.

Zp 2:3+ He has sent me to bring the good news to the poor,^j
to proclaim liberty to captives
and to the blind new sight,
to set the downtrodden free,
to proclaim the Lord's year of favour. 19

He then rolled up the scroll, gave it back to the assistant and sat down. And all 20 eyes in the synagogue were fixed on him. •Then he began to speak to them, 'This 21
2:47; 4:15 text is being fulfilled today even as you listen'. •And he won the approval of all, 22
Jn 7:46 and they were astonished by the gracious words that came from his lips.

They said, 'This is Joseph's son, surely?' •But he replied, 'No doubt you will 23 quote me the saying, "Physician, heal yourself" and tell me, "We have heard all that happened in Capernaum,^k do the same here in your own countryside"'.
And he went on, 'I tell you solemnly, no prophet is ever accepted in his own 24

Jn 7:30 When they heard this everyone in the synagogue was enraged. •They sprang 28

Mk 1:21-28 Jesus teaches in Capernaum and cures a demoniac

He went down to Capernaum, a town in Galilee, and taught them on the 31 sabbath. •And his teaching made a deep impression on them because he spoke 32 with authority.

In the synagogue there was a man who was possessed by the spirit of an 33 unclean devil, and it shouted at the top of its voice, •'Ha! What do you want 34 Mt 8:29+ with us, Jesus of Nazareth? Have you come to destroy us? I know who you are:

Mt 2:23+ Mk 1:24+ Jn 6:69 Ac 3:14+ And the devil, throwing the man down in front of everyone, went out of him surrounding countryside.

Leaving the synagogue he went to Simon's house. Now Simon's mother-in-law 38

Leaning over her he rebuked the fever and it left her. And she immediately got 39 up and began to wait on them.

A number of cures

- 40 At sunset all those who had friends suffering from diseases of one kind or 41 another brought them to him, and laying his hands on each he cured them. • Devils them and would not allow them to speak because they knew that he was the Christ.

 3 their nets. •He got into one of the boats—it was Simon's^b—and asked him to put out a little from the shore. Then he sat down and taught the crowds from the boat.
 4 When he had finished speaking he said to Simon, 'Put out into deep water
 5 and pay out your nets for a catch'. •'Master,' Simon replied 'we worked hard all 6 night long and caught nothing, but if you say so, I will pay out the nets.' •And when they had done this they netted such a huge number of fish that their nets 7 began to tear, •so they signalled to their companions in the other boat to come and help them; when these came, they filled the two boats to sinking point.
 8 When Simon Peter saw this he fell at the knees of Jesus saying, 'Leave me, 9 Lord; I am a sinful man'. •For he and all his companions were completely 10 overcome by the catch they had made; •so also were James and John, sons of

17:14
 Mk 1:34 +

e. One of Luke's recurrent motifs: 4:37; 5:15; 7:17; cf., for similar examples, Ac 2:41 +; 6:7; Lk 1:80 +.

f. Another favourite theme of Lk: the people admiring and praising Jesus: 4:22; 8:25; 9:43; 11:27; 13:17; 19:48; for similar themes, cf. 4:14 + (Christ's growing reputation), 2:20 + (the praise of God), 1:12 + (religious awe).

g. Apparently this passage combines three visits: the first, vv. 16-22 (Jesus is honoured), occurring at the time indicated by Mt 4:13; the second, vv. 23-24 (Jesus astonishing his audience), the visit of which Mt and Mk speak; the third, vv. 25-30 (the life of Jesus threatened), not mentioned by Mt or Mk and to be placed towards the end of the Galilean ministry. In this way Lk presents an introductory tableau which is a summary and symbol of Christ's great offer and of its contemptuous rejection by his own people.

h. Rare form of the name 'Nazareth'.

i. The director of a synagogue could authorise any adult Jew to read the scripture lesson in public.

j. Add. 'to heal the broken-hearted', cf. LXX.

k. I.e. the miracles of which Lk does not speak until after the visit to Nazareth, 4:33, etc.

l. Mk reads 'Galilee'. Lk uses 'Judaea' in the wide sense: the land of Israel. So also in 7:17; 23:5 (?); Ac 10:37; 28:21.

5 a. In this narrative, Lk has combined: 1. A topographical note and an incident about Christ's preaching, vv. 1-3; this section resembles Mk 4:1-2 and 1:16,19; 2. The episode of the miraculous catch, vv. 4-10a, which is like that of Jn 21:1-6; 3. The call of Simon, vv. 10b-11, which is related to Mk 1:17,20. Luke's purpose in placing a period of teaching and miracle before the call of the first disciples was to make their unhesitating response less surprising.

b. In Lk, Simon does not receive the name Peter until 6:14.

c. The 'companions' of v. 7. Andrew is not mentioned because he is in Simon's boat (note the plural pronouns in vv. 5,6,7) which is the central piece in Luke's picture.

4:14+ His reputation continued to grow, and large crowds would gather to hear him 15 and to have their sickness cured, •but he would always go off to some place where 16 3:21+ he could be alone and pray.

6:19 Cure of a paralytic

Now he was teaching one day, and among the audience there were Pharisees 17 and doctors of the Law who had come from every village in Galilee, from Judaea and from Jerusalem. And the Power of the Lord^d was behind his works of healing. •Then some men appeared, carrying on a bed a paralysed man whom 18 they were trying to bring in and lay down in front of him. •But as the crowd 19 made it impossible to find a way of getting him in, they went up on to the flat roof and lowered him and his stretcher down through the tiles into the middle of Mt 8:10+ the gathering, in front of Jesus. •Seeing their faith he said, 'My friend, your sins 20 are forgiven you'. •The scribes and the Pharisees began to think this over. 'Who is 21 this man talking blasphemy? Who can forgive sins but God alone?' •But Jesus, 22 aware of their thoughts, made them this reply, 'What are these thoughts you have in your hearts? •Which of these is easier: to say, "Your sins are forgiven you" 23 or to say, "Get up and walk"? •But to prove to you that the Son of Man has 24 authority on earth to forgive sins,'—he said to the paralysed man—'I order you:
get up, and pick up your stretcher and go home.' •And immediately before 25 their very eyes he got up, picked up what he had been lying on and went home praising God.

2:20+ They were all astounded and praised God, and were filled with awe, 26
Ac 19:17 saying, 'We have seen strange things today'.

||Mt 9:9
||Mk 2:13-14 The call of Levi

When he went out after this, he noticed a tax collector, Levi by name, sitting 27
by the customs house, and said to him, 'Follow me'. •And leaving everything he 28 got up and followed him.

||Mt 9:10-12
||Mk 2:15-17 Eating with sinners in Levi's house

In his honour Levi held a great reception in his house, and with them at table 29 was a large gathering of tax collectors and others. •The Pharisees and their scribes 30 19:7 complained to his disciples and said, 'Why do you eat and drink with tax collectors and sinners?' •Jesus said to them in reply, 'It is not those who are well who need 31
the doctor, but the sick. •I have not come to call the virtuous, but sinners to 32 repentance.'

||Mt 9:14-17
||Mk 2:18-22 Discussion on fasting

They then said to him, 'John's disciples are always fasting and saying prayers, 33 and the disciples of the Pharisees too, but yours go on eating and drinking'.
Jesus replied, 'Surely you cannot make the bridegroom's attendants fast while 34
the bridegroom is still with them? •But the time will come, the time for the bride- 35 groom to be taken away from them; that will be the time when they will fast.'

He also told them this parable, 'No one tears a piece from a new cloak to put 36 it on an old cloak; if he does, not only will he have torn the new one, but the
- piece taken from the new will not match the old.

'And nobody puts new wine into old skins; if he does, the new wine will burst 37
the skins and then run out, and the skins will be lost. •No; new wine must be put 38
Jn 3:19 into fresh skins. •And nobody who has been drinking old wine wants new. "The 39
Jn 2:10 old is good" he says.'^e

||Mt 12:1-8
||Mk 2:23-28 Picking corn on the sabbath

6 Now one sabbath he happened to be taking a walk through the cornfields, 1 and his disciples were picking ears of corn, rubbing them in their hands and eating them. •Some of the Pharisees said, 'Why are you doing something 2

3 that is forbidden on the sabbath day?' •Jesus answered them, 'So you have not 4 read what David did when he and his followers were hungry—how he went into the house of God, took the loaves of offering and ate them and gave them to his 5 followers, loaves which only the priests are allowed to eat?' •And he said to them,
'The Son of Man is master of the sabbath'.^a

Cure of the man with a withered hand

6 Now on another sabbath he went into the synagogue and began to teach, and 7 a man was there whose right hand was withered. •The scribes and the Pharisees were watching him to see if he would cure a man on the sabbath, hoping to 8 find something to use against him. •But he knew their thoughts; and he said to the man with the withered hand, 'Stand up! Come out into the middle.' And he came 9 out and stood there. •Then Jesus said to them, 'I put it to you: is it against the 10 law on the sabbath to do good, or to do evil; to save life, or to destroy it?' •Then he looked round at them all and said to the man, 'Stretch out your hand'. He did 11 so, and his hand was better. •But they were furious, and began to discuss the best way of dealing with Jesus.

The choice of the Twelve

12 Now it was about this time that he went out into the hills to pray; and he spent
13 the whole night in prayer to God. •When day came he summoned his disciples 14 and picked out twelve of them; he called them 'apostles': •Simon whom he called Peter, and his brother Andrew; James, John, Philip, Bartholomew, 15 Matthew, Thomas, James son of Alphaeus, Simon called the Zealot, •Judas son of James,^b and Judas Iscariot who became a traitor.

The crowds follow Jesus

17 He then came down with them and stopped at a piece of level ground where there was a large gathering of his disciples with a great crowd of people from all parts of Judaea and from Jerusalem and from the coastal region of Tyre and Sidon 18 who had come to hear him and to be cured of their diseases. People tormented 19 by unclean spirits were also cured, •and everyone in the crowd was trying to touch him because power came out of him that cured them all.

The inaugural discourse.^c The Beatitudes^d

20 Then fixing his eyes on his disciples he said:
 'How happy are you who are poor: yours is the kingdom of God.
21 Happy you who are hungry now: you shall be satisfied.
 Happy you who weep now: you shall laugh.
22 'Happy are you when people hate you, drive you out, abuse you, denounce
23 your name as criminal, on account of the Son of Man. •Rejoice when that day comes and dance for joy, for then your reward will be great in heaven. This was the way their ancestors treated the prophets.

The curses

24 'But alas for you who are rich: you are having your consolation now.
25 Alas for you who have your fill now: you shall go hungry.
 Alas for you who laugh now: you shall mourn and weep.

d. I.e. God.

e. The 'new wine' Jesus provides is not appreciated by those who have drunk the old wine of the Law.

6 a. One MS here adds an interesting, but probably spurious, dictum: 'On the same day, seeing a man working on the sabbath day, he said to him: Friend, if you know what you are doing, you are blessed; but if you do not know, you are accused as a breaker of the Law'.

b. Lit. 'Judas of James', which could mean 'brother of James'. Cf. Mt 10:4+.

c. Luke's form is shorter than Matthew's because he has not filled out the discourse as Mt has done and has even left out material of a Jewish character which he thought would not interest his readers, cf. Mt 5:1+.

d. Mt has eight beatitudes, Lk four, and four maledictions. Matthew's beatitudes are a formula for the good life, and they promise heavenly rewards; Lk speaks of material conditions in this life to be reversed in the next, cf. 16:25. In Mt, Jesus uses the third person, in Lk he directly addresses his audience.

foundations: as soon as the river bore down on it, it collapsed; and what a ruin that house became!

Cure of the centurion's servant

||Mt 8:5-10, 13 7 When he had come to the end of all he wanted the people to hear, he went into 1

Parable of the sower

With a large crowd gathering and people from every town finding their way to him, he used this parable: 4

'A sower went out to sow his seed. As he sowed, some fell on the edge of the 5

7 rock, and when it came up it withered away, having no moisture. •Some seed fell into rich soil and grew and produced its crop a hundredfold.' Saying this he cried, 'Listen, anyone who has ears to hear!'

13 saved. •Those on the rock are people who, when they first hear it, welcome the word with joy. But these have no root; they believe for a while, and in time of 14 trial they give up. •As for the part that fell into thorns, this is people who have heard, but as they go on their way they are choked by the worries and riches and 15 pleasures of life and do not reach maturity. •As for the part in the rich soil, this is people with a noble and generous heart who have heard the word and take it to themselves and yield a harvest through their perseverance.

The Gerasene demoniac

They came to land in the country of the Gerasenes,^b which is opposite Galilee. 26
He was stepping ashore when a man from the town who was possessed by devils 27 came towards him; for a long time the man had worn no clothes, nor did he live in a house, but in the tombs.

4:34 Catching sight of Jesus he gave a shout, fell at his feet and cried out at the 28
Mt 4:3+ top of his voice, 'What do you want with me, Jesus, son of the Most High God? 29
I implore you, do not torture me.'—For Jesus had been telling the unclean 29 spirit to come out of the man. It was a devil that had seized on him a great many times, and then they used to secure him with chains and fetters to restrain him, but he would always break the fastenings, and the devil would drive him out into the wilds. •'What is your name?' Jesus asked. 'Legion' he said—because 30 many devils had gone into him. •And these pleaded with him not to order them 31 to depart into the Abyss.^c

Now there was a large herd of pigs feeding there on the mountain, and the 32 devils pleaded with him to let them go into these. So he gave them leave. •The 33 devils came out of the man and went into the pigs, and the herd charged down the cliff into the lake and were drowned.

When the swineherds saw what had happened they ran off and told their story 34 in the town and in the country round about; •and the people went out to see what 35 had happened. When they came to Jesus they found the man from whom the 10:39 devils had gone out sitting at the feet of Jesus,^d clothed and in his full senses; and they were afraid. •Those who had witnessed it told them how the 36 man who had been possessed came to be healed. •The entire population of the 37 1:12+ Gerasene territory was in a state of panic and asked Jesus to leave them. So he got into the boat and went back.

The man from whom the devils had gone out asked to be allowed to stay with 38 him, but he sent him away. •'Go back home,' he said 'and report all that God has 39 done for you.' So the man went off and spread throughout the town all that Jesus had done for him.

Cure of the woman with a haemorrhage. Jairus' daughter raised to life

On his return Jesus was welcomed by the crowd, for they were all there waiting 40 for him. •And now there came a man named Jairus, who was an official of the 41 synagogue. He fell at Jesus' feet and pleaded with him to come to his house, because he had an only daughter about twelve years old, who was dying. And the 42 crowds were almost stifling Jesus as he went.

Now there was a woman suffering from a haemorrhage for twelve years, 43

the fringe of his cloak; and the haemorrhage stopped at that instant. •Jesus said, 45
'Who touched me?' When they all denied that they had, Peter and his companions
5:17; 6:19 said, 'Master, it is the crowds round you, pushing'. •But Jesus said, 'Somebody 46 touched me. I felt that power had gone out from me.' •Seeing herself discovered, the 47 woman came forward trembling, and falling at his feet explained in front of all the people why she had touched him and how she had been cured at that very moment. 48
'My daughter,' he said 'your faith has restored you to health; go in peace.'

While he was still speaking, someone arrived from the house of the synagogue 49 official to say, 'Your daughter has died. Do not trouble the Master any further.'

 15 It was late afternoon when the Twelve came to him and said, 'Send the 16 people away, and they can go to the villages and farms round about to find lodging 17 and food; for we are in a lonely place here'. •He replied, 'Give them some-18 thing to eat yourselves'. But they said, 'We have no more than five loaves and two 20 were about five thousand men. But he said to his disciples, 'Get them to sit down

 22 the five loaves and the two fish, raised his eyes to heaven, and said the blessing

The condition of following Christ

Then to all he said, 'If anyone wants to be a follower of mine, let him renounce himself and take up his cross every day and follow me. •For anyone who wants to save his life will lose it; but anyone who loses his life for my sake, that man will save it. •What gain, then, is it for a man to have won the whole world and to have lost or ruined his very self? •For if anyone is ashamed of me and of my words, of him the Son of Man will be ashamed when he comes in his own glory and in the glory of the Father and the holy angels.

The kingdom will come soon

'I tell you truly, there are some standing here who will not taste death before they see the kingdom of God.'

The transfiguration*

Now about eight days after this had been said, he took with him Peter and John and James and went up the mountain to pray. •As he prayed, the aspect of his face was changed and his clothing became brilliant as lightning. •Suddenly there were two men there talking to him; they were Moses and Elijah •appearing in glory, and they were speaking of his passing which he was to accomplish in Jerusalem. •Peter and his companions were heavy with sleep, but they kept awake and saw his glory and the two men standing with him. •As these were leaving him, Peter said to Jesus, 'Master, it is wonderful for us to be here; so let us make three tents, one for you, one for Moses and one for Elijah'.—He did not know what he was saying. •As he spoke, a cloud came and covered them with shadow; and when they went into the cloud the disciples were afraid. •And a voice came from the cloud saying, 'This is my Son, the Chosen One.^a Listen to him.' •And after the voice had spoken, Jesus was found alone. The disciples kept silence and, at that time, told no one what they had seen.

The epileptic demoniac

Now on the following day when they were coming down from the mountain a large crowd came to meet him. •Suddenly a man in the crowd cried out. 'Master,' he said 'I implore you to look at my son: he is my only child. •All at once a spirit will take hold of him, and give a sudden cry and throw the boy into convulsions with foaming at the mouth; it is slow to leave him, but when it does it leaves the boy worn out. •I begged your disciples to cast it out, and they could not,' 'Faithless and perverse generation!' Jesus said in reply 'How much longer must I be among you and put up with you? Bring your son here.' •The boy was still moving towards Jesus when the devil threw him to the ground in convulsions. But Jesus rebuked the unclean spirit and cured the boy and gave him back to his father, and everyone was awestruck by the greatness of God.

Second prophecy of the Passion

At a time when everyone was full of admiration for all he did, he said to his disciples, •'For your part, you must have these words constantly in your mind: The Son of Man is going to be handed over into the power of men'. But they did not understand him when he said this; it was hidden from them so that they should not see the meaning of it, and they were afraid to ask him about what he had just said.

Who is the greatest?

An argument started between them about which of them was the greatest. Jesus knew what thoughts were going through their minds, and he took a little child and set him by his side •and then said to them, 'Anyone who welcomes this little child in my name welcomes me; and anyone who welcomes me welcomes the one who sent me. For the least among you all, that is the one who is great.' Mt 18:5▲

Introduction to the Synoptic Gospels) that served Mt also, together with information from his own special source, Lk arranges all within the literary framework of a journey to Jerusalem (9:53,57; 10:1; 13:22,33; 17:11; cf. 2:38+) suggested to him by Mk 10:1.

k. Lit. 'for his taking up'. This 'assumption' of Jesus. cf. 2 K 2:9-11; Mk 16:19; Ac 1:2,10-11; 1 Tm 3:16, refers to the last days of his suffering life (Passion, death) and the beginning of his glory (resurrection, ascension). Jn. thinking more theologically, uses the word 'glorify' in connection with the whole of this period, Jn 7:39; 12:16,23; 13:31f; for him the crucifixion is a 'lifting up',

Jn 12:32+.

l. The hatred of the Samaritans for the Jews, Jn 4:9+, would show itself particularly towards those on pilgrimage to Jerusalem; hence it was usual to bypass this territory, cf. Mt 10:5. Only Lk and Jn (4:1-42) mention Christ's presence in this schismatic province, cf. Lk 17:11,16. The early Church was not slow to follow his example, Ac 8:5-25.

m. Add. 'as Elijah did'. Allusion to 2 K 1:10-12. James and John are seen here as 'sons of thunder' indeed, Mk 3:17.

n. Add. 'You do not know what spirit you are made of. The Son of Man came not to destroy souls but to save them.'

o. Add. 'Lord', cf. Mt 8:21.

p. A play on the two meanings of 'death': physical and spiritual.

10 a. Var. 'seventy'.

b. Not, as in 9:52, to arrange for lodgings etc. but to prepare souls for his coming.

c. The collection used by Mt and Lk included a missionary discourse parallel with that of Mk 6:8-11. Lk has made use of both these sources, but separately (9:3-5; 10:2-12), whereas Mt has joined them together 10:7-16. Cf. Lk 11:39+; 17:22+.

first words be, "Peace to this house!" •And if a man of peace^d lives there, your 6 peace will go and rest on him; if not, it will come back to you. •Stay in the same 7 house, taking what food and drink they have to offer, for the labourer deserves 8 his wages; do not move from house to house. •Whenever you go into a town where 9 they make you welcome, eat what is set before you. •Cure those in it who are 10 sick, and say, "The kingdom of God is very near to you". •But whenever you enter 11 a town and they do not make you welcome, go out into its streets and say, •"We 12 wipe off the very dust of your town that clings to our feet, and leave it with you.
Yet be sure of this: the kingdom of God is very near." •I tell you, on that day 12 it will not go as hard with Sodom as with that town.

•Alas for you, Chorazin! Alas for you, Bethsaida! For if the miracles done 13 in you had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago, sitting 14 in sackcloth and ashes. •And still, it will not go as hard with Tyre and Sidon at the 15 Judgement as with you. •And as for you, Capernaum, did you want to be exalted 15 high as heaven? You shall be thrown down to hell.

•Anyone who listens to you listens to me; anyone who rejects you rejects me, 16 and those who reject me reject the one who sent me.'

True cause for the apostles to rejoice

The seventy-two came back rejoicing. 'Lord,' they said 'even the devils 17 submit to us when we use your name.' •He said to them, 'I watched Satan fall 18 like lightning from heaven. •Yes, I have given you power to tread underfoot 19 serpents and scorpions and the whole strength of the enemy; nothing shall ever 20 hurt you. •Yet do not rejoice that the spirits submit to you; rejoice rather that 20 your names are written in heaven.'

The Good News revealed to the simple. The Father and the Son

It was then that, filled with joy by the Holy Spirit, he said, 'I bless 21 you, Father, Lord of heaven and of earth, for hiding these things from the learned 22 and the clever and revealing them to mere children. Yes, Father, for that is what 22 it pleased you to do. •Everything has been entrusted to me by my Father; and 22 no one knows who the Son is except the Father, and who the Father is except 22 the Son and those to whom the Son chooses to reveal him.'

The privilege of the disciples

Then turning to his disciples he spoke to them in private, 'Happy the eyes 23 that see what you see, •for I tell you that many prophets and kings wanted to see 24 what you see, and never saw it; to hear what you hear, and never heard it'./

The great commandment

There was a lawyer who, to disconcert him, stood up and said to him, 'Master, 25
what must I do to inherit eternal life?' •He said to him, 'What is written in the 26 Law? What do you read there?' •He replied, 'You must love the Lord your God 27 with all your heart, with all your soul, with all your strength, and with all your 27 mind, and your neighbour as yourself'. •'You have answered right,' said Jesus 28
'do this and life is yours.'

Parable of the good Samaritan

But the man was anxious to justify himself^e and said to Jesus, 'And who is 29 my neighbour?' •Jesus replied, 'A man was once on his way down from Jerusalem 30 to Jericho and fell into the hands of brigands; they took all he had, beat him 31 and then made off, leaving him half dead. •Now a priest happened to be travelling 31 down the same road, but when he saw the man, he passed by on the other side.
In the same way a Levite who came to the place saw him, and passed by on the 32 other side. •But a Samaritan^h traveller who came upon him was moved with 33 compassion when he saw him. •He went up and bandaged his wounds, pouring 34 oil and wine on them. He then lifted him on to his own mount, carried him to the inn and looked after him. •Next day, he took out two denarii and handed them to the innkeeper. "Look after him," he said "and on my way back I will make good any extra expense you have." •Which of these three, do you think, proved himself a neighbour to the man who fell into the brigands' hands? •The one who took pity on him' he replied. Jesus said to him, 'Go, and do the same yourself'.

Martha and Mary^d

In the course of their journey he came to a village, and a woman named Martha welcomed him into her house. •She had a sister called Mary, who sat down at the Lord's feet and listened to him speaking. •Now Martha who was distracted with all the serving said, 'Lord, do you not care that my sister is leaving me to do the serving all by myself? Please tell her to help me.' •But the Lord answered: 'Martha, Martha,' he said 'you worry and fret about so many things, and yet few are needed, indeed only one.^f It is Mary who has chosen the better part; it is not to be taken from her.'

The Lord's prayer

11 Now once he was in a certain place praying, and when he had finished one of his disciples said, 'Lord, teach us to pray, just as John taught his disciples'. •He said to them, 'Say this when you pray:^a "Father, may your name be held holy,

your kingdom come;

give us each day our daily bread,^b and forgive us our sins,^c

for we ourselves forgive each one who is in debt to us.
And do not put us to the test."

The importunate friend

He also said to them, 'Suppose one of you has a friend and goes to him in the middle of the night to say, "My friend, lend me three loaves, •because a friend of mine on his travels has just arrived at my house and I have nothing to offer him"; •and the man answers from inside the house, "Do not bother me. The door is bolted now, and my children and I are in bed; I cannot get up to give it you". •I tell you, if the man does not get up and give it him for friendship's sake, persistence will be enough to make him get up and give his friend all he wants.'

Effective prayer

•So I say to you: Ask, and it will be given to you; search, and you will find; knock, and the door will be opened to you. •For the one who asks always receives; the one who searches always finds; the one who knocks will always have the door opened to him. •What father among you would hand his son a stone when he

d. Lit. 'son of peace', a Hebraism for those who deserve 'peace', i.e. all the spiritual and temporal blessings the word implies. Cf. Jn 14:27+.

e. Add. 'and turning to his disciples he said'.

f. Paul emphasises the fact that the 'mystery' was long kept hidden; Rm 16:25+. See also 1 P 1:11-12.

g. For having put the question.

h. An alien and a heretic, Jn 8:48; cf. Lk 9:53+, from whom one might expect hostility, as opposed to those of Israel who should have been most sensitive to the demands of charity.

i. These two sisters reappear, with the same individual characteristics, in the story of the raising of Lazarus, Jn 11:1-44.

j. Var. 'but only one thing is needed', 'but only a few things are needed', readings which make free with the text and deform the sense. In his remark Jesus rises from the material plane ('few things are needed', i.e. for the meal) to the 'one thing necessary', which is to listen to the word of God.

11 a. Matthew's text has seven petitions, Luke's five. There were therefore two traditions of the Lord's prayer. Matthew's form seems the more ancient.

b. Var. (borrowed, perhaps, from a baptismal liturgy) 'may your Holy Spirit come down on us and cleanse us'.

c. 'Debts' in Mt, here correctly interpreted by Lk who, however, does not suppress this juridical aspect (cf. his following line 'each one who is in debt to us').

When your eye is sound, your whole body too is filled with light; but when it is diseased your body too will be all darkness. •See to it then that the light inside you is not darkness. •If, therefore, your whole body is filled with light, and no trace of darkness, it will be light entirely, as when the lamp shines on you with its rays.ⁱ

Mt 6:22-23

The Pharisees and the lawyers attacked

- 37 He had just finished speaking when a Pharisee invited him to dine at his 7:36; 14:1
38 house. He went in and sat down at the table. •The Pharisee saw this and was Mt 15:2
39 surprised that he had not first washed before the meal. •But the Lord said to him,^j Mk 7:2,5
‘Oh, you Pharisees! You clean the outside of cup and plate, while inside yourselves ||Mt 23:25-26
40 you are filled with extortion and wickedness. •Fools! Did not he who made the 12:33+
41 outside make the inside too? •Instead, give alms from what you have^k and then ||Mt 23:23
42 indeed everything will be clean for you. •But alas for you Pharisees! You who pay your tithe of mint and rue and all sorts of garden herbs and overlook justice and 43 undone. •Alas for you Pharisees who like taking the seats of honour in the =20:46
44 synagogues and being greeted obsequiously in the market squares! •Alas for ||Mt 23:6-7
you, because you are like the unmarked tombs that men walk on without Mk 12:38-39
knowing it!’^l ||Mt 23:27
- 45 A lawyer then spoke up. ‘Master,’ he said ‘when you speak like this you
46 insult us too.’ •‘Alas for you lawyers also,’ he replied ‘because you load on men ||Mt 23:4
burdens that are unendurable, burdens that you yourselves do not move a finger to lift.
- 47 ‘Alas for you who build the tombs of the prophets, the men your ancestors ||Mt 23:29-31
48 killed! •In this way you both witness what your ancestors did and approve it; they did the killing, you do the building.’^m
- 49 ‘And that is why the Wisdom of Godⁿ said, “I will send them prophets and ||Mt 23:34-36
50 apostles; some they will slaughter and persecute, •so that this generation will have to answer for every prophet’s blood that has been shed since the foundation 51 of the world, •from the blood of Abel to the blood of Zechariah, who was murdered between the altar and the sanctuary”. Yes, I tell you, this generation will have to answer for it all.
- 52 ‘Alas for you lawyers who have taken away the key of knowledge! You have ||Mt 23:13 not gone in yourselves, and have prevented others going in who wanted to.’
- 53 When he left the house, the scribes and the Pharisees began a furious attack 6:11; 19:47;

d. Instead of the ‘good things’ of Mt 7:11. The Holy Spirit is the best of all ‘good things’.

e. Var. ‘Beelzebul’ and ‘Beelzebub’.

f. On this phrase, cf. Ex 8:15 and Ps 8:3. This passage and its parallel, Mt 12:28, have combined to provide the title ‘finger of God’s right hand’ for the Holy Spirit.

g. I.e. a miracle in evidence and vindication of Christ’s authority, cf. Jn 2:11+; Lk 1:18+. See Mt 8:3+.

h. Jonah showed the Ninevites the way to God; now Jesus points the way, but his hearers, less generous than the Ninevites, have refused to take it. Mt 12:40 offers a different interpretation.

i. The textual tradition of vv. 35-36 is confused, and the text is probably corrupt. But the general meaning is clear: Jesus addresses his message to all, and if the mind is ‘healthy’, i.e. unclouded by selfish prejudice, cf. Jn 3:19-21, it can be understood by all.

j. Lk depends here on the source he shares with Mt; in 20:45-47 he returns to the same theme, this time depending on Mk. Mt has combined both sources in one discourse (ch. 23). Cf. Lk 10:2+; 17:22+.

k. Interpretation difficult. Others translate ‘what is within’.

l. Thus contracting legal impurity, Nb 19:16.

m. Irony. By building the tombs of the prophets they hoped to make amends for their ancestors’ sins—yet they have exactly the same mentality as these ancestors.

n. I.e. the divine intention as interpreted by Jesus.

o. The attitude of Christ’s enemies continued to harden; Lk traces the process in more detail than Mk; Lk 6:11; 11:53-54; 19:48; 20:19-20; 22:2.

12 a. Or else ‘began to say to his disciples: First of all, be on your guard...’

On being ready for the Master's return

- 35 'See that you are dressed for action and have your lamps lit. •Be like men 36 waiting for their master to return from the wedding feast, ready to open the

39 or in the third, but happy those servants if he finds them ready. •You may be quite sure of this, that if the householder had known at what hour the burglar would come, he would not have let anyone break through the wall of his house.
40 You too must stand ready, because the Son of Man is coming at an hour you do not expect.'
- 41 Peter said, 'Lord, do you mean this parable for us, or for everyone?' •The 42 Lord replied, 'What sort of steward,' then, is faithful and wise enough for the master to place him over his household to give them their allowance of food at 43 the proper time? •Happy that servant if his master's arrival finds him at this 44 employment. •I tell you truly, he will place him over everything he owns. •But 45 as for the servant who says to himself, "My master is taking his time coming", and sets about beating the menservants and the maids, and eating and drinking 46 and getting drunk, •his master will come on a day he does not expect and at an hour he does not know. The master will cut him off and send him to the same fate as the unfaithful.
- 47 'The servant who knows what his master wants, but has not even started to 48 carry out those wishes, will receive very many strokes of the lash. •The one who did not know, but deserves to be beaten for what he has done, will receive fewer strokes. When a man has had a great deal given him, a great deal will be demanded of him; when a man has had a great deal given him on trust, even more will be expected of him.

Examples inviting repentance

13 It was just about this time that some people arrived and told him about 1 the Galileans whose blood Pilate had mingled with that of their sacrifices.^a

Jn 9:3 At this he said to them, 'Do you suppose these Galileans who suffered like that 2 were greater sinners than any other Galileans? •They were not, I tell you. No; 3 but unless you repent you will all perish as they did. •Or those eighteen on whom 4 the tower at Siloam fell and killed them? Do you suppose that they were more 5 guilty than all the other people living in Jerusalem? •They were not, I tell you. 5 No; but unless you repent you will all perish as they did.'

Parable of the barren fig tree^b

Jr 8:13 He told this parable: 'A man had a fig tree planted in his vineyard, and he 6 Mt 21:19-20 came looking for fruit on it but found none. •He said to the man who looked 7 after the vineyard, "Look here, for three years^c now I have been coming to look for fruit on this fig tree and finding none. Cut it down: why should it be taking up the ground?" •"Sir," the man replied "leave it one more year and give me 8 time to dig round it and manure it: •it may bear fruit next year; if not, then 9 you can cut it down."'

6:6-11; 14: Healing of the crippled woman on a sabbath 1-6

Jn 9:14+ One sabbath day he was teaching in one of the synagogues, •and a woman 10 Mt 8:29+ was there who for eighteen years had been possessed by a spirit that left her enfeebled; she was bent double and quite unable to stand upright.^d •When Jesus 12 saw her he called her over and said, 'Woman, you are rid of your infirmity' 13 and he laid his hands on her. And at once she straightened up, and she glorified 13 God.

Ex 20:8-10 But the synagogue official was indignant because Jesus had healed on the 14 sabbath,^e and he addressed the people present. 'There are six days' he said 'when work is to be done. Come and be healed on one of those days and not on the 15 sabbath.' •But the Lord answered him. 'Hypocrites!' he said 'Is there one of 15 you who does not untie his ox or his donkey from the manger on the sabbath 16 and take it out for watering? •And this woman, a daughter of Abraham whom 16 Satan has held bound these eighteen years—was it not right to untie her bonds 17 on the sabbath day?' •When he said this, all his adversaries were covered with 17 confusion, and all the people were overjoyed at all the wonders he worked.

||Mt 13:31-32 Parable of the mustard seed 4:30-32

Ezk 17:23 He went on to say, 'What is the kingdom of God like? What shall I compare 18 Dn 4:9,18 it with? •It is like a mustard seed which a man took and threw into his garden: 19 it grew and became a tree, and the birds of the air sheltered in its branches.'

||Mt 13:13 Parable of the yeast

Another thing he said, 'What shall I compare the kingdom of God with? 20 It is like the yeast a woman took and mixed in with three measures of flour till 21 it was leavened all through.'

The narrow door; rejection of the Jews, call of the gentiles

Healing of a dropsical man on the sabbath

- 1 14 Now on a sabbath day he had gone for a meal to the house of one of the 2 leading Pharisees; and they watched him closely. •There in front of him was

On choosing places at table are a guest, make your way to the lowest place and sit there, so that, when your 13 a. There is no other evidence for this incident or for that mentioned in v. 4. The meaning of both is clear: sin is not the immediate cause of this or that calamity (cf. Jn 9:3), but such disasters as these are providential invitations to repentance.

b. The episode of the withered fig tree in Mt 21: 18-22p shows Jesus in a hard light; Lk prefers to substitute this parable of his patience.

i. Meaning apparently 'My work will soon be over, but not yet. I have not finished my work of exorcising and healing; this I shall contrive to do on my way to Jerusalem where my destiny lies', cf. 2:38 +. Similarly, in Jn 7:30; 8:20 (cf. 8:59; 10:39; 11:54) the enemies of Jesus have no power over him so long as 'his hour has not yet come'.

host comes, he may say, "My friend, move up higher". In that way, everyone with you at the table will see you honoured. •For everyone who exalts himself will be humbled, and the man who humbles himself will be exalted.' 11

On choosing guests to be invited

Then he said to his host, 'When you give a lunch or a dinner, do not ask your friends, brothers, relations or rich neighbours, for fear they repay your courtesy by inviting you in return.^b •No; when you have a party, invite the poor, the crippled, the lame, the blind; •that they cannot pay you back means that you are fortunate, because repayment will be made to you when the virtuous rise again.' 12 13 14

The invited guests who made excuses

On hearing this, one of those gathered round the table said to him, 'Happy the man who will be at the feast in the kingdom of God!' •But he said to him, 'There was a man who gave a great banquet, and he invited a large number of people. •When the time for the banquet came, he sent his servant to say to those who had been invited, "Come along: everything is ready now". •But all alike started to make excuses. The first said, "I have bought a piece of land and must go and see it. Please accept my apologies." •Another said, "I have bought five yoke of oxen and am on my way to try them out. Please accept my apologies." Yet another said, "I have just got married and so am unable to come". The servant returned and reported this to his master. Then the householder, in a rage, said to his servant, "Go out quickly into the streets and alleys of the town and bring in here the poor, the crippled, the blind and the lame". •"Sir," said the servant "your orders have been carried out and there is still room." Then the master said to his servant, "Go to the open roads and the hedgerows and force people to come in to make sure my house is full; •because, I tell you, that not one of those who were invited shall have a taste of my banquet". ' 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24

Renouncing all that one holds dear

Great crowds accompanied him on his way and he turned and spoke to them. •'If any man comes to me without hating^c his father, mother, wife,^d children, brothers, sisters, yes and his own life too, he cannot be my disciple. •Anyone who does not carry his cross and come after me cannot be my disciple. 25 26 27

Renouncing possessions

'And indeed, which of you here, intending to build a tower, would not first sit down and work out the cost to see if he had enough to complete it? •Otherwise, if he laid the foundation and then found himself unable to finish the work, the onlookers would all start making fun of him and saying, •"Here is a man who started to build and was unable to finish". •Or again, what king marching to war against another king would not first sit down and consider whether with ten thousand men he could stand up to the other who advanced against him with twenty thousand? •If not, then while the other king was still a long way off, he would send envoys to sue for peace. •So in the same way, none of you can be my disciple unless he gives up all his possessions.' 28 29 30 31 32 33

On loss of enthusiasm in a disciple

'Salt is a useful thing. But if the salt itself loses its taste, how can it be seasoned again? •It is good for neither soil nor manure heap. People throw it out. Listen, anyone who has ears to hear!'

The three parables of God's mercy

15 The tax collectors and the sinners, meanwhile, were all seeking his company to hear what he had to say, •and the Pharisees and the scribes complained. 1 2

- 3 'This man' they said 'welcomes sinners and eats with them.' •So he spoke this parable to them: Mt 9:10-13

The lost drachma

The lost son (the 'prodigal') and the dutiful son

- 11 He also said, 'A man had two sons. •The younger said to his father, "Father, let me have the share of the estate that would come to me". Bring out the best robe and put it on him; put a ring on his finger and sandals on his feet. •Bring the calf we have been fattening, and kill it; we are going to have a feast, a celebration, •because this son of mine was dead and has come back to life; he was lost and is found." The crafty steward

16^a He also said to his disciples, “There was a rich man and he had a steward 1 who was denounced to him for being wasteful with his property. •He called 2 for the man and said, “What is this I hear about you? Draw me up an account of your stewardship because you are not to be my steward any longer.” •Then the 3 steward said to himself, “Now that my master is taking the stewardship from me, what am I to do? Dig? I am not strong enough. Go begging? I should be too 4 ashamed. •Ah, I know what I will do to make sure that when I am dismissed 4 from office there will be some to welcome me into their homes.”

“Then he called his master’s debtors one by one. To the first he said, “How 5 much do you owe my master?” •“One hundred measures of oil” was the reply. 6 The steward said, “Here, take your bond; sit down straight away and write fifty”. To another he said, “And you, sir, how much do you owe?” “One hundred 7 measures of wheat” was the reply. The steward said, “Here, take your bond and write eighty”.

Jn 8:12+ “The master praised the dishonest steward for his astuteness.^b For the children 8 of this world are more astute in dealing with their own kind than are the children of light.’

The right use of money

12:33+
Si 29:12
“And so I tell you this: use money, tainted as it is,^c to win you friends, and 9 thus make sure that when it fails you, they will welcome you into the tents of 10 eternity. •The man who can be trusted in little things can be trusted in great; 10 the man who is dishonest in little things will be dishonest in great. •If then you 11 cannot be trusted with money, that tainted thing, who will trust you with genuine riches? •And if you cannot be trusted with what is not yours,^d who will give 12 you what is your very own?^e

||Mt 6:24 “No servant can be the slave of two masters: he will either hate the first and 13 love the second, or treat the first with respect and the second with scorn. You cannot be the slave both of God and of money.’

||Mt 11:12-13 The kingdom stormed

The rich man and Lazarus^f

‘There was a rich man who used to dress in purple and fine linen and feast 19

20 magnificently every day. •And at his gate there lay a poor man called Lazarus, 21 covered with sores, •who longed to fill himself with the scraps that fell from 22 the rich man's table.^a Dogs even came and licked his sores. •Now the poor man died and was carried away by the angels to the bosom of Abraham.^b The rich man also died and was buried.

23 'In his torment in Hades' he looked up and saw Abraham a long way off 24 with Lazarus in his bosom. •So he cried out, "Father Abraham, pity me and send Lazarus to dip the tip of his finger in water and cool my tongue, for I am 25 in agony in these flames". •"My son," Abraham replied "remember that during your life good things came your way, just as bad things came the way of Lazarus. 6:24-25 26 Now he is being comforted here while you are in agony. •But that is not all:
between us and you a great gulf^c has been fixed, to stop anyone, if he wanted to, crossing from our side to yours, and to stop any crossing from your side to ours."

27 'The rich man replied, "Father, I beg you then to send Lazarus to my father's 28 house, •since I have five brothers, to give them warning so that they do not

 11 one a Pharisee, the other a tax collector. The Pharisee stood there and said this prayer to himself, "I thank you, God, that I am not grasping, unjust, adulterous like the rest of mankind, and particularly that I am not like this tax collector here.
 12 I fast twice a week; I pay tithes on all I get." The tax collector stood some 13 distance away, not daring even to raise his eyes to heaven; but he beat his breast 14 and said, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner". This man, I tell you, went home again at rights with God; the other did not. For everyone who exalts himself will be humbled, but the man who humbles himself will be exalted.'

While the people were listening to this he went on to tell a parable, because 11
he was near Jerusalem and they imagined that the kingdom of God was going 12 to show itself then and there. •Accordingly he said, 'A man of noble birth went 12 to a distant country to be appointed king and afterwards return.^d •He summoned 13 ten of his servants and gave them ten pounds. "Do business with these" he told 13 them "until I get back." •But his compatriots detested him and sent a delegation 14 to follow him with this message, "We do not want this man to be our king".

||16:10

'Now on his return, having received his appointment as king, he sent for those 15 servants to whom he had given the money, to find out what profit each had made. 15
The first came in and said, "Sir, your one pound has brought in ten". •"Well done, 16 my good servant!" he replied "Since you have proved yourself faithful in a very 17 small thing, you shall have the government of ten cities." •Then came the second 18 and said, "Sir, your one pound has made five". •To this one also he said, "And 19 you shall be in charge of five cities". •Next came the other and said, "Sir, here 20 is your pound. I put it away safely in a piece of linen •because I was afraid of you; 21 for you are an exacting man: you pick up what you have not put down and reap 22 what you have not sown." •"You wicked servant!" he said "Out of your own 22 mouth I condemn you. So you knew I was an exacting man, picking up what 23
I have not put down and reaping what I have not sown? •Then why did you not put my money in the bank? On my return I could have drawn it out with 24 interest." •And he said to those standing by, "Take the pound from him and 25 give it to the man who has ten pounds". •And they said to him, "But, sir, he has 26 ten pounds..." •"I tell you, to everyone who has will be given more; but

V. THE JERUSALEM MINISTRY

The Messiah enters Jerusalem

||Mt 21:1-11
 ||Mk 11:1-11
 ||Jn 12:12-16

28 When he had said this he went on ahead, going up to Jerusalem. •Now when 29 he was near Bethphage and Bethany, close by the Mount of Olives as it is called, 30 he sent two of the disciples, telling them, •"Go off to the village opposite, and as you enter it you will find a tethered colt that no one has yet ridden. Untie it 31 and bring it here. •If anyone asks you, "Why are you untying it?" you are to say 32 this, "The Master needs it". •The messengers went off and found everything just 33 as he had told them. •As they were untying the colt, its owner said, 'Why are 34 you untying that colt?' •and they answered, 'The Master needs it'.
 35 So they took the colt to Jesus, and throwing their garments over its back they 36 helped Jesus on to it. •As he moved off, people spread their cloaks in the road, 37 and now, as he was approaching the downward slope of the Mount of Olives, the whole group of disciples joyfully began to praise God at the top of their 38 voices for all the miracles they had seen. •They cried out:

d. Lk often remarks that the Passion was foretold by the prophets: Lk 24:25,27,44; Ac 2:23+; 3:18,24+; 8:32-35; 13:27; 26:22f.

19 a. Fourfold restitution was imposed by the Jewish law (Ex 21:37) for one case only; Roman law demanded it of all convicted thieves. Zacchaeus goes further: he acknowledges the obligation in the case of any injustice he may have been responsible for.

b. Notwithstanding his despised profession. No social rank excludes 'salvation', cf. 3:12-14. All the Jewish privileges follow from 'sonship of Abraham', cf. 3:8; Rm 4:11f; Ga 3:7f.

c. There are notable differences between the parable of the pounds and that of the talents, Mt 25:14-30. Moreover, it seems that in Lk we must distinguish two parables which have been fused into one: that of the pounds, vv. 12-13, 15-26, and that of the royal claimant, vv. 12,14,17,19,27.

d. Probably alluding to the journey of Archelaus to Rome in 4 B.C. to have the will of Herod the Great confirmed in his favour. A deputation of Jews followed him there to thwart the attempt, cf. v. 14.

e. There seems to be a lacuna here.

f. The peace of the messianic age, cf. Is 11:6+; Ho 2:20+.

g. This whole prophecy is made up of O.T. references (especially noticeable in the Greek text for v. 43, cf. Is 29:3; 37:33; Jr 52:4-5; Ezk 4:1-3; 21:27(22); for v. 44, cf. Ho 10:14; 14:1; Na 3:10; Ps 137:9) and suggests the destruction of Jerusalem in 587 B.C. as much as, and more than, that of 70 A.D. of whose distinctive features it says nothing. It cannot, therefore, be concluded from this text that the destruction of 70 A.D. had already taken place.

The expulsion of the dealers from the Temple

Then he went into the Temple and began driving out those who were selling. 45
 'According to scripture,' he said 'my house will be a house of prayer. But you 46 have turned it into a robbers' den.'

Jesus teaches in the Temple

He taught in the Temple every day. The chief priests and the scribes, with 47
 the support of the leading citizens, tried to do away with him, •but they did not 48 see how they could carry this out because the people as a whole hung on his words.

The Jews question the authority of Jesus

20 ^aNow one day while he was teaching the people in the Temple and 1 proclaiming the Good News, the chief priests and the scribes came up, 2 together with the elders, •and spoke to him. 'Tell us' they said 'what authority 3 have you for acting like this? Or who is it that gave you this authority?' •And 4
 I^a replied Jesus 'will ask you a question. Tell me: •John's baptism: did it come 5 from heaven, or from man?' •And they argued it out this way among themselves, 6
 'If we say from heaven, he will say, "Why did you refuse to believe him?"; •and 7
 if we say from man, the people will all stone us, for they are convinced that John 8 was a prophet'. •So their reply was that they did not know where it came from. 9
 And Jesus said to them, 'Nor will I tell you my authority for acting like this'. 10

Parable of the wicked husbandmen

And he went on to tell the people this parable: 'A man planted a vineyard 9 and leased it to tenants, and went abroad for a long while. •When the time 10 came, he sent a servant to the tenants to get his share of the produce of the 11 vineyard from them. But the tenants thrashed him, and sent him away 12 empty-handed. •But he persevered and sent a second servant; they thrashed 13 him too and treated him shamefully and sent him away empty-handed. •He still 14 persevered and sent a third; they wounded this one also, and threw him out. 15 Then the owner of the vineyard said, "What am I to do? I will send them my 16 dear son. Perhaps they will respect him." •But when the tenants saw him 17 they put their heads together. "This is the heir," they said "let us kill him so that 18 the inheritance will be ours." •So they threw him out of the vineyard and killed 19
 him. 20

'Now what will the owner of the vineyard do to them? •He will come and 21 make an end of these tenants and give the vineyard to others.' Hearing this they 22 said, 'God forbid!' •But he looked hard at them and said, 'Then what does this 23 text in the scriptures mean: 24

*It was the stone rejected by the builders
 that became the keystone?*

Anyone who falls on that stone will be dashed to pieces; anyone it falls on will 25 be crushed.'

But for their fear of the people, the scribes and the chief priests would have 26 liked to lay hands on him that very moment, because they realised that this 27 parable was aimed at them. 28

On tribute to Caesar

So they waited their opportunity and sent agents to pose as men devoted to 29
 the Law, and to fasten on something he might say and so enable them to hand 30 him over to the jurisdiction and authority of the governor. •They put to him 31 this question, 'Master, we know that you say and teach what is right; you favour 32 no one, but teach the way of God in all honesty. •Is it permissible for us to pay 33 taxes to Caesar or not?' •But he was aware of their cunning and said, •'Show 34 me a denarius. Whose head and name are on it?' 'Caesar's' they said. •'Well 35

then,' he said to them 'give back to Caesar what belongs to Caesar—and to God what belongs to God.'

26 As a result, they were unable to find fault with anything he had to say in public; his answer took them by surprise and they were silenced.

The resurrection of the dead

||Mt 22:23-33
||Mk 12:18-27

27 Some Sadducees—those who say that there is no resurrection—approached 28 him and they put this question to him, 'Master, we have it from Moses in writing, that if a man's married brother dies childless, the man must marry the 29 widow to raise up children for his brother. •Well then, there were seven brothers.
30 The first, having married a wife, died childless. •The second •and then the third 31 married the widow. And the same with all seven, they died leaving no children.
32 Finally the woman herself died. •Now, at the resurrection, to which of them 33 will she be wife since she had been married to all seven?'

Dt 25:5+

34 Jesus replied, 'The children of this world^b take wives and husbands, •but 35 those who are judged worthy of a place in the other world and in the resurrection 36 from the dead^c do not marry •because they can no longer die,^d for they are the same as the angels, and being children of the resurrection^e they are sons of 37 God. •And Moses himself implies that the dead rise again, in the passage about the bush where he calls the Lord the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac 38 and the God of Jacob. •Now he is God, not of the dead, but of the living; for to him all men are in fact alive.'

46 scribes who like to walk about in long robes and love to be greeted obsequiously in the market squares, to take the front seats in the synagogues and the places 47 of honour at banquets, •who swallow the property of widows, while making

Discourse on the destruction of Jerusalem:^a Introduction

- 7 The day of Unleavened Bread came round, the day on which the passover ||Mt 26:17-19
8 had to be sacrificed, 'and he sent Peter and John, saying, 'Go and make the ||Mk 14:12-16
9 preparations for us to eat the passover'. 'Where do you want us to prepare it?' 8:51+
10 they asked. 'Listen,' he said 'as you go into the city you will meet a man 11 carrying a pitcher of water. Follow him into the house he enters 'and tell the 12 owner of the house, "The Master has this to say to you: Where is the dining room 13 in which I can eat the passover with my disciples?" 'The man will show you a large upper room furnished with couches. Make the preparations there.' 'They set off and found everything as he had told them, and prepared the Passover.

The supper

- 14 When the hour came he took his place at table, and the apostles with him.
15 And he said to them,^d 'I have longed to eat this passover with you before I suffer; 12:50+

^a 21 a. In 17:22-37, Lk, following one of his sources, speaks of the coming of Jesus in glory at the end of time. Here he follows Mk where two perspectives merge: that of the final coming and that of the destruction of Jerusalem; cf. Mt 24:1+.

b. Lk, in this place, assigns to Jesus the role reserved by Mt 10:20; Mk 13:11; Lk 12:12 to the Spirit of the Father (Mt), the Holy Spirit (Mk and Lk), Ac 6:10. Cf. Jn 16:13-15.

c. Lk, explaining the obscure 'disastrous abomination', which his source takes from Dn 9:27, foretells the siege. As in 19:43-44, his terms are biblical and do not necessarily suggest a description after the event.

d. Possibly alluding to Dn 9:27.

e. I.e. the period during which the pagans will take the place of the unfaithful Jewish nation; according to Paul, Rm 11:11-32, this period will end with the conversion of all Israel. An age of indefinite duration is, therefore, to elapse between Jerusalem's destruction and the end of time.

f. Or 'redemption', a Pauline term, cf. Rm 3:24+.

g. The kingdom has already come, 17:21, but this refers to the period of its triumphant progress which begins with the destruction of Jerusalem. Cf. 9:27p.

h. Var. 'for it will come down on you like a snare'.

i. Lit. 'and to stand erect'.

j. The literary relationship with Jn 8:1-2 is unmistakable. The adulterous woman passage of Jn 7:53-8:11, for the Lucan authorship of which there are many good arguments, would fit into this context admirably. 22 a. Throughout the Passion narrative, Lk shows himself considerably less dependent on Mk than hitherto; on the other hand, there are many points of contact with Jn.

b. Lk does not record the anointing at Bethany; he has already described a similar incident in 7:36-50.

c. Officers of the Temple police. All of these were Jews, chosen from among the Levites.

d. In Lk, Christ's discourses at the supper play a more important part than in Mt and Mk, preparing us for those of Jn 13:31-17:26.

Mt 8:11+ because, I tell you, I shall not eat it again until it is fulfilled^e in the kingdom of 16
God'.

Then, taking a cup,^f he gave thanks and said, 'Take this and share it among 17 you, •because from now on, I tell you, I shall not drink wine until the king- 18 dom of God comes'.

The institution of the Eucharist^g

Then he took some bread, and when he had given thanks, broke it and gave it 19 to them, saying, 'This is my body which will be given for you; do this as a memorial of me'. •He did the same with the cup after supper, and said, 'This cup is the new 20 covenant in my blood which will be poured out for you'.^h

The treachery of Judas foretold

'And yet, here with me on the table is the hand of the man who betrays me. 21
The Son of Man does indeed go to his fate even as it has been decreed, but alas for 22 that man by whom he is betrayed!' •And they began to ask one another which of 23 them it could be who was to do this thing.

Who is the greatest?

A dispute arose also between them about which should be reckoned the 24 greatest, •but he said to them, 'Among pagans it is the kings who lord it over them, 25 and those who have authority over them are given the title Benefactor. •This must 26 not happen with you. No; the greatest among you must behave as if he were the youngest, the leader as if he were the one who serves. •For who is the greater: 27 the one at table or the one who serves? The one at table, surely? Yet here am I among you as one who serves!

The reward promised to the apostles

'You are the men who have stood by me faithfully in my trials; •and now 28
I confer a kingdom on you, just as my Father conferred one on me: •you will 29 eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and you will sit on thrones to judge the 30 twelve tribes of Israel.

Peter's denial and repentance foretold

'Simon, Simon! Satan, you must know, has got his wish to sift you all like 31
wheat; •but I have prayed for you, Simon, that your faith may not fail, and once 32 you have recovered, you in your turn must strengthen your brothers.' •'Lord,' 33
he answered 'I would be ready to go to prison with you, and to death.' •Jesus 34 replied, 'I tell you, Peter, by the time the cock crows today you will have denied three times that you know me'.

A time of crisis

He said to them, 'When I sent you out without purse or haversack or sandals, 35 were you short of anything? •'No' they said. He said to them, 'But now if you have 36 a purse, take it; if you have a haversack, do the same; if you have no sword, sell 37 your cloak and buy one,ⁱ •because I tell you these words of scripture have to be fulfilled in me: He let himself be taken for a criminal. Yes, what scripture says about me is even now reaching its fulfilment.' •'Lord,' they said 'there are two 38 swords here now.' He said to them, 'That is enough!'^k

The Mount of Olives

He then left to make his way as usual to the Mount of Olives, with the 39 disciples following. •When they reached the place he said to them, 'Pray not to be 40 put to the test'.

Then he withdrew from them, about a stone's throw away, and knelt down 41 and prayed. •'Father,' he said 'if you are willing, take this cup away from me. 42

43 Nevertheless, let your will be done, not mine.' •Then an angel appeared to him, coming from heaven to give him strength. •In his anguish he prayed even more earnestly, and his sweat fell to the ground like great drops of blood.¹ Ac 21:14▲

45 When he rose from prayer he went to the disciples and found them sleeping for sheer grief. •'Why are you asleep?' he said to them. 'Get up and pray not to be put to the test.'

The arrest

47 He was still speaking when a number of men appeared, and at the head of them the man called Judas, one of the Twelve, who went up to Jesus to kiss him. ||Mt 26:47-56
||Mk 14: 43-50
||Jn 18:3-11

48 Jesus said, 'Judas, are you betraying the Son of Man with a kiss?' •His followers, Ac 1:16

49 seeing what was happening, said, 'Lord, shall we use our swords?' •And one of them struck out at the high priest's servant, and cut off his right ear. •But at this Jesus spoke. 'Leave off!' he said 'That will do!' And touching the man's ear he healed him.

52 Then Jesus spoke to the chief priests and captains of the Temple guard and elders who had come for him. 'Am I a brigand' he said 'that you had to set out with swords and clubs? •When I was among you in the Temple day after day you never moved to lay hands on me. But this is your hour; this is the reign of darkness.'

Peter's denials

54 They seized him then^m and led him away, and they took him to the high priest's house. Peter followed at a distance. •They had lit a fire in the middle of the courtyard and Peter sat down among them, •and as he was sitting there by the blaze a servant-girl saw him, peered at him, and said, 'This person was with him too'. •But he denied it. 'Woman,' he said 'I do not know him.' •Shortly afterwards someone else saw him and said, 'You are another of them'. But Peter replied, 'I am not, my friend'.ⁿ •About an hour later another man insisted, saying, 'This fellow was certainly with him. Why, he is a Galilean.' •'My friend,' said Peter 'I do not know what you are talking about.' At that instant, ||Mt 26:57, 69-75
||Mk 14: 66-72
||Jn 18:15-18, 25-27

61 while he was still speaking, the cock crew, •and the Lord turned and looked straight at Peter, and Peter remembered what the Lord had said to him, 'Before 22:34

62 the cock crows today, you will have disowned me three times'. •And he went outside and wept bitterly.

Jesus mocked by the guards

63 Meanwhile the men who guarded Jesus were mocking and beating him. ||Mt 26:67-68
||Mk 14:65

64 They blindfolded him and questioned him. 'Play the prophet' they said. 'Who hit you then?' •And they continued heaping insults on him.

Jesus before the Sanhedrin^o

66 When day broke there was a meeting of the elders of the people,^p attended ||Mt 26:57-66; 27:2
||Mk 14:53-64; 15:1

22 e. The first stage of fulfilment is the Eucharist itself, the centre of spiritual life in the kingdom founded by Jesus; the final stage will be at the end of time when the Passover is to be fulfilled perfectly and in a fashion no longer veiled.

f. Lk distinguishes the Passover and the cup of vv. 15-18 from the bread and the cup of vv. 19-20 in order to draw a parallel between the ancient rite of the Jewish Passover and the new rite of the Christian Eucharist. Some ancient authorities, failing to understand this theological device, and disturbed to find two cups mentioned, quite mistakenly omitted v. 20, or even v. 20 with the second part of v. 19 (i.e. 'which will be given... of me').

g. Note the affinity between Luke's text and Paul's.

h. Or alternatively 'which has to be given' and 'which has to be poured out'.

i. Add. 'And the Lord said'.

j. The purse to buy, the sword to procure by force, the necessities of life. All this is symbolic of a mission in a hostile world.

k. The apostles have taken the words of Jesus too literally and he closes the conversation abruptly.

l. Om. vv. 43-44.

m. In Mt and Mk, Jesus is seized immediately after Judas' greeting; the sword episode follows, and finally the discourse by Jesus. Lk makes the arrest follow the discourse, thus emphasising the control Jesus has over what takes place. Cf., for the same emphasis, Jn 10:18+; 18:4-6.

n. Lit. 'man'.

o. Whereas Mt and Mk have two trials, Lk has only one, and that in the morning, probably held in the 'Tribunal', a building adjacent to the Temple. Cf. Mt 26:57+.

p. 'elders' here means the whole Sanhedrin, not merely one of its three component bodies (the elders);

Jesus before Pilate^a

They began their accusation by saying, 'We found this man inciting our 2 20:20-26 people to revolt, opposing payment of the tribute to Caesar, and claiming to be Ac 17:7; 24:5 Christ, a king'. •Pilate put to him this question, 'Are you the king of the Jews?' 3
 'It is you who say it' he replied. •Pilate then said to the chief priests and the crowd, 4
 'I find no case against this man'. •But they persisted, 'He is inflaming the people 5 4:44+ with his teaching all over Judaea; it has come all the way from Galilee, where he Ac 3:14 started, down to here'. •When Pilate heard this, he asked if the man were a 6
 Galilean; •and finding that he came under Herod's jurisdiction he passed him 7 over to Herod who was also in Jerusalem at that time.

Jesus before Herod^b

9-9 Herod was delighted to see Jesus; he had heard about him and had 8
 Mt 14:1-2 been wanting for a long time to set eyes on him; moreover, he was hoping to see some miracle worked by him. •So he questioned him at some length; but without 9
 Ac 25:7 getting any reply. •Meanwhile the chief priests and the scribes were there, violently 10 pressing their accusations. •Then Herod, together with his guards, treated him 11 with contempt and made fun of him; he put a rich cloak^c on him and sent him 12
 Ac 4:27+ back to Pilate. •And though Herod and Pilate had been enemies before, they 12 were reconciled that same day.

Jesus before Pilate again

Pilate then summoned the chief priests and the leading men and the people. 13
 'You brought this man before me' he said 'as a political agitator. Now I have 14 gone into the matter myself in your presence and found no case against the man 15 in respect of all the charges you bring against him. •Nor has Herod either, since 16 he has sent him back to us. As you can see, the man has done nothing that 17
 Ac 21:36 deserves death, •so I shall have him flogged and then let him go.'^d •But as one 18 Ac 3:14 man they howled, 'Away with him! Give us Barabbas!' •(This man had been 19 thrown into prison for causing a riot in the city and for murder.)

Pilate was anxious to set Jesus free and addressed them again, •but they 20 shouted back, 'Crucify him! Crucify him!' •And for the third time^e he spoke 22
 Jn 18:38 to them, 'Why? What harm has this man done? I have found no case against 21
 Ac 3:13 him that deserves death, so I shall have him punished and then let him go.'^f •But 23 they kept on shouting at the top of their voices, demanding that he should be 24 crucified. And their shouts were growing louder.

Ac 3:15 Pilate then gave his verdict: their demand was to be granted. •He released 24
 the man they asked for, who had been imprisoned for rioting and murder, and 25 handed Jesus over to them to deal with as they pleased.

The way to Calvary

As they were leading him away they seized on a man, Simon from Cyrene, 26 who was coming in from the country, and made him shoulder the cross and 27 carry it behind Jesus. •Large numbers of people followed him, and of women 28 too,^g who mourned and lamented for him. •But Jesus turned to them and said, 29
 'Daughters of Jerusalem, do not weep for me; weep rather for yourselves and for your children. •For the days will surely come when people will say, "Happy are those who are barren, the wombs that have never borne, the breasts that have never suckled!" •Then they will begin to say to the mountains, "Fall on us!"; to the hills, "Cover us!" •For if men use the green wood like this, what will happen when it is dry?"^h •Now with him they were also leading out two other criminals to be executed.

e. Lk, like Jn, emphasises Pilate's wish to let Jesus go free, and mentions the procurator's declaration of Christ's innocence three times, cf. Jn 18:38; 19:4,6.

f. Cf. v. 16. Lk does not say what the punishment was; in Mt 27:27-31p it is scourging. Unlike Mt and Mk, but like Jn, Lk regards the punishment as a conciliatory measure designed to avert a sentence not yet pronounced.

g. The Talmud records that noblewomen of Jerusalem were accustomed to give soothing drinks to condemned criminals.

h. If green wood is burnt that is not meant for burning (allusion to Christ's condemnation), what is to happen to the dry wood (the truly guilty)?

i. A comparison with Mk and Mt shows how Lk has softened the harshness of Calvary: Luke's crowd, vv. 27,35,48, is more inquisitive than hostile, and repents in the end, v. 48; Jesus does not utter the seemingly despairing cry, 'My God, my God, why have you deserted me?'; Christ's ministry of forgiveness goes on to the last, vv. 34,39-43; he dies committing his spirit into the hands of his Father, v. 46.

Then a member of the council arrived, an upright and virtuous man named Joseph. •He had not consented to what the others had planned and carried out. He came from Arimathaea, a Jewish town, and he lived in the hope of seeing the kingdom of God. •This man went to Pilate and asked for the body of Jesus. He then took it down, wrapped it in a shroud and put him in a tomb which was hewn in stone in which no one had yet been laid. •It was Preparation Day and the sabbath was imminent.¹

Meanwhile the women who had come from Galilee with Jesus were following behind. They took note of the tomb and of the position of the body.

24 a. Lk does not intend to speak of the Galilean apparitions; he therefore modifies Mk 16:7, just as earlier he omitted Mk 14:28.

b. Om. v. 12.

c. Lit. 'sixty stadia' (furlongs); var. (with less support) 'one hundred and sixty'. The identity of the village is disputed.

d. In the apparitions described by Lk and Jn, the disciples do not at first recognise the Lord: they need a word or a sign, Lk 24:30f, 35,37,39-43; Jn 20:14 and 16,20; 21:4 and 6-7; cf. Mt 28:17. This is because the risen body, though the same body that died on the cross, is in a new condition; its outward appearance is therefore changed, Mk 16:12, and it is exempt from the usual physical laws, Jn 20:19. On the condition of glorified bodies, cf. 1 Co 15:44+.

e. Var. 'as you walk along and look sad?'

f. Var. 'the Nazarene'. Cf. Mt 2:23+.

g. Either generalising Peter's experience, v. 12, or alluding to the visit made by Peter with John and described in Jn 20:3-10.

h. In Ac (2:42+) Lk uses this as a technical term for the Eucharist; probably it means the same here.

i. Om. v. 40.

j. Writing for Greeks who scoffed at the idea of bodily resurrection, Lk underlines the physical reality of Christ's risen body, cf. v. 43.

k. The impression given is that all these events took place on the same day, the day of resurrection. See Mt 28:10+.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO SAINT JOHN

INTRODUCTION TO THE GOSPEL AND LETTERS OF SAINT JOHN

The gospel

The last verse before the Appendix to the fourth gospel (20:31) specifies the book's literary form. It is a 'gospel', just as the preaching of the earlier Church was a 'gospel'; i.e. it proclaims that Jesus is Messiah and Son of God, and its teaching, based on the 'signs' that Jesus gave, aims at bringing men to believe in the Messiah and so to attain life. The fourth gospel, therefore in spite of all the clues to its late composition, is not unrelated to the most primitive Christian 'kerygma', or message, and in fact it preserves both the structure and the chief points of this message, e.g. the Holy Spirit descends, as the Baptist testifies, to point out Jesus as Messiah, 1:31-34; Christ's 'glory' is manifested in his work and word, 1:35-12:50; his death, resurrection and subsequent apparitions are described, 13:1-20:20; the apostles are sent out with the gift of the Spirit and the power to forgive sins, 20:21-29. The book claims, moreover, to fulfil the condition that (cf. Ac 1:8+) qualifies a witness as 'apostolic': i.e. it offers an (unnamed) eyewitness for its guarantor, 'the disciple Jesus loved', who actually took part in the events of the Passion, 13:23; 19:26,35; cf. 18:15f, saw the empty tomb, 20:2f, and the risen Christ, 21:7,20-24, and was perhaps one of the first two disciples of Jesus, 1:35f.

There are some features peculiar to the fourth gospel that mark it off sharply from the Synoptics. In the first place, its author seems to have been influenced to a considerable extent by ideas current in certain sections of Judaism, ideas that are reflected in the newly discovered Essene documents of Qumran. In this school of thought, the great emphasis laid on 'knowledge' has given its vocabulary the sort of tinge to be found in later Gnostic literature: e.g. the contrasting pairs 'light-darkness', 'truth-lies', 'angel of light-angel of darkness (Beliar)' which all have a dualist flavour. At Qumran—in view of its expectation of an imminent divine Coming—a particular stress was laid both on the need for unity and on the necessity for mutual love. All these ideas which recur in the fourth gospel are characteristic of the Judaeo-Christian milieu in which it must have originated.

In the second place there is this further difference, that the fourth gospel is far more concerned than the Synoptics to bring out the significance of the events of Christ's life and of all that he did and said. The things Christ did were 'signs': their meaning, hidden at first, could be fully understood only after his glorification, 2:22; 12:16; 13:7. The things he said had a deeper meaning not perceived at the time, cf. 2:20+; it was the business of the Spirit who spoke in the name of the risen Christ, to remind the disciples of what Jesus had said, to deepen their understanding of it, and to 'lead' them 'into the whole truth', cf. 14:26+. The fourth gospel is revelation at this stage of development.

Moreover, this gospel is far more interested than the Synoptics in worship and sacraments. It relates the life of Jesus to the Jewish liturgical year, and associates his miracles with the principal feasts: the Temple is often given as the setting both for them and for Christ's discourses. Jesus asserts that he himself is the focus of a religion, restored 'in spirit and in truth', 4:24, but a religion also which is expressed in the very sacraments through which it works. The dialogue with Nicodemus includes all the essentials of a baptismal instruction, 3:1-21, and the narratives of the man born blind and of the paralytic seem to presuppose the ideas of baptism as light, 9:1-39, and new life, 5:1-14; 7:21-24. Ch. 6 by itself is a complete collection of teachings on the Eucharist, but the entire gospel is pervaded by the concept of the Christian Passover, replacing the Jewish Passover, 1:29,36; 2:13; 6:4; 19:36. Jewish purificatory rites, 2:6; 3:25, give way to a purification of the soul by the Word, 15:3, and the Spirit, 20:22f. In this way the life of Christ is seen as directly related to a living liturgical and sacramental Christianity.

The fourth gospel has a complex literary form: it is akin to the earliest Christian preaching, and yet at the same time it gives us the final results of a quest, completed under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, for a deeper and more rewarding apprehension of the mystery of Jesus.

Each of the evangelists has his own approach to Christ's person and mission. For St John he is the Word made flesh, come to give life to men, 1:14, and this, the mystery of the Incarnation, dominates the whole of John's thought. He expresses its theology in concrete terms: Jesus is sent; Jesus bears witness. Christ is God's message, he is the Word sent down to earth by God, to whom he must return when his task is complete, cf. 1:1+. This task of the Word is to declare to men the hidden things of God; and to be witness to all that he has seen and heard from the Father himself, cf. 3:11+. As credentials God has given him certain works or 'signs' which he must perform; these demand more than human power and prove that he has been sent by the God who is active in him, cf. 2:11+; through them is glimpsed his glory which will not be revealed fully till the day of his resurrection, cf. 1:14+, when the Son of Man is to be 'lifted up' as Isaiah foretold, Is 53:12 (LXX), to return to the Father by way of the cross, cf. Jn 12:32+, and to resume the glory he had with God 'before the world was made', 17:5+,24. This is the glory about which the prophets learned through revelation, cf. 5:27; 12:41; 19:37 plus references, and the revealing of this glory is a theophany, or divine self-revelation, that is at once both the culmination and final eclipse of all those other theophanies that had taken place already, whether that given in the act of creation, 1:1, or those given to Abraham, 8:56, Jacob, 1:51, Moses, 1:17, or the prophets. The glory of the 'day of Yahweh', cf. Am 5:18+, is identified with the 'day' of Jesus, 8:56, and more particularly with his hour, 2:4+, which is the hour of his 'lifting up' and of his glorification. In that hour the superhuman majesty of him who was 'sent', cf. 8:24+, the majesty of one who came to the world to give life, cf. 3:35+, to give it to all those whose hearts were opened by faith to the saving message he brought, cf. 3:11+. For this 'salvation' and for this alone the Son was 'sent', and in this way his 'sending' was the supreme manifestation of the Father's love for the world, cf. 17:6+.

In the synoptic gospels the revelation of Christ's glory is associated primarily with his eschatological 'coming', his return at the end of time, Mt 16:27f. The basic elements of traditional eschatology: the expectation of the 'last day', 6:39f; 11:24; 12:48, of the 'coming' of Jesus, 14:3; 21:22f, of the resurrection of the dead, 5:28f; 11:24, and of the last judgement, 5:29,45; 3:36, are all found in the fourth gospel, but in it this eschatology receives a new and double emphasis: both on its presence here and now, and also on its invisible activity in the heart of things. In this way, the 'coming' of the Son of Man is interpreted primarily as the 'coming' of Jesus to this world through his Incarnation, his 'lifting up' on the cross, and his return to his own disciples through the Holy Spirit. In the same way the 'judgement' is presented as something working here and now in the soul, and eternal life (John's counterpart of the Synoptic 'kingdom') is made to be something actually present, already in the possession of those who have faith. That these 'last things' should be seen as present is not surprising, since the salvation of mankind throughout history centres on Christ's historical life and death and resurrection. Beyond the Jews who rejected Jesus looms something more fundamental—the 'world', cf. 1:9–10+, the 'darkness', cf. 8:12+, which is controlled by Satan, the 'prince of this world', cf. 1 Jn 2:13f, who challenges God and his Anointed. There is no one who is not involved in this dramatic conflict of the spirit: the world, face to face with the Word, suffers its 'judgement', 12:31–32, receives its verdict, and admits defeat, 16:7–11,33. Christ gives his life, cf. 10:18+, he is 'lifted up' on the cross, but freely, and only in order to enter into his glory, cf. 12:32+, a glory that is made visible even in this world to the confusion of unbelievers and ending in the defeat of Satan for ever. God's victory over evil, his salvation of the world, is already guaranteed by Christ's resurrection in glory; the return of Jesus at the Last Day will be nothing but its confirmation.

It is difficult to determine the precise scheme adopted by John for this great theme. In the first place, the arrangement of the gospel is not always easy to explain: the sequence of ch. 4, 5, 6, 7:1–24 is awkward; ch. 15–17 are placed after the farewell of 14:31; passages like 3:31–36 and 12:44–50 break into the context. The way the gospel was both written and edited may be responsible for this. It would seem that we have only the end-stage of a slow process that has brought together not only component parts of different ages, but also corrections, additions and sometimes even more than one revision of the same discourse. Finally all this was published not by John himself but by his disciples after his death, 21:24. It is even possible that these disciples had a number of Johannine fragments which they were reluctant to abandon; though uncertain of their place, they worked them into the primitive gospel.

Many ways of dividing the gospel have been suggested. These all satisfy some of the data but are frequently far too rigidly systematic. It is best to follow such clear indications as are given by the evangelist himself. In the first place there is no doubt that he attaches special importance to the Jewish liturgical feasts which he uses to punctuate his narrative. These are: three feasts of Passover, 2:13; 6:4; 11:55, one unnamed feast, 5:1, one feast of Tabernacles, 7:2, and one feast of Dedication, 10:22. Secondly, the evangelist on several occasions very deliberately calculates the number of days with a view to dividing the life of Jesus into set periods. Thus we have the first week of Christ's ministry, 1:19–2:11, the week of the feast of Tabernacles, 7:2,14,37, and the week of the Passion, 12:1,12; 19:31,42, which latter is unified by the symbolic burial that begins it, 12:7, and the actual burial with which it ends, 19:38f; in the same way, 4:45 harks back to the first Passover, cf. 2:13-25, and in this way brackets together a whole section. With the above two points in mind, the following division may be suggested:

- Prologue: 'In the beginning...' (1:1-18)
- I. First week of the messianic ministry: Jesus revealed as Messiah. The week ends with the first miracle at Cana. (1:19-2:11)
- II. First Passover with its accompanying events, ending with the second miracle at Cana. (2:12-4:54)
- III. Sabbath 'of the paralytic': Christ cures the man at the Bethzatha pool. (5:1-47)
- IV. The Passover 'of the bread of life': miracle of the loaves and the subsequent discourse. (6:1-71)
- V. The feast of Tabernacles with the cure of the man born blind. (7:1-10:21)
- VI. The feast of Dedication and the resurrection of Lazarus. (10:22-11:54)
- VII. Week of the Passion and the crucifixion Passover. (11:55-19:42)
- VIII. The resurrection and week of apparitions. (20:1-29)
- IX. Appendix concerning the Church and the expectation of Christ's return. (ch. 21)

This division suggests that Christ not only fulfilled the Jewish liturgy but by doing so brought it to an end.

Is the fourth gospel a source of information independent of the three Synoptics? On this problem, and with due caution, the following observations may be made. There are several indications that John was familiar with the traditions behind the Synoptics. At times his omissions would be incomprehensible unless he were presuming that the facts would be known from some other source, but there are also times when he seems anxious to fill out the synoptic tradition and make it more precise. Nevertheless, recent work has been progressively establishing the originality and independence of the Johannine tradition. Even when narrating episodes found in the synoptic gospels, John remains so much himself that literary dependence becomes impossible: the facts must have reached the author by some other route and nowadays he must be considered a source in his own right, an independent witness to the primitive tradition. Between John and Luke the relationship is much closer, close enough to make it possible that when Luke wrote his gospel he made use not perhaps of the fourth gospel as it stands but of the traditions that went to its making, traditions of great antiquity. This applies especially to the Passion and resurrection narratives, but the contrary is also possible, namely, that the final editor of the fourth gospel was influenced by the third.

What then is the historical value of John's gospel? With the growing scholarly appreciation of the independence of the Johannine tradition there has grown also a recognition of its historical significance. On many points, for example, that have to do with Christ's ministry, John improves on the synoptic data; the duration of the ministry and the chronology of the Passion seem to be more precisely defined than in the Synoptics. Indeed, one of the most precise chronological indications in any of the gospels is to be found in John, 2:20, and it is supported by Lk 3:1. Topography in the fourth gospel is also much more detailed than it is in the Synoptics and this information has been confirmed more than once by recent discoveries (e.g. the pool with five porticos, cf. 5:2). Moreover, throughout the gospel we meet with factual detail that displays the author's close familiarity with Jewish religious practice as also with the rabbinic mind and with the casuistry of the doctors of the Law. The portrait of Christ himself as painted by the evangelist represents him as a figure from some other world but nevertheless as someone real and entirely human: simple and humble even in his risen glory. Finally it may be remarked that if John had not been convinced of the truth of all he wrote, his gospel would have to remain an insoluble enigma.

But it is important to realise that 'history' in this context is a very different thing from the concept of modern historians. The absorbing concern of the evangelist is the meaning of those historical events which were at once both divine and human, events which were at one and the same time both historical and theological; events which flowered in time but were rooted in eternity. The aim of the evangelist is to make his account a faithful one, something which he intends should be believed; his theme is a supernatural act, carried out in human history by Jesus Christ, the Word who became incarnate for the salvation of the human race. With this in mind, the evangelist has selected his material, carefully choosing events which, it seemed to him, could be presented symbolically. In this way he has deepened their meaning and given them unsuspected overtones. The miracles he describes are 'signs': they not only manifest Christ's glory, they are also symbolic of the gifts (the new purification, the living bread, light and life) he has brought to the world; even non-miraculous events can be presented in a way that brings out their spiritual meaning, a way that makes them vehicles of the divine mysteries (cf. 2:19-21; 9:7; 11:51f; 13:30; 19:31-37 with notes). John can see spiritual depths even in the most material elements of history: when Jesus comes, it is as the light of the world that he comes: his whole life is a battle against darkness; his death is a judgement on the entire world; and in him are realised the types of the Old Testament—he is the lamb of God, 1:29, the new Temple, 2:21, the healing serpent of Moses, 3:14, the bread of life prefigured by manna, 6:35, the perfect shepherd, 10:11, the true vine, 15:1, etc. In John's portrait of him Christ is presented as divine but it is a portrait filled with the details of Christ's true humanity: it records the Christ of history, but Christ as seen in all his depths as saviour of the world: John's symbolism, therefore, does not compromise history but presupposes it; for him there is no tension between the symbolic and the factual: his symbols are the real events of history, and his symbolism is inherent in these events; his symbolism not only explains the inner meaning of these historic events, but to John, the privileged witness of the incarnate Word, all this symbolism would be useless if these events had not taken place.

As for the author of this highly rewarding and complex gospel, tradition almost unanimously makes him John the apostle, the son of Zebedee. Even before 150 A.D. the fourth gospel was known and used by Ignatius of Antioch, by the author of the Odes of Solomon, by Papias, by Justin, and probably by Clement of Rome, which makes it clear that the work was already considered to have apostolic authority. The first explicit testimony is that of Irenaeus,

c. 180: 'Last of all John, too, the disciple of the Lord who leant against his breast, himself brought out a gospel while he was in Ephesus'. At about the same time, Clement of Alexandria, Tertullian and the Muratorian Canon expressly attribute the fourth gospel to John the apostle, though this authorship was denied in about 200 A.D. by some opponents of the Montanists. These last had used the fourth gospel to bolster their doctrine of the Spirit, and their opponents' reaction, prompted by theological considerations, had no supporting evidence from tradition.

This evidence for its Johannine authorship is confirmed by the gospel itself which claims to be the work of an eye-witness, a beloved disciple of the Lord. Its vocabulary and style betray its semitic origin; it is familiar with Jewish customs and with the topography of Palestine at the time of Christ; its author is apparently a close friend of Peter, 13:23f; 18:15; 20:3-10; 21:20-23, as John the apostle was, according to Luke, Lk 22:8; Ac 3:1-4; 4:13,19; 8:14; and its silence with regard to the sons of Zebedee is best explained on the hypothesis that one of the two wrote it. There is no doubt that 'the disciple Jesus loved . . . who wrote these things', 21:24, is the one who, with Peter and James, enjoyed Christ's closest friendship, Mk 5:37; 9:2; 13:3; 14:33. One objection which has been urged is that there is some evidence for this apostle's martyrdom at a date anterior to the writing of the gospel. It cannot be denied that an ancient tradition of John's martyrdom did exist, but there is no proof whatever that it has any greater guarantee than the tradition that John died at Ephesus in his old age: if the former tradition is preferred, it still gives no hint of the date of the martyrdom. In any case, as we saw above, the corpus of Johannine traditions was certainly in existence at a very early date even though the gospel as we have it may well have been edited and published later, probably by John's disciples. In such circumstances, John's responsibility for the fourth gospel would not be incompatible with the suggestion that he was martyred.

The letters

The three letters we have, and which by tradition bear John's name, are so like the gospel in style and doctrine that it is difficult not to accept the same John as their author. For a time the Johannine authorship of the second and third letters was in doubt, and traces of this uncertainty are to be found in Origen, Eusebius of Caesarea and Jerome, while the church of Antioch and the Syrian churches in general refused for a long time to accept them; however, these brief, incidental letters are of no doctrinal import, and it is hard to see how they could have forced their way into the canon had they not in fact come from John.

The third letter was probably written first: it is an attempt to settle the dispute on jurisdiction which had arisen in one of the churches acknowledging John's authority; the second letter was written to another church in answer to those who publicly denied the reality of the incarnation. The first letter however is by far the most important: its form is that of an encyclical letter to the Christian communities of Asia, threatened with disintegration under the impact of the early heresies. In this letter John summarises the entire content of his religious experience. He successively develops the parallel themes of light, 1:5f, righteousness, 2:29f, love, 4:7-8f, and truth, 5:6f, and then taking these as a basis he goes on to show how we as children of God must necessarily live the life of integrity which, for John, is the only thing which fulfils the twin commandments: faith in Jesus Christ, the son of God, and love of the brethren (cf. notes to 1:3,7). Of John's three letters this is the closest to his gospel both in style and doctrine; it must have been written about the same time, but whether before or after is something that cannot now be determined.

1 a. The O.T. speaks of the Word of God, and of his Wisdom, present with God before the world was made, cf. Pr 8:22+; Ws 7:22+; by it all things were created; it is sent to earth to reveal the hidden designs of God; it returns to him with its work done, Is 55:10-11; Pr 8:22-36; Si 24:3-22; Ws 9:9-12. On its creative role, cf. also Gn 1:3,6 etc.; Is 40:8,26; 44:24-28; 48:13; Ps 33:6; Jdt 16:14; Si 42:15; on its mission, cf. Ws 18:14-16; Ps 107:20; 147:15-18. For John, too, 13:3; 16:28, the Word existed before the world in God, 1:1,2; 8:24+; 10:30+; it has come on earth, 1:9-14; 3:19; 9:39; 12:46, cf. Mk 1:38+, being sent by the Father, 3:17,34; 5:36,43; 6:29; 7:29; 8:42; 9:7; 10:36; 11:42; 17:3,25, cf. The incarnation enabled the N.T., and especially John, to see this separately and eternally existent Word-Wisdom as a person.

b. Alternatively, these words may be joined with the preceding 'not one thing of all that came to be had as being but through him'.

c. Var. 'he is the life'.

d. The Light (Goodness; the Word) cannot be imprisoned by Darkness (Evil; the powers of evil), cf. 7:33f; 8:21; 14:30; 12:31,32; 1 Jn 2:8,14; 4:4; 5:18. Others translate 'could not understand'.

e. John the Baptist, Mt 3:1.

f. Other possible translations 'The true light, that which enlightens every man, was coming into the world', or 'He (the Word) was the true light that enlightens every man who comes into the world'.

g. The 'world' variously means: the cosmos or this earth, the human race, those hostile to God who hate Christ and his disciples, 7:7; 15:18,19; 17:14. This last sense coincides with the contemporary Jewish distinction between 'this world', 8:23 and passim, dominated by Satan, 12:31; 14:30; 16:11; 1 Jn 5:19, and 'the world to come' which possibly corresponds to John's 'eternal life', 12:25. The disciples are to remain in this world for the present, though not of it, 17:11,14f.

h. Probably the Jews.

i. Var. 'to be called'.

j. 'to those who believe in his name' omitted by many of the Fathers.

k. Lit. 'who was born not of blood or the will of the flesh or the will of man'. Var. (the commonly accepted reading) 'those who are born'. 'not of blood...man': the shorter reading 'not of flesh or blood' is perhaps the original one.

l. Allusion to the eternal generation of the Word but also, as it seems, to Christ's virgin birth, cf. Mt 1:16,18-23 and Lk 1:26-38.

m. The 'flesh' is man considered as a frail and mortal being, cf. 3:6; 17:2; Gn 6:3; Ps 56:4; Is 40:6. See Rm 7:5+.

n. Lit. 'pitched his tent among us'. The incarnation of the Word makes God personally and visibly present to mankind; it is no longer a presence unseen and awe-inspiring as in the Tent and Temple of the old régime, Ex 25:8+; cf. Nb 35:34, nor merely the presence of divine Wisdom enshrined in Israel's Mosaic Law, Si 24:7-22; Ba 3:36-44.

o. The 'glory' is the manifestation of God's presence, Ex 24:16+. No one could see its brilliance and live, Ex 33:20+, but the human nature of the Word now screens this glory as the cloud once did. Yet at times it pierces the veil, at the transfiguration, for instance, cf. Lk 9:32,35 (alluded to in Jn 1:14f), and when Jesus works miracles—'signs' that God is active in him, 2:11+; 11:40; cf. Ex 14:24-27 and 15:7; 16:7f. The resurrection will reveal the glory fully, cf. Jn 17:5+.

p. 'Grace and truth' recalls the 'grace' (or 'love') and 'faithfulness' of God's self-revelation to Moses, Ex 34:6+, cf. Ho 2:16-22.

q. I.e. 'a grace answering to the grace (that is in Christ)' or 'one grace (that of the New Covenant) in place of (another) grace (that of the Old Covenant)'. An alternative translation is 'grace upon grace'.

r. Var. 'God, only-begotten'.

s. In Jn this usually indicates the Jewish religious authorities hostile to Jesus, cf. 2:18; 5:10; 7:13; 9:22; 18:12; 19:38; 20:19, but occasionally the Jews as a whole.

t. On the expected return of Elijah, see Mt 3:23-24 and Mt 17:10-13.

u. From Dt 18:15,18 (see note) the Jews argued that the expected Messiah would be another Moses (the prophet par excellence, cf. Nb 12:7+) who would repeat on a grand scale the prodigies of the Exodus. Cf. Jn 3:14; 6:14,30-31,68; 7:40,52; 13:1+; Ac 3:22-23; 7:20-44; Heb 3:1-11. See also Mt 16:14+.

*a voice that cries in the wilderness:
Make a straight way for the Lord'.*

Now these men had been sent by the Pharisees, and they put this further²⁴ question to him, 'Why are you baptising if you are not the Christ, and not Elijah,²⁵ and not the prophet?' John replied, 'I baptise with water; but there stands²⁶ among you—unknown to you—the one who is coming after me; and I am²⁷ not fit to undo his sandal-strap'. This happened at Bethany, on the far side of²⁸ the Jordan,^v where John was baptising.

The next day, seeing Jesus coming towards him, John said, 'Look, there is²⁹ the lamb of God¹⁰ that takes away the sin of the world. This is the one I spoke³⁰ of when I said: A man is coming after me who ranks before me because he existed before me. I did not know him myself, and yet it was to reveal him to³¹ Israel that I came baptising with water.' John also declared, 'I saw the Spirit³² coming down on him from heaven like a dove^x and resting on him. I did not³³ know him myself, but he who sent me to baptise with water had said to me, "The man on whom you see the Spirit come down and rest is the one who is going to baptise with the Holy Spirit".^y Yes, I have seen and I am the witness³⁴ that he is the Chosen One of God.'^z

The first disciples

On the following day as John stood there again with two of his disciples,³⁵ Jesus passed, and John stared hard at him and said, 'Look, there is the lamb of³⁶ God'. Hearing this, the two disciples followed Jesus. Jesus turned round, saw³⁷ them following and said, 'What do you want?' They answered, 'Rabbi,'—which³⁸ means Teacher—'where do you live?' 'Come and see' he replied; so they went³⁹ and saw where he lived, and stayed with him the rest of that day. It was about the tenth hour.^{aa}

One of these two who became followers of Jesus after hearing what John had said was Andrew, the brother of Simon Peter. Early next morning,^{bb} Andrew⁴⁰ met his brother and said to him, 'We have found the Messiah'—which means⁴¹ the Christ—and he took Simon to Jesus. Jesus looked hard at him and said,⁴² 'You are Simon son of John; you are to be called Cephas'—meaning Rock.

The next day, after Jesus had decided to leave for Galilee, he met Philip and⁴³ said, 'Follow me'. Philip came from the same town, Bethsaida, as Andrew and⁴⁴ Peter. Philip found Nathanael^c and said to him, 'We have found the one⁴⁵ Moses wrote about in the Law, the one about whom the prophets wrote: he is Jesus son of Joseph, from Nazareth'. 'From Nazareth?' said Nathanael 'Can⁴⁶ anything good come from that place?' 'Come and see' replied Philip. When⁴⁷ Jesus saw Nathanael coming he said of him,^{dd} 'There is an Israelite who deserves the name, incapable of deceit'. 'How do you know me?' said Nathanael.⁴⁸ 'Before Philip came to call you,' said Jesus 'I saw you under the fig tree.'^{ee} Nathanael answered, 'Rabbi, you are the Son of God,^{ff} you are the King of Israel'.⁴⁹ Jesus replied, 'You believe that just because I said: I saw you under the fig tree. You will see greater things than that.' And then he added, 'I tell you most⁵⁰ solemnly, you will see heaven laid open and, above the Son of Man, the angels of God ascending and descending'.⁵¹

The wedding at Cana

Three days later^a there was a wedding at Cana in Galilee. The mother of¹ Jesus was there,^b and Jesus and his disciples had also been invited. When² they ran out of wine, since the wine provided for the wedding was all finished, the mother of Jesus said to him, 'They have no wine'. Jesus said, 'Woman,^c why³ turn to me?^d My hour^e has not come yet.' His mother said to the servants,⁴ 'Do whatever he tells you'. There were six stone water jars standing there, meant⁵ for the ablutions that are customary among the Jews: each could hold twenty or

7 thirty gallons. •Jesus said to the servants, 'Fill the jars with water', and they 8 filled them to the brim. •'Draw some out now' he told them 'and take it to the 9 steward.' •They did this; the steward tasted the water, and it had turned into wine. Having no idea where it came from—only the servants who had drawn 10 the water knew—the steward called the bridegroom •and said, 'People generally serve the best wine first, and keep the cheaper sort till the guests have had plenty to drink; but you have kept the best wine till now'.

11 This was the first of the signs^v given by Jesus: it was given at Cana in Galilee.
12 He let his glory be seen, and his disciples believed in him. •After this he went down to Capernaum with his mother and the brothers,^w but they stayed there only a few days.

B. THE PASSOVER

The cleansing of the Temple

13 Just before the Jewish Passover Jesus went up to Jerusalem, •and in the 14 Temple he found people selling cattle and sheep and pigeons, and the money 15 changers sitting at their counters there. •Making a whip out of some cord, he drove them all out of the Temple, cattle and sheep as well, scattered the money 16 changers' coins, knocked their tables over •and said to the pigeon-sellers, 'Take 17 all this out of here and stop turning my Father's house into a market'. •Then his disciples remembered the words of scripture: Zeal for your house will devour me.
18 The Jews intervened and said, 'What sign can you show us to justify what you 19 have done?' •Jesus answered, 'Destroy this sanctuary, and in three days I will 20 raise it up'.^x •The Jews replied, 'It has taken forty-six years to build this

v. Not the Bethany near Jerusalem, 11:18.

w. One of the most significant of John's symbols of Christ, cf. Rv 5:6,12, etc. It blends the idea of the 'servant' (Is 53), who takes on himself the sins of men and offers himself as a 'lamb of expiation' (Lv 14), with that of the Passover lamb (Ex 12:1 +; cf. Jn 19:36) whose ritual symbolises Israel's redemption. Cf. Ac 8:31-35; 1 Co 5:7; 1 P 1:18-20.

x. Om. 'like a dove'.

y. This phrase sums up the whole purpose of the Messiah's coming, cf. 1:1+, namely, that mankind might be born again in the Spirit; the O.T. had already foretold it, cf. Ac 2:33+. The Spirit rests on him, Is 11:2; 42:1; Jn 1:33, and so he can confer it on others (baptism in the Spirit, cf. here and Ac 1:5+), but only after his resurrection, 7:39; 16:7,8; 20:22; Ac 2. For Jesus 'came in the flesh', 1 Jn 4:2; 2 Jn 7, flesh that was corruptible, Jn 1:14+, and it is only when he is 'lifted up' and has gone to the Father that his body, glorified now, is fully endowed with divine, lifegiving power. Thenceforward the Spirit flows freely to the world from this body as from an inexhaustible spring: 7:37-39; 19:34; cf. Rm 5:5+. For the water symbolism, cf. 4:1+.

z. Var. 'the Son of God'.

aa. About 4 p.m. The insertion of this detail suggests that the narrative is a personal reminiscence.

bb. Lit. 'early'; var. 'at first' or 'first'.

cc. Probably the Bartholomew of the Synoptics, Mt 10:3p. Cf. Jn 21:2.

dd. 'of him'; var. 'of Nathanael' or 'to him'.

ee. Christ's supernatural knowledge of men and things is one of the features of Jn's portrait of him, cf. 2:24f; 4:17-19,29; 6:61,64,71; 13:1,11,27,28; 16:19,30; 18:4; 21:17.

ff. In this passage the phrase implies he is Messiah only (like 'king of Israel'). Cf. Mt 4:3+.

2 a. I.e. three days after the meeting with Philip and Nathanael. The opening events of the gospel, therefore, are contained within one week of which almost every day is noticed; it culminates in the manifestation of Christ's glory.

b. Mary is present when Jesus first manifests his glory; she is there again at the cross, 19:25-27. The two descriptions have several details in common, evidently of set purpose.

c. Unusual address from son to mother; the term is used again in 19:26 where there may be a reference to Gn 3:15,20: Mary is the second Eve, 'the mother of the living'.

d. Lit. 'Who to me and to thee', a semitic formula not infrequent in O.T., Jg 11:12; 2 S 16:10; 19:23; 1 K 17:18, etc., and in N.T., Mt 8:29; Mk 1:24; 5:7; Lk 4:34; 8:28. It is used to deprecate interference or, more strongly, to reject overtures of any kind. The shade of meaning can be deduced only from the context. Here, Jesus objects that his hour has not yet come.

e. The 'hour' of his glorification and of his return to the Father's right hand. Its approach is noted by the evangelist, 7:30; 8:20; 12:23,27; 13:1; 17:1. This 'hour' is determined by the Father and cannot be anticipated, though the miracle worked through Mary's intervention is a prophetic symbol of it.

f. For credentials, every true prophet must have 'signs', or wonders worked in God's name, Is 7:11, etc.; cf. Jn 3:2; 6:29,30; 7:3,31; 9:16,33; of the Messiah it was expected that he would repeat the Mosaic miracles, 1:21+. Jesus, therefore, works 'signs' in order to stimulate faith in his divine mission, 2:11,23; 4:48-54; 11:15,42; 12:37; cf. 3:11+. And indeed his 'works' show that God has sent him, 5:36; 10:25,37, that the Father is within him, 10:30+, manifesting the divine glory in power, 1:14+; it is the Father himself who does the works, 14:10; 10:38. But many refuse to believe, 3:12; 5:38-47; 6:36,64; 7:5; 8:45; 10:25; 12:37, and their sin 'remains', 9:41; 15:24. Cf. Mt 8:3+.

g. Var. 'and his brothers'; add. 'and his disciples'. The 'brothers' are not blood-brothers of Jesus but the inner circle of his first disciples, cf. Ac 1:15+.

h. In the fourth gospel, Jesus frequently uses terms which, in addition to their obvious meaning appreciated by the audience, possess a metaphorical and higher sense; cf. 2:20 (Temple); 3:4 (new birth); 4:15 (living water); 6:34 (bread of life); 7:35 (to depart); 11:11 (to awaken); 12:34 (to lift up); 13:9 (to wash); 13:36f (to depart); 14:22 (to show oneself). Consequent sanctuary:^f are you going to raise it up in three days?' •But he was speaking of ²¹

the sanctuary that was his body,^f •and when Jesus rose from the dead, his disciples ²² remembered that he had said this, and they believed the scripture and the words he had said.

During his stay in Jerusalem for the Passover many believed in his name ²³
when they saw the signs that he gave, •but Jesus knew them all and did not trust ²⁴ himself to them; •he never needed evidence about any man; he could tell what ²⁵ a man had in him.

C. THE MYSTERY OF THE SPIRIT REVEALED TO A MASTER IN ISRAEL

The conversation with Nicodemus

There was one of the Pharisees called Nicodemus, a leading Jew, •who came ¹ to Jesus by night and said, 'Rabbi, we know that you are a teacher who comes ² from God; for no one could perform the signs that you do unless God were with him'. •Jesus answered: ³

'I tell you most solemnly,
unless a man is born from above,^a he cannot see the kingdom of God'.^b

Nicodemus said, 'How can a grown man be born? Can he go back into his ⁴ mother's womb and be born again?' •Jesus replied: ⁵

'I tell you most solemnly,
unless a man is born through water and the Spirit,^c he cannot enter the kingdom of God:
what is born of the flesh is flesh;
what is born of the Spirit is spirit.
Do not be surprised when I say:
You must be born from above.
The wind^d blows wherever it pleases;
you hear its sound,
but you cannot tell where it comes from or where it is going.
That is how it is with all who are born of the Spirit.'

'How can that be possible?' asked Nicodemus. •'You, a teacher in Israel, ⁹ and you do not know these things!' replied Jesus. ¹⁰

'I tell you most solemnly,
we speak only about what we know ¹¹
and witness only to what we have seen and yet you people reject our evidence.^e
If you do not believe me ¹²
when I speak about things in this world,
how are you going to believe me
when I speak to you about heavenly things?
No one has gone up to heaven^f ¹³
except the one who came down from heaven,
the Son of Man who is in heaven;
and the Son of Man must be lifted up^g as Moses lifted up the serpent in the desert, ¹⁴
so that everyone who believes may have eternal life in him.^h ¹⁵

II. JOURNEYS IN SAMARIA AND GALILEE

John bears witness for the last time

- 22 After this, Jesus went with his disciples into the Judaeen countryside and 4:1-2
- 23 stayed with them there and baptised.^k •At the same time John was baptising at Aenon^l near Salim, where there was plenty of water, and people were going
- 24 there to be baptised. •This was before John had been put in prison. Mt 3:6+ Lk 3:20
- 25 Now some of John's disciples had opened a discussion with a Jew about
- 26 purification,^m •so they went to John and said, 'Rabbi, the man who was with you on the far side of the Jordan, the man to whom you bore witness, is baptising
- 27 now; and everyone is going to him'. •John replied:

misapprehensions provide an opportunity for explanatory developments, cf. 3:11+.

i. Reconstruction work on the Temple began in 19 B.C. This, therefore, is the Passover of 28 A.D.

j. One of the great Johannine symbols. Cf. Rv 21:22. Cf. Paul, 1 Co 12:12+. The body of the risen Christ is to be the focus of worship in spirit and truth, 4:21f, the shrine of the Presence, 1:14, the spiritual temple from which living waters flow, 7:37-39; 19:34.

3 a. To be preferred to 'again'.

b. A phrase common in the Synoptics, Mt 4:17+, but occurring only here (and v. 5) in Jn; its Johannine equivalent is 'life' or 'eternal life'.

c. Allusion to baptism and its necessity, cf. Rm 6:4+.

d. In Greek, as in Hebr., one word serves for both 'wind' and 'spirit'.

e. Jesus does not speak on his own initiative, 7:17-18; he declares what he has seen 'with the Father', 1:18; 3:11; 8:38; cf. 8:24+; it is the Father's words and teaching that he hands on to man, 3:34; 8:28; 12:49,50; 14:24; 17:8,14; he is himself the Word, 1:1,14. This Word is not idle: it calls all things from nothing, 1:1+, it calls the dead from the tomb, 11:43,44; 5:28-29; it gives life to the soul, 5:24; 6:63; 8:51; it confers the Spirit, the source of immortality, 1:33+; 20:22, and so makes men children of God, 10:35; 1:12. It is required only that man should have faith in the Word, 1:12, 'dwell' in it, cf. 8:31, 'keep' it, 8:51,55; 12:47; 14:23; 15:20; 17:6, obey its command which is love, 13:34+-. Nevertheless, the Word is enigmatic,

2:20+, and difficult, cf. 6:60; 7:36; it makes its way only into humble hearts. Those who hear it, therefore, respond differently, 7:43; 10:19: some believe, 4:41; 7:40f,46; 8:30, others go away disappointed, 6:66, in spite of the 'signs', 2:11+; this same rejected Word will judge them at the last day, 12:48.

f. Alluding to the ascension, which will both show that Jesus really came from heaven and also establish the Son of Man on his glorious throne.

g. If man would be saved he must turn his eyes to Christ 'lifted up' (12:32+) on the cross, Nb 21:8; Zc 12:10+; Jn 19:37+, as the symbol of his 'lifting up' in the ascension, that is to say, he must believe that Christ is the only-begotten Son, 3:18; Zc 12:10. He will then be washed clean by the water from the pierced side, Jn 19:34; Zc 13:1.

h. Var. 'so that everyone who believes in him may receive eternal life'.

i. Semitism: the 'name' is the person.

j. Lit. 'does the truth', cf. 1 Jn 3:19+.

k. A baptism of the same nature as the Baptists'; baptism 'in the Spirit' is reserved for the period after Christ's resurrection in glory, cf. 1:33+.

l. A tradition locates Aenon ('the Springs') in the Jordan valley about 7 miles S. of Scythopolis. Ain Farah is also a possibility.

m. About baptism probably. 'a Jew'; var. 'Jews'. The text is corrupt. The reading may have been 'Jesus' or 'the disciples of Jesus'.

28 'Why are you talking to her?' • The woman put down her water jar and hurried 29 back^j to the town to tell the people, • 'Come and see a man who has told me the town and they started walking towards him.

- 31 Meanwhile, the disciples were urging him, 'Rabbi, do have something to

n. The O.T. uses the marriage metaphor to express the relationship between God and Israel, Ho 1:2+. Jesus applies it to himself, Mt 9:15p; 22:1f; 25:1f; cf. also Paul in Ep 5:22f; 2 Co 11:2. The Messiah's coming has brought joy to the world, Jn 3:29, cf. 1:29, 36-39; 2:1-11, consequently the marriage feast of the Lamb, Rv 19:7; 21:2, has already begun.

o. Or perhaps 'everything'.

p. Add. 'is above all (others)' (or 'everything')

q. Or 'and gives the Spirit without reserve'.

r. God has communicated his power over life to the Son, 1:4; 5:21; 10:18+, and now the Son gives life to whom he will, 5:26; his gift of the Spirit, 3:5-6; 1:33+; 15:26, establishes 'all flesh' in incorruption, 1:14+; 11:25; 17:2,3. Thus, by the Father's decree, all things are 'in the hand' (or 'power') of the Son, 3:35; 10:28,29; 13:3; 17:2; cf. 6:37-39; Mt 11:27; 28:18; on this is based the sovereignty, 12:13-15; 18:36-37, that he will solemnly assume on the day of his 'lifting up', 12:32+; 19:19; Ac 2:33; Ep 4:8; and on that day, the 'Prince of this world' will forfeit his kingdom, 12:31.

4 a. Meetings at a well are a feature of the patriarchal narratives: Gn 24:10f; 29:1f; Ex 2:15f. Wells and springs play a significant part in the life and religion of the patriarchal and Exodus periods: Gn 26:14-22; Ex 15:22-27; 17:1-7 etc. In the O.T., spring water symbolises the life that God gives, especially that of the messianic age: Is 12:3; 55:1; Jr 2:13; Ezk 47:1f (cf. Ps 46:4 and Zc 14:8); Ps 36:8-9 (and in the N.T.: Rv 7:16-17; 22:17); it symbolises also the life imparted by divine Wisdom and by the Law, Pr 13:14; Sl 15:3; 24:23-29. This symbolism is carried further in the gospel narrative: living (i.e. spring) water signifies the Spirit, cf. Jn 7:37-39 and 1:33+.

b. Var. 'the Lord'.

c. Either the ancient Shechem (Sichara in Aramaic) or the present village of Askar at the foot of Mt. Ebal, about 3/4 mile from 'Jacob's Well'. The well is not mentioned in Gn.

d. Noon.

e. Some authorities omit this parenthesis. The Jews hated the Samaritans, Si 50:25-26; Jn 8:48; Lk 9:52-55, cf. Mt 10:5; Lk 10:33; 17:16, and attributed their origin to the importation of five pagan groups, 2 K 17:24-41, who retained some of their loyalty to their old gods; these are symbolised by the 'five husbands' of v. 18.

f. I.e. Gerizim; on this mountain the Samaritans had built a rival to the Jerusalem Temple; it was destroyed by John Hyrcanus in 129 B.C.

g. Lit. 'one ought to worship in Jerusalem'. Var. 'the place (or: house) in which one ought to worship is in Jerusalem'.

h. The Spirit, 14:26+, who makes a new creature of man, 3:5, is also the inspiring principle of the new worship of God. This worship is 'in truth' because it is the only worship that meets the conditions revealed by God through Jesus.

i. Var. 'those who worship him', cf. 12:20.

j. Var. 'went off'.

eat'; •but he said, 'I have food to eat that you do not know about'. •So the disciples asked one another, 'Has someone been bringing him food?' •But Jesus said:

'My food
is to do the will of the one who sent me,
and to complete his work.
Have you not got a saying:
Four months and then the harvest?
Well, I tell you:
Look around you, look at the fields;
already they are white, ready for harvest!'
Already •the reaper is being paid his wages,
already he is bringing in the grain for eternal life,
and thus sower and reaper rejoice together.
For here the proverb holds good:
one sows, another reaps;
I sent you to reap
a harvest you had not worked for.
Others worked for it;
and you have come into the rewards of their trouble.'

Many Samaritans of that town had believed in him on the strength of the woman's testimony when she said, 'He told me all I have ever done', •so, when the Samaritans came up to him, they begged him to stay with them. He stayed for two days, and •when he spoke to them many more came to believe; •and they said to the woman, 'Now we no longer believe because of what you told us; we have heard him ourselves and we know that he really is the saviour of the world'.

The cure of the nobleman's son

When the two days were over Jesus left for Galilee. •He himself had declared that there is no respect for a prophet in his own country, •but on his arrival the Galileans received him well, having seen all that he had done at Jerusalem during the festival which they too had attended.
He went again to Cana in Galilee, where he had changed the water into wine. Now there was a court official there whose son was ill at Capernaum •and, hearing that Jesus had arrived in Galilee from Judaea, he went and asked him to come and cure his son as he was at the point of death. •Jesus said, 'So you will not believe unless you see signs and portents!' •'Sir,' answered the official 'come down before my child dies.' •'Go home,' said Jesus 'your son will live.' The man believed what Jesus had said and started on his way; •and while he was still on the journey back his servants met him with the news that his boy was alive. •He asked them when the boy had begun to recover. 'The fever left him yesterday' they said 'at the seventh hour.' •The father realised that this was exactly the time when Jesus had said, 'Your son will live'; and he and all his household believed.
This was the second sign given by Jesus, on his return from Judaea to Galilee.

III. THE SECOND FEAST AT JERUSALEM

The cure of a sick man at the Pool of Bethzatha

5 Some time after this there was a Jewish festival,^a and Jesus went up to Jerusalem. •Now at the Sheep Pool in Jerusalem there is a building, called Bethzatha^b in Hebrew, consisting of five porticos; •and under these were crowds of sick people—blind, lame, paralysed—waiting for the water to move;^c •for at intervals the angel of the Lord came down into the pool, and the water was disturbed, and the first person to enter the water after this disturbance was cured

 5 of any ailment he suffered from. •One man there had an illness which had lasted 6 thirty-eight years, •and when Jesus saw him lying there and knew he had been in 7 this condition for a long time, he said, 'Do you want to be well again?' •'Sir,' replied the sick man 'I have no one to put me into the pool when the water is disturbed; and while I am still on the way, someone else gets there before me.'
 8 Jesus said, 'Get up, pick up your sleeping-mat and walk'. •The man was cured Mt 9:6
 at once, and he picked up his mat and walked away.

10 Now that day happened to be the sabbath, •so the Jews said to the man who had been cured, 'It is the sabbath; you are not allowed to carry your sleeping-11 mat'. •He replied, 'But the man who cured me told me, "Pick up your mat and 12 walk"'. •They asked, 'Who is the man who said to you, "Pick up your mat and 13 walk"?' •The man had no idea who it was, since Jesus had disappeared into the 14 crowd that filled the place. •After a while Jesus met him in the Temple and said,
 'Now you are well again, be sure not to sin any more, or something worse may 15 happen to you'.^d •The man went back and told the Jews that it was Jesus who 16 had cured him. •It was because he did things like this on the sabbath that the 17 Jews began to persecute Jesus.^e •His answer to them was, 'My Father goes on 18 working, and so do I'.^f •But that only made the Jews even more intent on killing him, because, not content with breaking the sabbath, he spoke of God as his own Father, and so made himself God's equal.

19 To this accusation Jesus replied:

'I tell you most solemnly,
 the Son can do nothing by himself;
 he can do only what he sees the Father doing:
 and whatever the Father does the Son does too.

20 For the Father loves the Son and shows him everything he does himself, and he will show him even greater things than these,
 works that will astonish you.

21 Thus, as the Father raises the dead and gives them life, so the Son gives life to anyone he chooses;
 22 for the Father judges^g no one;
 he has entrusted all judgement to the Son, 23 so that all may honour the Son
 as they honour the Father.

Whoever refuses honour to the Son refuses honour to the Father who sent him.

24 I tell you most solemnly,
 whoever listens to my words,
 and believes in the one who sent me,

k. A harvest of souls: the Samaritans who are coming to Jesus, v. 30, are its first-fruits.

l. The reapers are the apostles, the sowers those who have laboured before them, especially Jesus.

m. Not merely 'King of Israel' as in 1:49. This world-perspective is typical of John, cf. 1:29; 3:16; 11:52; 1 Jn 2:2. Nevertheless, 'salvation comes from the Jews', 4:22.

5 a. Var. 'the festival'. Possibly Pentecost, or Tabernacles.

b. Var. 'Bethesda' (house of mercy), 'Bethsaida' or 'Belsetha'.

c. Probably due to the inflow of fresh water from time to time. The best witnesses omit 'waiting for the water to move' and the whole of v. 4.

d. Jesus does not say that the disease was the result of sin, cf. 9:2f. He warns the man that his cure is a divine favour that must be acknowledged by conversion, cf. Mt 9:2-8; to forget this is to risk something worse than the disease. The miracle is therefore a 'sign' of spiritual resurrection, v. 24.

e. The episode is concluded in 7:19-23. The discourse of 5:19-47 falls into two parts: 1. the Father commits lifegiving power to the Son, vv. 19-30; 2. the Father bears witness to the Son: a. through the Baptist, b. through the works the Father does through Jesus, c. through the scriptures (Moses), vv. 31-47.

f. Jewish theologians reconciled the fact that God 'rested' after the work of creation (the sabbath was the human counterpart of this 'rest', Gn 2:2f) with his unceasing, active government of the world, by distinguishing between God's activity as creator, which is now at an end, and his activity as judge (or 'governor'), which never ends. Jesus claims that what he does and what the Father does are one and the same. Hence the anger of the Jews and Christ's vindication of his claim.

g. Power over life and death expresses the highest judicial function, cf. v. 21.

IV. ANOTHER PASSOVER, THE BREAD OF LIFE

The miracle of the loaves

- 1 6 Some time after this, Jesus went off to the other side of the Sea of Galilee—
2 or of Tiberias—and a large crowd followed him, impressed by the signs he 3 gave by curing the sick. •Jesus climbed the hillside, and sat down there with his 4 disciples. •It was shortly before the Jewish feast of Passover.^a
- 5 Looking up, Jesus saw the crowds approaching and said to Philip, 'Where 6 can we buy some bread for these people to eat?' •He only said this to test Philip;
7 he himself knew exactly what he was going to do. •Philip answered, 'Two hundred 8 denarii would only buy enough to give them a small piece each'. •One of his 9 disciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, said, 'There is a small boy here
10 with five barley loaves and two fish; but what is that between so many?' •Jesus 11 said to them, 'Make the people sit down'. There was plenty of grass there, and 12 as many as five thousand men sat down. •Then Jesus took the loaves, gave 13 thanks, and gave them out to all who were sitting ready; he then did the same with 14 the fish, giving out as much as was wanted. •When they had eaten enough he 15 said to the disciples, 'Pick up the pieces left over, so that nothing gets wasted'.
16 So they picked them up, and filled twelve hampers with scraps left over from the 17 meal of five barley loaves. •The people, seeing this sign that he had given, said, 18 'This really is the prophet who is to come into the world'. •Jesus, who could see
19 they were about to come and take him by force and make him king, escaped^b 20 back to the hills by himself.

Jesus walks on the waters

- 16 That evening the disciples went down to the shore of the lake and •got into 17 a boat to make for Capernaum on the other side of the lake. It was getting 18 dark by now and Jesus had still not rejoined them. •The wind was strong, and 19 the sea was getting rough. •They had rowed three or four miles when they saw Jesus walking on the lake and coming towards the boat. This frightened them, 20 but he said, 'It is I. Do not be afraid.'^c •They were for taking him into the boat, 21 but in no time it reached the shore at the place they were making for.

b. Var. 'withdrew'.

c. Om. 'Do not be afraid'.

d. Some interpreters hold that a discourse about the Eucharist (6:51-58: Jesus nourishing the soul with had been there, and that Jesus had not got into the boat with his disciples, but that the disciples had set off by themselves. •Other boats, however, had put in 23 from Tiberias, near the place where the bread had been eaten.^e •When the 24 people saw that neither Jesus nor his disciples were there, they got into those boats and crossed to Capernaum to look for Jesus. •When they found him on 25 the other side, they said to him, 'Rabbi, when did you come here?' •Jesus answered: 26

'I tell you most solemnly,
you are not looking for me because you have seen the signs
but because you had all the bread you wanted to eat.
Do not work for food that cannot last,
but work for food that endures to eternal life,
the kind of food the Son of Man is offering^f you, for on him the Father, God himself, has set his seal.'^g

Then they said to him, 'What must we do if we are to do the works that God 28 wants?' •Jesus gave them this answer, 'This is working for God:^h you must 29 believe in the one he has sent'. •So they said, 'What sign will you give to show us 30 that we should believe in you? What work will you do?' •Our fathers had manna 31 to eat in the desert; as scripture says: He gave them bread from heaven to eat.

Jesus answered:

'I tell you most solemnly,
it was not Moses who gave you bread from heaven,
it is my Father who gives you the bread from heaven,
the true bread;
for the bread of God
is that which comes down from heaven and gives life to the world'.

'Sir,' they said 'give us that bread always.' •Jesus answered:

'I amⁱ the bread of life.
He who comes to me will never be hungry;
he who believes in me will never thirst.^j
But, as I have told you,
you can see me and still you do not believe.
All that the Father gives me will come to me,
and whoever comes to me^k
I shall not turn him away;
because I have come from heaven,
not to do my own will,
but to do the will of the one who sent me.
Now the will of him who sent me is that I should lose nothing of all that he has given to me, and that I should raise it up on the last day.
Yes, it is my Father's will that whoever sees the Son^l and believes in him shall have eternal life, and that I shall raise him up on the last day.'

Meanwhile the Jews were complaining^m to each other about him, because he 41 had said, 'I am the bread that came down from heaven'. •'Surely this is Jesus 42 son of Joseph' they said. 'We know his father and mother. How can he now say, "I have come down from heaven"?' •Jesus said in reply, 'Stop complaining to 43 each other.

his flesh and blood, cf. 6:51+) has been inserted into the narrative-discourse which may be summarised as follows: the Jews ask for a 'sign' like that of the manna, vv. 30-31; cf. 1:21+; Jesus tells them, 'The Father's message, which I pass on to man, (cf. 3:11+) makes of me man's true bread, a nourishment that only those with faith can receive', vv. 32f; the Jews do not understand, vv. 60-66; only Peter and the disciples believe, vv. 67-71. (This doctrine is best understood in the light of Dt 8:3; Pr 8:22-24 and 9:1-6; Si 24:3 and 24:17-21; Lk 11:29-32.)

6 e. Add. 'after the Lord had given thanks'.

f. Var. 'will offer'.

g. The 'seal' that Jesus received at his baptism, namely the Spirit, Mt 3:16+, who is the power of God operative in Christ's 'signs'. Cf. Ac 10:38; Mt 12:28; Ep 1:13; 4:30; 2 Co 1:22.

h. For 'works' in the Jewish sense Jesus substitutes faith in God's envoy.

i. The Greek phrase ego etmi recalls the name that God revealed to Moses, Ex 3:14+, cf. Jn 8:24+, but here (and frequently elsewhere) it also forms the prelude to the explanation of a parable. In this case the parable is not in words but in action: the gift of the manna and the multiplication of the loaves are explained as parables of Christ's gift of himself, the true bread.

j. As Wisdom invites man to her table, Pr 9:1f, so does Jesus. Jn sees him as the Wisdom of God which, in the O.T. revelation, was already moving towards personification, cf. 1:1+. This perception springs from Christ's own teaching already recorded in the Synoptics, Mt 11:19; Lk 11:31p, but given here much more clearly by Jn. Thus, Christ's origin is mysterious, Jn 7:27-29; 8:14,19; cf. Jb 28:20-28; he alone knows the secrets of God and reveals them to man, 3:11-12,31-32; cf. Mt 11:25-27p; Ws 9:13-18; Ba 3:29-38; he is the living bread that supremely satisfies, 6:35; cf. Pr 9:1-6; Si 24:19-22, if men will only come to him, 3:20,21; 5:40; 6:35,37,44,65; 7:37; cf. Pr 9:4-5; Si 24:19; Mt 11:28; but they must seek him before it is too late, 7:34; 8:21; cf. Pr 1:28. Cf. also Is 55:1-3. For Paul's teaching, cf. 1 Co 1:24+.

k. To 'come to' Jesus is to believe in him.

l. 'Seeing' the Son is perceiving and acknowledging that he is in truth the Son sent by the Father, cf. 12:45; 14:9; 17:6+.

m. As their forefathers did in the desert, cf. Ex 16:2f; 17:3; Nb 11:1; 14:27; 1 Co 10:10.

n. Add. 'that I shall give'; the phrase is, in any case, to be understood.

o. Jesus is the true bread because he is God's Word, vv. 32f, and also because he is a victim whose body and blood are offered in sacrifice for the life of the world, vv. 51-58, cf. 6:22+. The word 'flesh' suggests a connection between Eucharist and incarnation: the Word made flesh, 1:14, is the food of man.

He taught this doctrine at Capernaum, in the synagogue. •After hearing it, ⁵⁹

3:11+ many of his followers said, 'This is intolerable language. How could anyone ⁶⁰

V. THE FEAST OF TABERNACLES

Jesus goes up to Jerusalem for the feast and teaches there

5:18; 11:54 7 After this Jesus stayed in Galilee; he could not^a stay in Judaea, because the ¹

Mk 9:30p Jews were out to kill him.

Ex 23:14+ As the Jewish feast of Tabernacles drew near, •his brothers^b said to him, ²

Nb 29:12 'Why not leave this place and go to Judaea, and let your disciples^c see the works ³

Mt 5:15 you are doing; •if a man wants to be known he does not do things in secret; since ⁴

2:11+ you are doing all this, you should let the whole world see'. •Not even his brothers, ⁵

2:4+ in fact, had faith in him. •Jesus answered, 'The right time^d for me has not come yet, ⁶

1:10+ but any time is the right time for you. •The world cannot hate you, but it does ⁷

3:19; 8:12+ hate me, because I give evidence that its ways are evil. •Go up to the festival ⁸ yourselves: I am not going^e to this festival, because for me the time is not ripe ⁹

yet.' •Having said that, he stayed behind in Galilee.

However, after his brothers had left for the festival, he went up as well, but ¹⁰ quite privately, without drawing attention to himself. •At the festival the Jews ¹¹ were on the look-out for him: 'Where is he?' they said. •People stood in groups ¹²

Mt 27:63 whispering^f about him. Some said, 'He is a good man'; others, 'No, he is leading ¹³

Jn 9:22 the people astray'. •Yet no one spoke about him openly, for fear of the Jews.

When the festival was half over, Jesus went to the Temple and began to ¹⁴ teach.^g •The Jews were astonished and said, 'How did he learn to read? He has ¹⁵ not been taught.' •Jesus answered them: ¹⁶

Mt 7:28; 13:54-57 Lk 2:47 Ac 4:13

- ‘My teaching is not from myself;
it comes from the one who sent me;
and if anyone is prepared to do his will,
he will know whether my teaching is from God or whether my doctrine is my own.
When a man’s doctrine is his own
he is hoping to get honour for himself;
but when he is working for the honour of one who sent him, then he is sincere
and by no means an impostor.
Did not Moses give you the Law?
And yet not one of you keeps the Law!’
- ‘Why do you want to kill me?’ •The crowd replied, ‘You are mad! Who wants to kill you?’ •Jesus answered, ‘One work I did, and you are all surprised by it. Moses ordered you to practise circumcision—not that it began with him, it goes back to the patriarchs—and you circumcise on the sabbath. •Now if a man can be circumcised on the sabbath so that the Law of Moses is not broken, why are you angry with me for making a man whole and complete on a sabbath?’^h
Do not keep judging according to appearances; let your judgement be according to what is right.’

The people discuss the origin of the Messiah

- Meanwhile some of the people of Jerusalem were saying, ‘Isn’t this the man they want to kill?’ •And here he is, speaking freely, and they have nothing to say to him! Can it be true the authoritiesⁱ have made up their minds that he is the Christ? •Yet we all know where he comes from, but when the Christ appears no one will know where he comes from.’^j
Then, as Jesus taught in the Temple, he cried out:
‘Yes, you know me and you know where I came from.
Yet I have not come of myself:
no, there is one who sent me and I really come from him,^k and you do not know him,
but I know him
because I have come from him^l and it was he who sent me.’
- They would have arrested him then, but because his time had not yet come no one laid a hand on him.

p. The life that the Father communicates to the Son passes to the faithful through the Eucharist.

q. Add. ‘the manna’ or ‘in the desert’.

r. Christ’s words about the bread from heaven reveal something real and divine of which only the Spirit, cf. 14:33+, can supply understanding, cf. 14:26+, and which is the source of life for men.

s. I.e. the Messiah, God’s chosen envoy, consecrated and united in him uniquely, cf. 10:36; 17:19. Var. ‘you are the Christ, the Son of God’ or ‘the Son of the living God’, cf. Mt 16:16.

7 a. Var. ‘he did not wish to’.

b. In the wide sense: cousins, relations, cf. Mt 12:46+.

c. Those in Jerusalem and Judaea, cf. 2:23; 3:26; 4:1.

d. I.e. ‘my hour’, cf. 2:4+.

e. Var. ‘I am not going yet’.

f. Lit. ‘There was whispering (var. much whispering) about him in the crowds’.

g. 7:14-52 is made up of separate passages with a common theme—the uncertainty about Christ’s origin. 1. His human origin obscures his divine; he has never been a pupil of the rabbis, what is his knowledge worth? (vv. 14-18); the details of his childhood are known, how can he be the Messiah? (vv. 25-30). 2. His reputed birth at Nazareth shows that he is not the Christ (vv. 40-52). The theme of ‘departure’, too, (vv. 33-36, cf. 8:21-23) is connected with that of divine origin: the man Christ departs for the place where (in his divine nature, cf. vv. 29 and 34) he has always been. Vv. 19-24 are the conclusion of 5:1-16 and are alien to the present context.

h. The argument is rabbinic in type: circumcision was reckoned the ‘healing’ of one member; if this ‘healing’ of one member was allowed on the sabbath, how much more the healing of the whole man?

i. Var. ‘the chief priests’ or ‘the elders’ or ‘they’.

j. They knew that the Messiah was to be born in Bethlehem, v. 42; Mt 2:5f, but it was commonly believed that he would lie hidden in some secret place, cf. Mt 24:26, (in heaven, according to some) until the day of his coming. This belief was vindicated, though his audience did not recognise it, by Christ’s heavenly origin.

k. Lit. ‘he who sent me is true’ (var. ‘truthful’).

l. Var. ‘because I am at his side’.

Jesus foretells his approaching departure

There were many people in the crowds, however, who believed in him; they 31
 2:11+ were saying, 'When the Christ comes, will he give more signs than this man?'
 Hearing that rumours like this about him were spreading among the people, 32
 the Pharisees^m sent the Temple police to arrest him.

Then Jesus said:

33

16:16 'I shall remain with you for only a short time now;
 1:1+ then I shall go back to the one who sent me.
 8:21; 12:21, 26; 14: You will look for me and will not find me:ⁿ 34
 3:19 where I am
 Dt 4:29 you cannot come.'

The Jews then said to one another, 'Where is he going that we shan't be 35 able to find him? Is he going abroad to the people who are dispersed among the Greeks and will he teach the Greeks? •What does he mean when he says: 36

2:19+ "You will look for me and will not find me:
 where I am,
 you cannot come"?"

The promise of living water

Nb 29:35 On the last day and greatest day of the festival,^a Jesus stood there and cried 37

Fresh discussions on the origin of the Messiah

1:21+ Several people who had been listening said, 'Surely he must be the prophet', 40
 2 S 7:1-2+ and some said, 'He is the Christ', but others said, 'Would the Christ be from 41
 Mt 9:27+ Galilee? •Does not scripture say that the Christ must be descended from David 42
 Rm 1:3 and come from the town of Bethlehem?'^t •So the people could not agree about 43
 Mi 5:1 Mt 2:5f him. •Some would have liked to arrest him, but no one actually laid hands on 44 3:11; 7:30 him.

The police went back to the chief priests and Pharisees who said to them, 45
 Mt 13:54-56 'Why haven't you brought him?' •The police replied, 'There has never been 46
 Lk 2:47; anybody who has spoken like him'. •'So' the Pharisees answered 'you have been 47
 3:1 Mt 11:25 led astray as well? •Have any of the authorities believed in him? Any of the 48
 9:34 Pharisees? •This rabble knows nothing about the Law—they are damned.' 49
 3:1+; 19:39 One of them, Nicodemus—the same man who had come to Jesus earlier—said to 50
 Dt 1:16f; them, •'But surely the Law does not allow us to pass judgement on a man without 51
 17:4 giving him a hearing and discovering what he is about?' •To this they answered, 52
 5:39 'Are you a Galilean too? Go into the matter, and see for yourself: prophets do Mt 16:14+ not come out of Galilee.'

The adulterous woman^a

They all went home, 8 and Jesus went to the Mount of Olives. 53

At daybreak he appeared in the Temple again; and as all the people came 2
 Lk 21:37-38 to him, he sat down and began to teach them.

The scribes and Pharisees brought a woman along who had been caught 3
 Lk 7:37-50 committing adultery; and making her stand there in full view of everybody,
 Jb 31:11 they said to Jesus, 'Master, this woman was caught in the very act of committing 4
 Dn 13:22 adultery, •and Moses has ordered us in the Law to condemn women like this to 5
 Dt 22:22-24

- 6 death by stoning. What have you to say?' •They asked him this as a test, looking for something to use against him. But Jesus bent down and started writing on 7 the ground with his finger.^a •As they persisted with their question, he looked up and said, 'If there is one of you who has not sinned, let him be the first to 8 throw a stone at her'. •Then he bent down and wrote on the ground again.
 9 When they heard this they went away one by one, beginning with the eldest,
 10 until Jesus was left alone with the woman, who remained standing there. •He looked up and said, 'Woman, where are they? Has no one condemned you?'
 11 'No one, sir' she replied. 'Neither do I condemn you,' said Jesus 'go away, and don't sin any more.'

m. Var. 'Pharisees and chief priests', 'They and the chief priests', 'Chief priests and Pharisees'.

n. Christ, like God himself, must be sought while there is still time to find him. But the Jews will let his 'time' slip by and instead of coming to them, salvation will come to the pagans (the 'Greeks'). Cf. 12:20-21; 12:32 +; 19:37 +.

o. The day, the 7th or perhaps the 8th, celebrating the end of the festival.

p. Om. 'to me'. Christ's invitation resembles that of divine Wisdom, cf. 6:35 +.

q. From Jesus himself, according to the oldest tradition, though another has joined 'the man who believes in me' with what follows, making the 'streams' flow from the believer.

r. The liturgy of the feast of Tabernacles, which formed the background of these words, included prayers for rain, rites which commemorated the Mosaic water-miracle, Ex 17:1-7; cf. 1 Co 10:4, and readings from biblical passages foretelling life-giving water for Zion, Zc 14:8; Ezk 47:1f. Cf. Jn 4:1 +.

s. Var. 'the Spirit had not yet been given'.

t. Add. 'where David was', 'of David', or 'where he was'. Only Christ's intimates knew that he had been born in Bethlehem.

u. The author of this passage, 7:53-8:11, is not John: it is omitted by the oldest witnesses (MSS, versions, Fathers) and found elsewhere in others; moreover, its style is that of the Synoptics and the author was possibly Luke, cf. Lk 21:38 +. Nevertheless, the passage was accepted in the canon and there are no grounds for regarding it as unhistorical.

- 8 a. The significance of the gesture is doubtful.

b. The development in the N.T. of the light-darkness theme can be traced fairly clearly along three main lines: 1. Just as the sun lights man on his way, so anything that shows him his way to God is 'light': of old it was the Law, the Wisdom and Word of God,

Qo 2:13; Pr 4:18-19; 6:23; Ps 119:105; cf. Rm 2:19; now it is Christ, Jn 1:9; 9:1-39; 12:35; 1 Jn 2:8-11; cf. 2 Co 4:6, who is compared with the bright cloud that led the Israelites, Jn 8:12; cf. Ex 13:21f; Ws 18:3f; it is also his followers from whom the light of God's own perfections shines on men, Mt 5:14-16; Lk 8:16; Rv 21:24. 2. Light is symbolic of life, contentment, and joy, as darkness is of death, unhappiness, and misery, Jb 30:26; Is 45:7; cf. Ps 17:15 +; hence, enslavement is darkness, the deliverance and salvation of the messianic age is light, Is 8:22-9:1; Mt 4:16; Lk 1:79; Rm 13:11-12. This light shines even on the pagan nations, Lk 2:32; Ac 13:47, through Christ who is the Light, Jn (cf. texts just quoted); Ep 5:14; it is at its brightest in the kingdom of heaven, Mt 8:12; 22:13; 25:30; Rv 22:5; cf. 21:3-4. 3. The 'light-darkness' contrast came to be used for the mutually hostile worlds of Good and Evil (cf. the Essene texts of Qumran). Thus in the N.T. there are two 'empires', Christ the lord of one, Satan of the other, 2 Co 6:14-15; Col 1:12-13; Ac 26:18; 1 P 2:9, each striving for the mastery, Lk 22:53; Jn 13:29-30. Men are either 'sons of light' or 'sons of darkness', Lk 16:8; 1 Th 5:5; Ep 5:7-8; Jn 12:36, according as their life is ruled by the light (Christ) or by darkness (Satan), 1 Th 5:4f; 1 Jn 1:6-7; 2:9-10, and what they do shows which they are, Rm 13:12-14; Ep 5:8-11. The coming of the Light makes clear this distinction ('judgement') of man from man, because this coming forces everyone to declare himself either for or against, Jn 3:19-21f; 7:7; 9:39; 12:46; cf. Ep 5:12-13. But one day all will be well, and one day the darkness will yield to the light, Jn 1:5; 1 Jn 2:8; Rm 13:12.

c. It is enough for the Son to be his own witness since he alone knows the mystery of his heavenly origin, cf. Mt 11:27p.

d. The Jews judge by what they see: a man like themselves; 'in that flesh they fail to see the glory of God's Son shining' (St Augustine).

e. In the semitic sense of the word, i. e. 'condemn'.

- but if I judge, 16
 my judgement will be sound,
 because I am not alone:
 the one who sent me is with me;
 and in your Law it is written 17
 that the testimony of two witnesses is valid.
 I may be testifying on my own behalf, 18
 but the Father who sent me is my witness too.'
- They asked him, 'Where is your Father?' Jesus answered: 19
 'You do not know me, nor do you know my Father;
 if you did know me, you would know my Father as well'.
- He spoke these words in the Treasury, while teaching in the Temple. No one 20 arrested him, because his time had not yet come.

The unbelieving Jews warned

- Again he said to them: 21
 'I am going away; you will look for me
 and you will die in your sin.^f
 Where I am going, you cannot come.'
- The Jews said to one another, 'Will he kill himself? Is that what he means by 22 saying, "Where I am going, you cannot come"?' •Jesus went on: 23
 'You are from below;
 I am from above.
 You are of this world;
 I am not of this world.
 I have told you already: You will die in your sins. 24
 Yes, if you do not believe that I am He,^g
 you will die in your sins.'
- So they said to him, 'Who are you?' Jesus answered: 25
 'What I have told you from the outset.^h
 About you I have much to say 26
 and much to condemn;
 but the one who sent me is truthful,
 and what I have learnt from him
 I declare to the world.'

They failed to understand that he was talking to them about the Father. 27
 So Jesus said: 28

- 'When you have lifted up the Son of Man, then you will know that I am Heⁱ
 and that I do nothing of myself:
 what the Father has taught me
 is what I preach;
 he who sent me is with me, 29
 and has not left me to myself,
 for I always do what pleases him'.
- As he was saying this, many came to believe in him. 30

Jesus and Abraham

8 f. By rejecting Jesus, the Jews are heading for irremediable loss; they are sinning against the truth, vv. 40,45f. It is the sin against the Spirit, Mt 12:31p. Cf. Jn 7:34+.

g. 'I Am' or 'I am He' is the divine name revealed to Moses, Ex 3:14+; it means that the God of Israel is unique, the true God, Dt 32:39. When Jesus appropriates this name, he is claiming to be the one incomparable saviour, the goal of Israel's faith and hope. Cf. Jn 8:28,58; 13:19 and also 6:35; 18:5,8.

h. A very obscure text; it is variously rendered 'Why, in the first place, am I speaking to you?'; 'Why should I speak to you at all?'; 'What I have been telling you from the beginning'; 'Precisely what I am telling you'. Our translation resembles this last but preserves the idea of temporal priority which leads up to the following 'then' of v. 28, thus: as it is, the Jews have the opportunity of knowing Christ from his words; afterwards, when they know him as one 'lifted up' (12:32+), it will be too late. The Vulg. translation ('I am) the Beginning who speak to you' is grammatically impossible.

i. In the O.T. the formula 'you shall know that I am', or 'that I am Yahweh', is a declaration of God's power, cf. 8:24+, or else heralds some notable intervention of God in history, cf. Ex 10:2; Ezk 6:7, 10,13f, etc; Is 43:10 (strikingly like John). This verse foretells the glorification of Jesus through his 'lifting up' on the cross, Jn 12:32+, which is to be the reply to the Jews' question (v. 25) but will be also the condemnation of their unbelief. Cf. 19:37; Rv 1:7; Mt 26:64p; 1 Co 2:8.

j. Add. 'of sin'.

k. Var. 'If you are Abraham's children, do as Abraham did'. Unlike Isaac, the Jews are not 'children' of Abraham because they do not believe; they are merely of his 'race' (like the bondwoman's son, Ishmael, who was cast out, cf. vv. 34-35). On this, cf. Ga 4:30f+.

l. The prophets call religious infidelity 'prostitution', cf. Ho 1:2+; here, therefore, the Jews are objecting that they have been faithful to God's covenant.

m. Because they have the devil for master, and he is hostile to the truth. Cf. 18:37.

it is because you are not God's children.'

4:9+ The Jews replied, 'Are we not right in saying that you are a Samaritan and 48 7:20+ possessed by a devil?' Jesus answered:

'I am not possessed;
no, I honour my Father,
but you want to dishonour me. 49
7:18 Not that I care for my own glory, there is someone who takes care of that and is the judge of it. 50
3:11+ I tell you most solemnly,
5:25-28;
11:25 whoever keeps my word

7:20+ The Jews said, 'Now we know for certain that you are possessed. Abraham 52 is dead, and the prophets are dead, and yet you say, "Whoever keeps my word 4:12 will never know the taste of death". •Are you greater than our father Abraham, 53 who is dead? The prophets are dead too. Who are you claiming to be?' •Jesus 54 answered:

'If I were to seek my own glory
that would be no glory at all;
my glory is conferred by the Father,
by the one of whom you say, "He is our God"
although you do not know him. 55
7:29 But I know him,
and if I were to say: I do not know him,
I should be a liar, as you are liars yourselves.
But I do know him, and I faithfully keep his word.
Your father Abraham rejoiced to think that he would see my Day;^q

he saw it and was glad.'^r

The Jews then said, 'You are not fifty yet, and you have seen Abraham!' 57
Jesus replied: 58

'I tell you most solemnly,
before Abraham ever was,
I Am'.

Is 42:7 The cure of the man born blind

9 As he went along, he saw a man who had been blind from birth. •His disciples ¹/₂ asked him, 'Rabbi, who sinned, this man or his parents, for him to have been

- 3 born blind?' •'Neither he nor his parents sinned,' Jesus answered 'he was born blind so that the works of God^a might be displayed in him. 5:14+ Lk 13:2
- 4 'As long as the day lasts
I must^b carry out the work of the one who sent me;
the night will soon be here when no one can work.'^c 11:9-10; 12:35-36 4:34; 5:16
- 5 As long as I am in the world
I am the light of the world.'^d 8:12+; 9:3f
- 6 Having said this, he spat on the ground, made a paste with the spittle, put 7 this over the eyes of the blind man, •and said to him, 'Go and wash in the Pool of Siloam' (a name that means 'sent'). So the blind man went off and washed himself, and came away with his sight restored. 2 K 5:10 Is 8:6
- 8 His neighbours and people who earlier had seen him begging said, 'Isn't 9 this the man who used to sit and beg?' •Some said, 'Yes, it is the same one'. Others said, 'No, he only looks like him'. The man himself said, 'I am the man'.
10 So they said to him, 'Then how do your eyes come to be open?' •'The man called Jesus' he answered 'made a paste, daubed my eyes with it and said to me, "Go 11 and wash at Siloam"; so I went, and when I washed I could see.' •They asked, 'Where is he?' 'I don't know' he answered.
- 13 They brought the man who had been blind to the Pharisees. •It had been a 14 sabbath day when Jesus made the paste^f and opened the man's eyes, •so when the Pharisees asked him how he had come to see, he said, 'He put a paste on 15 my eyes, and I washed, and I can see'. •Then some of the Pharisees said, 'This man cannot be from God: he does not keep the sabbath'. Others said, 'How 16 could a sinner produce signs like this?' And there was disagreement among them. 3:2
- 17 So they spoke to the blind man again, 'What have you to say about him yourself, now that he has opened your eyes?' 'He is a prophet' replied the man. Mt 16:14+
- 18 However, the Jews would not believe that the man had been blind and had 19 gained his sight,^g without first sending for his parents and •asking them, 'Is this man really your son who you say was born blind? If so, how is it that he is now 20 able to see?' •His parents answered, 'We know he is our son and we know he 21 was born blind, •but we don't know how it is that he can see now, or who 22 opened his eyes.^h He is old enough: let him speak for himself.' •His parents spoke like this out of fear of the Jews, who had already agreed to expel from the 23 synagogue anyone who should acknowledge Jesus as the Christ. •This was why his parents said, 'He is old enough; ask him'. 7:13 12:42
- 24 So the Jews again sent for the man and said to him, 'Give glory to God!ⁱ
25 For our part, we know that this man is a sinner.' •The man answered, 'I don't 26 know if he is a sinner; I only know that I was blind and now I can see'. •They 27 said to him, 'What did he do to you? How did he open your eyes?' •He replied, 'I have told you once and you wouldn't listen. Why do you want to hear it all 28 again? Do you want to become his disciples too?' •At this they hurled abuse 29 at him: 'You can be his disciple,' they said 'we are disciples of Moses: •we

n. Var. 'he has no footing in the truth'.

o. Or 'father of the liar'.

p. I.e. of betraying the commission entrusted to him by God.

q. I.e. Christ's coming. Another example of an expression reserved for God in the O.T. (the 'day of Yahweh', cf. Am 5:18+) but adopted for himself by Christ.

r. Abraham saw Christ's 'day' (as Isaiah 'saw his glory', Jn 12:41), but 'from a distance', cf. Heb 11:13; Nb 24:17, because he saw it in the birth of the promised Isaac (at which Abraham 'laughed', Gn 17:17+) which was an event prophetic of Christ. Jesus claims to be the ultimate fulfilment of this promise made to Abraham; he is Isaac according to the spirit.

s. The claim of Jesus to live on the divine plane (v. 58) is, for the Jews, blasphemy, for which the penalty is stoning, Lv 24:16.

e. The water drawn from here during the feast of Tabernacles symbolised the blessings of the messianic age. Henceforth, the source of these blessings is Jesus himself. 'The envoy', or 'the one sent', is one of Jn's favourite names for Christ, cf. 3:17,34; 5:36, etc.

know that God spoke to Moses, but as for this man, we don't know where he comes from'. •The man replied, 'Now here is an astonishing thing! He has opened my eyes, and you don't know where he comes from! •We know that God doesn't listen to sinners, but God does listen to men who are devout and do his will. •Ever since the world began it is unheard of for anyone to open the eyes of a man who was born blind; if this man were not from God, he couldn't do a thing.' •'Are you trying to teach us,' they replied 'and you a sinner through and through, since you were born!' And they drove him away.

Jesus heard they had driven him away, and when he found him he said to him, 'Do you believe in the Son of Man?' •'Sir,' the man replied 'tell me who he is so that I may believe in him.' •Jesus said, 'You are looking at him; he is speaking to you'. •* The man said, 'Lord, I believe', and worshipped him.

Jesus said:

'It is for judgement
that I have come into this world, so that those without sight may see and those with sight turn blind'.

Hearing this, some Pharisees who were present said to him, 'We are not blind, surely?' •Jesus replied:

'Blind? If you were,
you would not be guilty,
but since you say, "We see",
your guilt remains.

The good shepherd

10 'I tell you most solemnly, anyone who does not enter the sheepfold through the gate, but gets in some other way is a thief and a brigand. The one who enters through the gate is the shepherd of the flock; •the gatekeeper lets him in, the sheep hear his voice, one by one^a he calls his own sheep and leads them out. •When he has brought out his flock, he goes ahead of them, and the sheep follow because they know his voice. •They never follow a stranger but run away from him: they do not recognise the voice of strangers.'

Jesus told them^b this parable but they failed to understand what he meant by telling it to them.

So Jesus spoke to them again:

'I tell you most solemnly,
I am the gate of the sheepfold.^c
All others who have come^d are thieves and brigands;
but the sheep took no notice of them.

I am the gate.

Anyone who enters through me will be safe:
he will go freely in and out and be sure of finding pasture.

The thief comes only to steal and kill and destroy.

I have come
so that they may have life^e and have it to the full.

I am the good shepherd:^f
the good shepherd is one who lays down his life for his sheep.
The hired man, since he is not the shepherd and the sheep do not belong to him,

- abandons the sheep and runs away
as soon as he sees a wolf coming,
and then the wolf attacks and scatters the sheep;
13 this is because he is only a hired man
and has no concern for the sheep.
14 I am the good shepherd;
I know my own
and my own know me,^g 15 just as the Father knows me and I know the Father;
and I lay down my life for my sheep.
16 And there are other sheep I have
that are not of this fold, and these I have to lead as well.^h
They too will listen to my voice, and there will be only one flock,ⁱ
and one shepherd.
17 The Father loves me, because I lay down my life
in order to take it up again.
18 No one takes it from me;
I lay it down of my own free will,^j
and as it is in my power to lay it down, so it is in my power to take it up again;
and this is the command I have been given by my Father.^j
- 19 These words caused disagreement^k among the Jews. •Many said, 'He is 3:11+
20 possessed, he is raving; why bother to listen to him?' •Others said, 'These are 7:20 21 not the words of a man possessed by a devil: could a devil open the eyes of the 9:30-32 blind?'

VI. THE FEAST OF DEDICATION

Jesus claims to be the Son of God

- 22 It was the time when the feast of Dedication was being celebrated in Jerusalem. 1 M 4:36+
23 It was winter, •and Jesus was in the Temple walking up and down in the Portico Ac 3:11+
24 of Solomon. •The Jews gathered round him and said, 'How much longer are Lk 22:67
25 you going to keep us in suspense? If you are the Christ, tell us plainly.' •Jesus 8:25 replied:

j. There are many points of resemblance between ch. 9 and 3:1-21, and it is probable that to the evangelist's mind the cure of the man born blind is a symbol of the new birth through water and the Spirit, 3:3-7.

k. Om. all v. 38 and first two words of v. 39.

l. The complacent who trust to their own 'light', cf. vv. 24, 29, 34, as opposed to the humble, typified by the blind man. Cf. Dt 29:3; Is 6:9f; Jr 5:21; Ezk 12:2.

m. I.e. if you knew you were blind, as blind men do.

10 a. Or possibly 'each by its name'.

b. I.e. to the Pharisees, wilfully blind, 9:40. They fail to realise that the parable refers to them.

c. The gate that gives access to the sheep. Only those who 'go in' by Jesus have authority to guide the flock, 21:15-17.

d. Add. 'before me'. The reference is probably to the Pharisees, cf. Mt 23:1-36; Lk 11:39-52 and Mt 9:36; Mk 6:34.

e. Life eternal. Jesus gives it, 3:16, 36; 5:40; 6:33, 35, 48, 51; 14:6; 20:31, with abounding generosity, cf. Rv 7:17; Mt 25:29; Lk 6:38.

f. God, himself the shepherd of his people, was to choose a shepherd for them in the messianic age, cf. Ezk 34:1+. Christ's assertion that he is the good shepherd is a claim to messiahship.

g. In biblical language, cf. Ho 2:22+, 'knowledge' is not merely the conclusion of an intellectual process, but the fruit of an 'experience', a personal contact (cf. Jn 10:14-15 and 14:20; 17:21-22; cf. 14:17; 17:3; 2 Jn 1-2); when it matures, it is love, cf. Ho 6:6+ and 1 Jn 1:3+.

h. Not to take them into the Jewish fold but to gather them into the flock that Jesus 'leads' to eternal life.

i. Var. 'one fold'.

j. Jesus has life in himself, 3:35+, and no one can rob him of it, 7:30, 44; 8:20; 10:39; he surrenders it of his own will, 10:18; 14:30; 19:11; hence his perfect control and majestic calm in the face of death, 12:27; 13:1-3; 17:19; 18:4-6; 19:28.

k. Add. 'again'.

l. Not, as hitherto, in the enigmatic language of parable, cf. v. 6; 16:25, 29. More urgently than before, 2:18; 5:16; 6:30; 8:25, the Jews press Jesus to say if he is the Messiah. In the Synoptics, the question is put by the high priest before the Passion, Mt 26:63p.

- The Jews fetched stones to stone him, •so Jesus said to them, 'I have done many good works for you to see, works from my Father; for which of these are you stoning me?' •The Jews answered him, 'We are not stoning you for doing a good work but for blasphemy: you are only a man and you claim to be God'.
Jesus answered:
- 'Is it not written in your Law:
I said, you are gods?'
So the Law uses the word gods
of those to whom the word of God was addressed, and scripture cannot be rejected.
Yet you say to someone the Father has consecrated and sent

"You are blaspheming", because he says, "I am the Son of God".

- They wanted^r to arrest him then, but he eluded them.

Jesus withdraws to the other side of the Jordan

He went back again to the far side of the Jordan to stay in the district where John had once been baptising. •Many people who came to him there said, 'John gave no signs, but all he said about this man was true'; •and many of them believed in him.

The resurrection of Lazarus

11 There was a man named Lazarus who lived in the village of Bethany with the two sisters, Mary and Martha, and he was ill.—•It was the same Mary, the sister of the sick man Lazarus, who anointed the Lord with ointment and wiped his feet with her hair.^a •The sisters sent this message to Jesus, 'Lord, the man you love is ill'. •On receiving the message, Jesus said, 'This sickness will end not in death but in God's glory and through it the Son of God will be glorified'.^b

Jesus loved Martha and her sister and Lazarus, •yet when he heard that Lazarus was ill he stayed where he was for two more days •before saying to the disciples, 'Let us go to Judaea'.^c •The disciples said, 'Rabbi, it is not long since the Jews wanted to stone you; are you going back again?' •Jesus replied:

'Are there not twelve hours in the day?
A man can walk in the daytime without stumbling

- because he has the light of this world to see by;
 10 but if he walks at night he stumbles, because there is no light to guide him.'
- 11 He said that and then added, 'Our friend Lazarus is resting, I am going to 12 wake him'. •The disciples said to him, 'Lord, if he is able to rest he is sure to get 2:19+
 13 better'. •The phrase Jesus used referred to the death of Lazarus, but they thought Mt 9:24p 14 that by 'rest' he meant 'sleep', so •Jesus put it plainly, 'Lazarus is dead; •and 15 for your sake I am glad I was not there because now you will believe.^d But let 2:11+
 16 us go to him.' •Then Thomas—known as the Twin—said to the other disciples, 14:5; 20:
 'Let us go too, and die with him'. 24-29
- 17 On arriving, Jesus found that Lazarus had been in the tomb for four days Mk 10:32
 18 already. •Bethany is only about two miles from Jerusalem, •and many Jews had 11:45; 12:9-19 come to Martha and Mary to sympathise with them over their brother. •When 11,17-19
 20 Martha heard that Jesus had come she went to meet him. Mary remained sitting Lk 10:39f
 21 in the house. •Martha said to Jesus, 'If you had been here,^e my brother would 11:32
 22 not have died, •but I know that, even now, whatever you ask of God, he will Mk 11:24p
 23 grant you'.^f •'Your brother' said Jesus to her 'will rise again.' •Martha said, 2:19+ 24 'I know he will rise again at the resurrection on the last day'. •Jesus said:
- 'I am the resurrection.^g
 If anyone believes in me, even though he dies he will live,^h 26 and whoever lives and believes in me will never die.
 Do you believe this?'
- 27 'Yes, Lord,' she said 'I believe that you are the Christ, the Son of God, the one 10:34+ who was to come into this world.' 1:9,10+
- 28 When she had said this, she went and called her sister Mary, saying in a low 29 voice, 'The Master is here and wants to see you'. •Hearing this, Mary got up 30 quickly and went to him. •Jesus had not yet come into the village; he was still 31 at the place where Martha had met him. •When the Jews who were in the house sympathising with Mary saw her get up so quickly and go out, they followed her, thinking that she was going to the tomb to weep there.
- 32 Mary went to Jesus, and as soon as she saw him she threw herself at his 33 feet, saying, 'Lord, if you had been here, my brother would not have died'. •At 11:21
 the sight of her tears, and those of the Jews who followed her, Jesus said in great 11:38; 13:21
 34 distress, with a sigh that came straight from the heart, 'Where have you put 12:27
 35 him?' They said, 'Lord, come and see'. •Jesus wept; •and the Jews said, 'See 36 how much he loved him!' •But there were some who remarked, 'He opened the 37 eyes of the blind man, could he not have prevented this man's death?' •Still
- m. Christ's previous statements had made it sufficiently clear that he spoke as God's envoy, cf. 2:19; 5:17,39; 6:32f; 8:24,28f,56f; 9:37.
- n. Faith in Jesus implies an inner sympathy with him: man must be 'from above', 8:23, 'of God', 8:47, 'of the truth', 18:37, of his flock, 10:14. Faith presupposes a mind open to truth, 3:17-21. Cf. Ac 13:48+; Rm 8:29f.
- o. Var. 'As for my Father, that which he has given me is greater than all'.
- p. Var. 'Steal them'.
- q. The Son's power is not other than the Father's. The context shows that this is the primary meaning, but the statement is deliberately undefined and hints at a more comprehensive and a profounder unity. The Jews do not miss the implication; they sense a claim to godhead, v. 33. Cf. 1:1; 8:24,29; 10:38; 14:9-10; 17:11,21 and 2:11+.
- r. The words were addressed to magistrates whose function made them, in a sense, 'gods' because 'judgement is God's', Dt 1:17; 19:17; Ex 21:6; Ps 58. Christ's argument is a rabbinic a fortiori, the conclusion being that blasphemy is a surprising charge to bring when it is God's consecrated envoy who calls himself Son of God. On this title, 'Son of God', v. 36, cf. 5:25; 11:4,27; 20:17,31. Christ's fate is henceforth to turn, cf. 19:7. See Mt 4:3+.
- s. Add. 'again'.
- 11 a. It is unlikely that this is 'the woman who was a sinner' of Lk 7:37.
- b. A double meaning here: Jesus will be glorified by the miracle itself, cf. 1:14+, but the miracle will bring about his death, 11:46-54, by which also he will be glorified, 12:32+.
- c. Add. 'again'.
- d. Had Lazarus not died, there would have been no miracle to confirm their faith.
- e. Add. 'Lord'.
- f. Martha has faith in Jesus but she stops short as if about to ask an impossibility.
- g. Add. 'and the life'.
- h. The man of faith has conquered death once and for all; the resurrection of Lazarus is the sign of this victory, cf. 3:11+.

11:33 sighing, Jesus reached the tomb: it was a cave with a stone to close the opening. Jesus said, 'Take the stone away'. Martha^a said to him, 'Lord, by now he will 39 smell; this is the fourth day'. Jesus replied, 'Have I not told you that if you 40 believe you will see the glory of God?' So they took away the stone. Then 41 Jesus lifted up his eyes^d and said:

'Father, I thank you for hearing my prayer.

I knew indeed that you always hear me,

but I speak

for the sake of all these who stand round me, so that they may believe it was you who sent me.'

5:27-29 When he had said this, he cried in a loud voice, 'Lazarus, here! Come out!' 43

19:40; 20:5-7 The dead man came out, his feet and hands bound with bands of stuff and a 44 cloth round his face. Jesus said to them, 'Unbind him, let him go free'.

The Jewish leaders decide on the death of Jesus

11:19; 12:10 Many of the Jews who had come to visit Mary and had seen what he did 45 believed in him, but some of them went to tell the Pharisees what Jesus had 46 done. Then the chief priests and Pharisees called a meeting. 'Here is this man 47 working all these signs' they said 'and what action are we taking? If we let 48 him go on in this way everybody will believe in him, and the Romans will come and destroy the Holy Place^e and our nation.' One of them, Caiaphas, the 49 high priest that year, said, 'You don't seem to have grasped the situation at all; you fail to see that it is better^f for one man to die for the people, than for the 50 whole nation to be destroyed'. He did not speak in his own person, it was 51 high priest^g that he made this prophecy that Jesus was to die for the nation— and not for the nation only, but to gather together in unity the scattered children 52 of God. From that day they were determined^h to kill him. So Jesus no longer 53 went about openly among the Jews, but left the district for a town called 54 Ephraim, in the country bordering on the desert, and stayed there with his disciples.

VII. THE LAST PASSOVER

A. BEFORE THE PASSION

The Passover draws near

2:13; 6:4 The Jewish Passover drew near,^a and many of the country people who had 55 gone up to Jerusalem^b to purify themselves looked out for Jesus, saying to one 56 another as they stood about in the Temple, 'What do you think? Will he come to the festival or not?' The chief priests and Pharisees had by now given their 57 orders: anyone who knew where he was must inform them so that they could arrest him.

The anointing at Bethany

12 Six days before the Passover,^c Jesus went to Bethany, where Lazarus 1 was, whom he had raised from the dead. They gave a dinner for him 2 there; Martha waited on them and Lazarus was among those at table. Mary 3 brought in a pound of very costly ointment, pure nard, and with it anointed the feet of Jesus, wiping them with her hair; the house was full of the scent of the ointment. Then Judas Iscariot—one of his disciples, the man who was to betray 4 him—said, 'Why wasn't this ointment sold for three hundred denarii, and the 5 money given to the poor?' He said this, not because he cared about the poor, 6 but because he was a thief; he was in charge of the common fund and used to help himself to the contributions. So Jesus said, 'Leave her alone; she had to 7

8 keep this scent for the day of my burial.^b • You have the poor with you always, you will not always have me.^c

9 Meanwhile a large number of Jews heard that he was there and came not only on account of Jesus but also to see Lazarus whom he had raised from the dead. • Then the chief priests decided to kill Lazarus as well, • since it was on his account that many of the Jews were leaving them and believing in Jesus.

The Messiah enters Jerusalem

12 The next day the crowds who had come up for the festival heard that Jesus was on his way to Jerusalem. • They took branches of palm and went out to meet him, shouting, 'Hosanna! Blessings on the King of Israel,^e who comes in the name of the Lord.' • Jesus found a young donkey and mounted it—as scripture says: • Do not be afraid, daughter of Zion; see, your king is coming, mounted on the colt of a donkey. • At the time his disciples did not understand this, but later, after Jesus had been glorified, they remembered that this had been written about him and that this was in fact how they had received him. • All who had been with him when he called Lazarus out of the tomb and raised him from the dead were telling how they had witnessed it; • it was because of this, too, that the crowd came out to meet him: they had heard that he had given this sign. 19 Then the Pharisees said to one another, 'You see, there is nothing you can do; look, the whole world is running after him!'

Jesus foretells his death and subsequent glorification

20 Among those who went up to worship at the festival were some Greeks.^a 21 These approached Philip, who came from Bethsaida in Galilee, and put this request to him, 'Sir, we should like to see Jesus'. • Philip went to tell Andrew, and Andrew and Philip together went to tell Jesus. 23 Jesus replied to them:

'Now the hour has come for the Son of Man to be glorified. I tell you, most solemnly, unless a wheat grain falls on the ground and dies, it remains only a single grain; but if it dies, it yields a rich harvest. Anyone who loves his life loses it; anyone who hates his life in this world will keep it for the eternal life. If a man serves me, he must follow me, wherever I am,^e my servant will be there too. If anyone serves me, my Father will honour him. Now my soul is troubled.'

i. Add. 'the dead man's sister'.

j. Add. 'upwards', 'to heaven', 'upwards to heaven'.

k. Lit. 'our Place'; Jerusalem, the Holy Land, or more probably the holiest of all places, the Temple.

l. Add. 'for you', or 'for us'.

m. Add. 'for that year'.

n. Caiaphas means that Jesus must be executed to save the nation from political extinction; the higher, prophetic sense is that the death of Jesus is necessary for the salvation of the world. Cf. 1:29+.

o. Var. 'they plotted'.

p. Jn repeatedly emphasises the connection between the Passover and Christ's death, 13:1; 18:28; 19:14,42.

q. Add. 'before the Passover'.

12 a. This last week of Christ's life is as carefully punctuated as the first, 12:12; 13:1; 18:28; 19:31; cf. 2:1+. Each of the two weeks culminates in the manifestation of Christ's glory, but the time for 'signs' (cf. Cana, 2:4,11) is now over: 'the hour has come for the Son of Man to be glorified', 12:23; 13:31f; 17:1,5.

b. Christ sees Mary's act as a gesture of respect offered to his dead body before the time; it is a symbol of his actual burial, 19:38f.

e. In the glory of the Father, cf. 14:3; 17:24.

f. This episode and Gethsemane have many details in common: the anguish as the 'hour' draws near, the appeal to the Father's pity, the acceptance of death, the comfort from heaven (cf. Lk). But we should note the dissimilarities: in Jn, Christ's prayer for pity remains unuttered; nor does he 'fall to the

A voice came from heaven, 'I have glorified it, and I will glorify it again'.

People standing by, who heard this, said it was a clap of thunder; others said, 'It was an angel speaking to him'. •Jesus answered, 'It was not for my sake that this voice came, but for yours.'^h

'Now sentence is being passed on this world;

now the prince of this world is to be overthrown.'⁴

And when I am lifted up from the earth,^j

I shall draw all men^k to myself.'ⁱ

By these words he indicated the kind of death he would die. •The crowd answered, 'The Law has taught us that the Christ will remain for ever. How can you say, "The Son of Man must be lifted up"? Who is this Son of Man?' •Jesus then said:

'The light will be with you only a little longer now.

Walk^m while you have the light,

or the dark will overtake you;

he who walks in the dark does not know where he is going.

While you still have the light,

believe in the light

and you will become sons of light.'

Having said this, Jesus left them and kept himself hidden.

Conclusion: the unbelief of the Jews

Though they had been present when he gave so many signs, they did not believe in him; •this was to fulfil the words of the prophet Isaiah: Lord, who could believe what we have heard said, and to whom has the power of the Lord been revealed? •Indeed, they were unable to believe because, as Isaiah says again: •He has blinded their eyes, he has hardened their heart, for fear they should see with their eyes and understand with their heart, and turn to me for healing.

Isaiah said this when he saw his glory,ⁿ and his words referred to Jesus.

And yet there were many who did believe in him, even among the leading men, but they did not admit it, through fear of the Pharisees and fear of being expelled from the synagogue: •they put honour from men before the honour that comes from God.

Jesus declared publicly:

'Whoever believes in me

believes not in me

but in the one who sent me,

and whoever sees me,

sees the one who sent me.

I, the light, have come into the world,

so that whoever believes in me

need not stay in the dark any more.

If anyone hears my words and does not keep them faithfully,

it is not I who shall condemn him,

since I have come not to condemn the world,

but to save the world:

he who rejects me and refuses my words

has his judge already:

the word itself that I have spoken

- will be his judge on the last day. 8:37,47
 49 For what I have spoken does not come from myself;
 no, what I was to say, what I had to speak,
 was commanded by the Father who sent me,
 50 and I know that his commands mean eternal life. 1:1+
 And therefore what the Father has told me 3:11+
 is what I speak.'

B. THE LAST SUPPER

Jesus washes his disciples' feet

- 1 13 It was before the festival of the Passover, and Jesus knew that the hour Mt 26:17+ had come for him to pass from this world to the Father.^a He had always 1:48+ loved^b those who were his in the world, but now he showed how perfect his 10:18+;
 love was.^c 1:10+;
 2 They were at supper,^d and the devil had already put it into the mind^e of 2:4+
 3 Judas Iscariot son of Simon, to betray him. •Jesus knew that the Father had 14:30 put everything into his hands, and that he had come from God and was returning Mt 26:20p
 4 to God, •and he got up from table, removed his outer garment and, taking a Lk 22:3 5 towel, wrapped it round his waist; •he then poured water into a basin and 1:1+;
 began to wash the disciples' feet^f and to wipe them with the towel he was wearing. 3:35+
 6 He came to Simon Peter, who said to him, 'Lord, are you going to wash my Mt 3:13-14
 7 feet?' •Jesus answered, 'At the moment you do not know what I am doing, but 12:46+
 8 later you will understand'. •'Never!' said Peter 'You shall never wash my feet.'
 Jesus replied, 'If I do not wash you, you can have nothing in common with me'.^g
 9 'Then, Lord,' said Simon Peter 'not only my feet, but my hands and my head 2:19+
 10 as well!' •Jesus said, 'No one who has taken a bath needs washing,^h he is clean 15:3
 11 all over.ⁱ You too are clean,^j though not all of you are'.^k •He knew who was 1:48+ going to betray him, that was why he said, 'though not all of you are'.
 12 When he had washed their feet and put on his clothes again he went back 13 to the table. 'Do you understand' he said 'what I have done to you? •You call ground' (Mt, Mk) or 'kneel' (Lk). Cf. Jn 18:4-6; 10:18+.

g. Var. 'your Son'. The Father's 'name' is his person. Jesus worked for the Father's glory; his death, now freely offered, is the completion of that work because it shows how great is the Father's love for men, 17:6+.

h. Christ's coming death is thus divinely and publicly sanctioned.

i. Var. 'cast out'. Satan (cf. 14:30; 16:11; 2 Co 4:4; Ep 2:2; 6:12) was lord of the world, 1 Jn 5:19; Christ's death breaks his dominion over men. Cf. Jn 3:35+ and Mt 8:29+; Lk 8:31+; Col 1:12-13.

j. Om. 'from the earth'. Allusion both to the 'lifting up' of Christ on the cross (v. 33) and to his 'lifting up' to heaven, 3:13,14; 8:28, cf. 6:62, on the day of his resurrection, 20:17+; the two events are two aspects of the same mystery, 13:1+. When Christ is raised to the Father's right hand in glory, 12:23; 17:5+, he will send the Spirit, 7:39, through whom his reign will spread over the world, 16:14; cf. 3:35+.

k. Var. 'every man' or 'all things'.

l. The crucified Jesus will be set before the eyes of the world as its saviour, cf. 19:37. This is the answer to the Greeks' request to 'see' Jesus, cf. 6:40+.

m. Jesus urges the Jews to believe in him before it is too late, cf. 7:34+.

n. 'when he saw'; var. 'because he saw'. Alluding to Isaiah's vision in the Temple, Is 6:1-4+. Jn interprets it as a prophetic vision of Christ's glory, cf. 8:56+.

13 a. According to a Jewish tradition the word 'Passover' (pesah; cf. Ex 12:11+) meant 'a passing, or crossing over', referring it to the crossing of the Red Sea, Ex 14, Christ (and we with him) will pass from this world, which is enslaved by sin, to the Father's company, the true Land of Promise. Cf. Jn 1:21+.

b. Here, for the first time, Jn clearly states that Christ's life and death are an expression of his love for his disciples. The impression given is one of a secret kept for these last moments, 13:34; 15:9,13; 17:23; 1 Jn 3:16; Ga 2:20; Rm 8:35; Ep 3:19; 5:2,25.

c. Lit. 'he loved them to the end', i.e. utterly.

d. Var. 'Supper was over'.

e. Var. 'the devil having already put in the (his?) heart that Judas Iscariot should betray him', or '...having already put in his heart (i.e. made up his mind) ...', or 'Satan having already entered into the heart of Judas in order that he might betray him'. Unseen forces are at work in Christ's Passion: the human agents are tools of the devil. Cf. 6:70f; 8:44; 12:31; 13:27; 16:11; Rv 12:4,17; 13:2; Lk 22:3; 1 Co 2:8.

f. The dress and duty are those of a slave, cf. 1 S 25: 41.

g. Lit. 'you have no share with me'; a semitic phrase: Peter is cutting himself off from his Lord and from all share in his ministry and in his glory, because he does not appreciate his Master's outlook.

h. Add. 'except for his feet'.

i. Peter has understood Christ's answer, v. 8, superficially, as if a new rite of purification were being instituted. Jesus replies that his sacrifice has already achieved this purification, cf. 15:2-3; 1 Jn 1:7; Heb 10:22. He explains the meaning of his action in vv. 12-15.

j. The same Greek word is used for 'clean' and 'pure'.

me Master and Lord, and rightly; so I am. •If I, then, the Lord and Master, 14 have washed your feet, you should wash each other's feet.* •I have given you 15 an example so that you may copy what I have done to you.

•I tell you most solemnly, 16
no servant is greater than his master,
no messenger is greater than the man who sent him.

•Now that you know this, happiness will be yours if you behave accordingly. 17
I am not speaking about all of you: I know the ones I have chosen; but what 18 scripture says must be fulfilled: Someone who shares my table rebels¹ against me.

•I tell you this now, before it happens, 19
so that when it does happen
you may believe that I am He.^m
I tell you most solemnly, 20
whoever welcomes the one I send welcomes me, and whoever welcomes me welcomes the one who sent me.⁷

The treachery of Judas foretold

Having said this, Jesus was troubled in spirit and declared, 'I tell you most 21 solemnly, one of you will betray me'. •The disciples looked at one another, 22 wondering which he meant. •The disciple Jesus loved was reclining next 23 to Jesus; •Simon Peter signed to him and said, 'Ask who it is he means', •so 24 leaning back on Jesus' breast he said, 'Who is it, Lord?' •'It is the one' replied 25 Jesus 'to whom I give the piece of bread' that I shall dip in the dish.' He dipped the piece of bread and gave it to Judas son of Simon Iscariot. •At that instant, 27 after Judas had taken the bread, Satan entered him. Jesus then said, 'What you are going to do, do quickly'. •None of the others at table understood the reason 28
he said this. •Since Judas had charge of the common fund, some of them thought 29
Jesus was telling him, 'Buy what we need for the festival', or telling him to give something to the poor. •As soon as Judas had taken the piece of bread he went 30 out. Night had fallen.

When he had gone Jesus said: 31

'Now^o has the Son of Man been glorified, and in him God has been glorified.
If God has been glorified in him,^p 32
God will in turn glorify him in himself,^q
and will glorify him very soon.

Farewell discourses

'My little children, 33
I shall not be with you much longer.
You will look for me,
and, as I told the Jews,^r
where I am going,
you cannot come.^s
I give you a new commandment:^t 34
love one another;
just as I have loved you,
you also must love one another.
By this love you have for one another, 35
everyone will know that you are my disciples.'

Simon Peter said, 'Lord, where are you going?' Jesus replied, 'Where I am 36 going you cannot follow me now; you will follow me later'.^u •Peter said to him,^v 37
'Why can't I follow you now? I will lay down my life for you.' •'Lay down your 38 life for me?" answered Jesus. 'I tell you most solemnly, before the cock crows you will have disowned me three times.

k. I.e. serve one another lovingly and humbly.

l. Lit. 'has lifted up his heel against me'.

m. Because it demonstrates Christ's superhuman knowledge and fulfils the scripture, Judas' betrayal and Christ's death will confirm the disciples' faith.

n. Lit. 'morsel'. This particular 'morsel' is not the Holy Eucharist; nevertheless, a comparison of 13:2,18 with 6:64,70 seems to show that there was some connection between the institution and Judas' act of treachery. Cf. Lk 22:21.

o. The Passion has already begun, since Judas has just gone out to do Satan's work: Jesus speaks of his victory as already won, cf. 16:33.

p. Om. 'If God has been glorified in him'.

q. 'himself' refers to God the Father who will glorify the Son of Man by taking him to himself in glory. Cf. 17:5,22,24.

r. Christ's 'departure' and his glorification are intimately connected. The separation will be, for the Jews, final, 8:21; for the disciples, only for a time, 14:2-3.

s. Except by dying, cf. v. 36; 21:19,22f.

t. The reference to Christ's 'departure', v. 33, (which leads up to the prophecy of Peter's denial, vv. 36-38) makes this command, vv. 34-35, a solemn legacy from Christ. Though enunciated in the Mosaic Law, this precept of love is 'new' because Jesus sets the standard so high by telling his followers to love one another as he himself loved them, and because love is to be the distinguishing mark of the 'new' era which the death of Jesus inaugurates and proclaims to the world.

u. A cryptic prophecy of Peter's martyrdom.

v. Add. 'Lord'.

14 a. The apostles are perturbed by the predictions of betrayal, of Christ's departure, and of Peter's denial. Jesus wants to strengthen their faith: this purpose pervades ch. 14.

b. Others translate 'otherwise I would have told you (where I am going)'.

c. This promise keeps the Church's hope alive. Cf. 1 Th 4:16f; 1 Co 4:5; 11:26; 16:22; Rv 22:17,2; 1 Jn 2:28.

d. Jesus is the Way: in him we have our access to the Father; he makes the Father 'known' to the world, 1:18; 12:45; 14:9; he is the Truth: he is the teacher and the personification of worship 'in spirit and truth' which alone pleases the Father, 4:23f; he is the Life: to know the Father, present in the Son, is eternal life, 17:3.

e. Var. 'If you had known me, you would have...'

f. When Philip asks for some marvellous manifestation of the Father, he is falling short of that faith by which alone the Father is seen to be in the Son and the Son in the Father.
